THE CHEESE BOARD

Result of the Regular Meeting Held Yesterday

9 3-8 the Prevailing Price—Board to Meet Again Next Week—Over Three Thousand Boxes Boarded

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board was held in the town council chamber Wednesday morning. The following buyers were in attendance—Messrs. Rollins, Bailey, Whitton, Wrighton, Cook, Fitzgerald and Kerr.

Before the bidding opened the President, Mr. Drummond, invited discussion of the advisability of changing the new rule of selling every week during July and August to the old system of selling twice a month. The buyers generally were in favour of selling under the old system of once every two weeks. To sell every week would place them at a great disadvantage, and the system, they concluded, would have a tendency to disorganize the Board. Some factories could not stand the expense of attending every week. The system of selling every week was, of course, inaugurated to overcome the hot weather.

The salesmen were pretty much divided on the matter of selling every week. It was decided, upon a vote, to sell what was on the board, adjourn for one week, and then sell the balance of the June cheese. After that there will be fortnightly sales until further notice.

THE FACTORIES.

The factories boarded as follows:

Keene	110
Warminster	60
Shearer	65

The market was opened by Mr. Whitton, who bid 9 cents, Mr. Wrighton bid 9 1-8c, Whitton 9 3-16c, Mr. Bailey 9 1-4c, Mr. Fitzgerald 9 5-16c, and Mr. Whitton 9 3-8c.

Mr. Whitton took Keene, Shearer, Westwood, Melrose Abbey and Bensfort, but Ormonde, Norwood, Shamrock and Percy refused.

Mr. Wrighton offered 9 3-8c, on the second bid. He carried off Warminster, Warsaw, Frazerville, Peterborough, East Emily, Myrtle and Central Smith.

At 9 3-8c, which appeared to be the favourite price, Mr. Rollins called North Smith, Maple Leaf, Oakdale, Daisy D., Pine Grove, Young's Point, North Dummer, Cedardale, Stony Lake, and South Burleigh.

Mr. Whitton bid 9 7-16c, and took Ormonde. Mr. Fitzgerald at 9 5-16c called Lakefield, Cavanville, Mt. Pleasant, Fleetwood, Buckhorn, all of which refused but Otonabee Union and Trewern accepted.

Mr. Cook, at 9 3-8c, called Oak Leaf, Brickley, Shamrock and Dartford. They accepted.

Mr. Bailey bid 9 5-16c, and tried to get Indian River and Fleetwood, but they refused. Norwood sold to Mr. Bailey at 9 3-8c, and Indian River sold likewise.

Buckhorn was added to Mr. Fitzgerald's selections at 9 5-16c. Missing Link sold to Mr. Wrighton at 9 5-16c. Apsley (40 boxes) sold to Mr. Rollins at 9 3-8c, Montreal inspection. Fleetwood sold to Mr. Fitzgerald at 9 5-16c. Cavanville sold to Mr. Wrighton at 9 5-16c. The Board then adjourned.

THE GIRL OF THE PEOPLE

good-byes, and took one last, long, yearning look at the old house as I and my luggage were driven away.

I left Lull at two o'clock in the afternoon. Three hours later I arrived at Waterloo Station. My thoughts had been so busy that the journey had not seemed long. Indeed, I had almost dreaded the end, because of the necessity for action it would entail; and besides, I had begun half to repent my rashness in flinging myself upon the world before I was absolutely certain that I could have my mother's protection. When she had been at a distance, I had looked upon her as a sure refuge. Roger had given me her address, and had said positively that she was to be found there. I was her daughter, and it had seemed natural that when the floods of disaster had swept me off my feet, I should try to grasp her hand.

Easel street, Commercial road, meant nothing definite to me. I vaguely thought of Peckham as a suburb, and I had some dim picture in my mind of a neat little ivy-draped brick house in a small garden, such as I had often seen in the village of Lull.

The London I had known best was the region of parks, big, splendid houses, and smart shops. I was not foolish enough to suppose that my mother, who had been described as poor, had her home in such a neighborhood as that, but as I was driven through street after street, even meaner and more squalid than the ones I had seen on the night I followed Lady Cope from the Lyceum Theater, I grew sad and amazed. Was it possible that, while all my life I had lived among beautiful things, the woman who had brought me into the world had been —here?

At last we turned into a narrow street, lined on either side with little gray houses, all exactly alike. It was as if a wall of dirty brick stretched along, with low doors and windows cut into it at intervals; for there was no separation between the houses.

Each hovel had a door of its own, with a window on the ground floor; and above, two more windows. On the broken pavement, or in the gutters, ragged children swarmed; dwarfish girls carrying big-headed, squalling babies almost as large as themselves; toddling boys, with red-rimmed eyes and grimy faces. The babies all seemed to be crying; their young nurses shrilly bidding them be still, or exhorting the boys who shouted over their games to come home at once if they did not wish various horrible consequences to befall them.

It was a dreadful street; the worst I had ever seen, and I wished that my driver would make haste in passing through. But, to my surprised alarm, he stopped, drawing up the cab at the pavement. "He is going to enquire the way," I thought. Yet no; he was clambering slowly off the box. I looked out. We were exactly in front of a door cut in the long gray wall of blackened brick. Over the door was a number—35. My heart gave a leap, and I almost called out a protest. It could not be true. Any place but this.

The driver opened the cab door. "Here you are, miss; 35 Easel street," he said, seeing that I sat still.

"Easel street, Commercial road. There ain't no other of the same name, miss. Shall I knock?"

"If you please," I meekly answered. "And—and don't take down the luggage yet. I'll wait and see if—if——" My voice died. I did not finish the sentence.

There was no bell on the door, which stood ajar. The cabman knocked loudly. From the two upper windows the frowsy heads of several children and a bold-looking young woman appeared. They stared with open-mouthed curiosity at me and the four smart new boxes heaped on the four-wheeler. I shrank back, and wound my fingers nervously together.

"What d'you want?" shrilly demanded the woman. "Miggits or Newlyn?"

I drew my breath in sharply. My mother's name! There was no mistake, then. The cabman turned questioningly to me, and I realised that I must answer. "I want Mrs. Newlyn," I reluctantly thrust out my head to explain.

"Owh!" returned the dweller on the upper floor. "I'm Miggits. Newlyn's the ground floor."

As my informant partially withdrew, a girl's face showed itself in the crack of the door; then the door was thrown wide open. She was about fifteen, with pale unwholesome skin, a pert nose, and an aggressive fringe of drab-colored hair. She fixed a pair of light blue eyes upon me, and slowly I descended from the cab, which seemed the only link left between me and familiar decencies of civilization.

"Is Mrs. Newlyn at home?" I enquired, in a voice which did not sound like mine, so dull and toneless was it.

"Yes, ma's 'ome." (I started.) "D'ye want to see 'er?"

"If you please. May I—may I walk in?" Already half the swarming population of Easel street had come to its doors and windows to enjoy the sight —such as it was.

I felt curiously giddy. The suggestion in one of the first three words this girl had spoken had caught me by the throat. I entered the narrow passage, having again bidden the cabman wait; and the close odor of the house added to my faintness. A door a few feet down the passage was opened, and I had a dim impression that my companion was bidding me follow her into a room beyond. I obeyed, and then almost recoiled as I passed the threshold.

The room could not have been more than twelve feet square. The boards of the floor were uncovered, and not too clean; the low ceiling was blackened with smoke, and the wall, destitute of paper, was decorated with a few glaring, unframed chromo-lithographs, held in place with pins.

In one corner was a tumbled bed, covered, pillows and all, with a dark calico quilt. There was one unclothed

Mainly About People.

"There was a witty fellow out in a Michigan hospital," says Representative William Alden Smith, "who had to be fed on a daily diet of egg and sherry. His physician asked him how he liked it. 'It would be all right, doctor,' he said, 'if the egg was as new as the sherry and the sherry as old as the egg.'"

It is related that once, when the Earl of Lauderdale was at dinner with King Charles, he remarked to the King: "There is a good saying, that fools make feasts and wise men eat them." "There is another as good," replied the Earl of Shaftesbury; "wits make jests and fools repeat them;" and the King advised Lauderdale to make sure of his man in future.

During the recent street car strike in St. Louis, Professor Hyatt, the weather observer, was about to get on a car, when a member of the strike committee stepped up to him and asked if he intended riding on the car. The professor replied that such was his intention. The striker sought to persuade him not to ride, but he started to get on the car. "Well, if you ride on that car we will withdraw our patronage from you," said the striker. "I don't care whether you patronize me or not. I'm in the weather business," replied Professor Hyatt, and he entered the car.

In a Georgia justice court a colored witness was asked to name the time a difficulty occurred. "Hit wuz in fodder pullin' time, suh," he replied. "You don't understand me," said the judge. "I mean, what time was it by the clock?" "Dey warn't no clock dar, suh," said the witness. "Well, by the sun, then?" "Now," exclaimed the witness, triumphantly, "sence you hes come right down ter business I'll tell you plain: Ef de sun had been a-shinin' hit would er been 'bout two hours en a half by sun; but es de sun didn't show his face 'tall dat day I couldn't say fer sartin des what time hit wuz!"

At the funeral of a lawyer of state reputation, who lived and practised in a town not far from Philadelphia, and who was known among his friends as an unbeliever, an eminent gentleman from Philadelphia reached the house after the minister had begun the sermon. Not knowing how far the service had progressed, he accosted a well-known Quaker of the town, who was a friend of the deceased, and who was noted for his great sense of humor, and, leaning over his shoulder, asked in a whisper: "What part of the services have they reached?" To which the Quaker, without a smile, replied: "Just opened for the defence."

A story of poor Aurelien Scholl, who lately joined the majority, gives a good idea of the caustic humor which made him an oddity among French writers. At a celebrated cafe—not, I think, the Maison Doree, though he was at one time a great supporter of M. Verdier's, alas! moribund establishment—he was offered a Burgundy, which was praised by the host as "true velvet," but had, in fact, become a little sharp with age. "Yes," said Scholl, after tasting it, "velvet, but with pins in it!" Soon after came a Bordeaux, said on the same authority to be "the most generous wine in his cellar." "It is," was this time the verdict, "for it has given away all its good qualities!"

Magistrate Devoy, in the Myrtle Avenue Court, Brooklyn, recently had four darkies who were caught in a gambling raid before him. The first of the lot to be brought to the bar was an undersized man, with a comical face, as black as night. The dialogue between the magistrate and the prisoner created some merriment in the court. "What is your name?" enquired the magistrate, sternly. "Mah name's Smiff," replied the darky. "What is your profession?" "I'se a locksmiff by trade, sah." "What were you doing when the police broke into the room last night?" "Judge, I was pursuin' mah profession. I was makin' a bolt for the door." "Officer," said the magistrate, with a merry twinkle in his eye, "lock Smith up."

The late Sol Smith Russell had three young nieces living in the West, of whom he was very fond. On one occasion, so the story goes, he took the youngest of them for a walk and bought her some candy on the agreement that it was not to be eaten until they reached her home. They started, but before they had gone far the little girl proposed, "Let's wun!" Her uncle declined, and there was long pleading, all to no purpose. Finally, the little girl stopped, knelt down on the pavement, and offered up the petition: "Dod, please make Uncle Sol wun." It was simply a question of my losing my dignity, or her losing her faith in God," said Mr. Russell, in relating the incident, "so we ran as fast as we could for home."

Patronage.

The impressionist had finally sold one of his creations. A brother artist who had arrived, or, as we say, "got there," not only persuaded one of his own customers to buy a painting by the less successful man, at a good figure, but got him an invitation to visit the patron's house to see the picture as it hung on the wall.

It was a painting of a sky, a bridge and a stream, and as they stood before it the purchaser fairly exhausted his vocabulary of art in expatiating on the naturalness of the water and the poetic beauty of the sky. The man, who had done the painting smiled and smiled, but at the same time mopped beads of perspiration from his brow. Finally he got his friend into the hallway and there exploded.

Modern English.

A Washington lady who is so fond of her home that she stays in it sometimes all the year round was assailed, says "Lippincott's Magazine," by a conventional friend in conventional language.

"I knew that you usually wintered here," she said, "but I was astonished to hear that you had summered here!"

"I have not only wintered here and summered here," replied the unfashionable one, "but I will astonish you still further when I tell you that I always fall here and have sometimes sprung here."

WEDDING FORMS AND DAINTY CARDS

While the paper is specially imported, the remainder of the work is done in the Times Job Rooms.

The uniquely attractive results will be gladly shown to those desiring wedding forms printed.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by the Times.

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed. TIMES.]

—All Saint's S. S. excursion takes place today to Jubilee Point.

—Police Magistrate Edmison will go to Norwood today to hear several cases.

—The Joint Committee of the Town and County Councils have decided to replank the Otonabee Bridge.

—Three or four servant girls can find good places, with high wages by applying at The Times Bookstore.

—What more can youngsters ask than to have Forepaugh's circus and the first of July come within a week of each other.

—The annual inspection of the Regiment will take place on Thursday, July 10th. The regiment will parade with both bands at the drill shed at 6.30 p.m.

—The George street Methodist Sunday school excursion was postponed yesterday until further notice, on account of the threatening state of the weather.

—Bernard J. Brady has been summoned to appear before the Police Magistrate this morning, charged with using profane language in a public place.

—A dead set is to be made by the ministers of the town on Sunday evening against gambling. Does this include stock gambling, we wonder?

—Mr. S. R. Armstrong, the efficient town clerk, has been appointed to the Board of Nicholls Hospital by the officials of the George street church.

—A number of boys were up before the Police Magistrate charged with bathing in the goose pond. They were allowed to go.

—Well advertised articles are sure to be in large demand. No danger of their becoming dust covered or having to remain long upon the shelves.

—The judicious advertisement is the best means of making the small business grow to be a large business and of preventing the large business from becoming a small one. The best use of advertising makes the best business out of the ordinary one, and puts the goods of the single merchant at the top of the commercial ladder.

—The pupils of Miss Maggie Doherty Rubidge street, gave a very successful piano recital on Tuesday evening last, reflecting great credit on their teacher.

—St. John's Sunday School picnic will be held on Monday afternoon next. The trip has been restricted to a half day outing in order to allow those who would be unable to get away for a whole day.

—Bowmanville News—Rev. D. O. Crossley, the new pastor of the Methodist church here, will occupy the pulpit, on Sabbath next. Mr. Crossley has just finished a five year's pastorate at Peterborough and at the conclusion of his last Sunday evening service, he was presented by the congregation with a very nicely worded address accompanied by a purse containing $182. The choir also at the same time presented a handsome umbrella. Mrs. Crossley on the previous Tuesday afternoon was presented by the Woman's Auxiliary and the Ladies Aid with a beautiful china tea set and a magnificent jardinere on pedestal and vase. We welcome Mr and Mrs. Crossley to our town, and hope that their work here may be crowned with success.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to furnish the paper with items of a personal and social nature, either by 'phone or in writing.—Ed TIMES.]

—Mrs. J. R. Stratton is in Toronto for a day or two.

—Mrs. J. R. Frost, and Miss L. Davidson are visiting at Niagara Falls and Buffalo.

—Messrs. George W. Morrow, D. Walker, and Jeffries leav today on a trip to England.

—Messrs. Harry Dunford and P. Kerr, of the W. Hamilton Co., leave for Niagara this morning, where this enterprising company are putting in a plant. The boys will be away a couple of months.

—Mr. John Whyte, of Campbellford, passed through town yesterday on his way to Rochester, where he will remain the guest of Dr. Sawers for a fortnight, after which he will spend a month at Fitzroy Harbour, Ontario.

Orange Church Parade

The annual church parade of the Orangemen of the district will take place on Sunday evening next. The brethren are requested to meet at the Orange Hall, Simcoe street, at 6.15 sharp, and march in a body to St. Paul's church, where the annual sermon will be preached by Rev Mr. Wilson, assistant pastor of the church. All visiting brethren are invited.

It was His Treat

"You can't always go by appearances," said a prominent hotel keeper to a Times' representative the other day, as he sat on the porch with a few choice spirits. There was a fellow here a few days ago who earned the reputation of being the meanest man in this section. He was never known to spend a cent either on himself or anyone else. A few of the boys decided to make him open up, and went after him one evening. By dint of persuasion they succeeded in coaxing him into the bar, when one of them stood treat. The mean man took a cigar and put it into his pocket. There were three other fellows in the crowd, besides our mean man, and each of them treated in turn. Our friend took a cigar each time and put it in his pocket making him four cigars to the good. The boys by various broad hints and stage whispers conveyed the idea to treatee that he was expected to do the honors as it was now his turn. He smiled, being an agreeable sort of a fellow, and said, "I guess, boys, it's up to me now, have a smoke," and reaching in his pocket he produced the four cigars and handed one to each. That was the limit, and the boys promptly filed out.

Where Does a Sneeze Go?

"Mamma when you sneeze a sneeze where does it go?" said a Peterborough lad to his mother the other day.

"It goes into the air, I suppose, dear."

"And when something scares it away and you don't sneeze it, where does it go?"

"I don't know, child. Don't bother me."

"Does it go back to where it came from, mamma?"

"Oh, I suppose so. Run out and play."

"Then you've got to sneeze it some time, haven't you?"

"I suppose so."

"If you was to sneeze all the sneezes you had inside of you, would you sneeze any more, or would there be new sneezes to—"

"Willie, I wish you would be quiet."

"What keeps the sneeze from comin gout when it starts?"

"How do I know?"

"Why is it, mamma, that some people say 'k-choo' when they sneeze, and some say 'k-shee'?"

"Willie, if you don't—"

"Johnny Dickson says if I give him a penny he'll sneeze through his ears. Can he do it, mamma?"

No, of course not, my dear."

"How do you know he can't."

"Because—. Willie, if you don't sto bothering me I shall certainly—"

"Mamma, what is a sneeze?"

Whack! Whack!

Nervous and Sleepless

There is just one cure and that is plenty of food for the blood and nerves, which is best supplied by Ferrozone, than which no blood builder, nerve tonic or strength producer is better. Ferrozone promotes healthy digestion, which results in improved nutrition. The blood grows rich and red, furnishes stability to the entire system, and the store of nerve force and energy increases daily. A rebuilding of the constitution, new spirits, health and strength, all come from the use of Ferrozone. This marvelous renovator is sold by druggists for 50c. a box, or six boxes for $2.50 and by Ormond & Walsh.

Old Resident Over Eighty Says He Never saw such a June Before in His Life

An old gentlemen living in the west end who has passed the eighties, says he never saw a more disagreeable June in his life than the one just passed through.

"I've known days," said he, "to be as cold as winter almost, in June; and I've seen snow fall in June, but it was only for a day or two. I never knew of such a long stretch of bad weather as we have had during the past month."

LACROSSE.

The following account of the lacrosse match between the Athletics and Belleville at Belleville on Dominion Day is taken from the Intelligencer.

We ventured the assertion some time ago that it would be a "corker" of an intermediate team which could come here and beat the Bellevilles on their own ground. Well, the locals were beaten yesterday, but the team that beat them was a "corker" for fair. At the same time it may be remarked that if they were in any way superior to the Bellevilles it was not visible to the naked eye. The local stick handlers not only faced a swift, tricky and well-conditioned team, but they suffered from hard luck. With the luck evenly divided Belleville would have won for there were at least eight shots at the Peterborough goal which only went a few inches wide—one of them struck the goal post, and, taking the match all through, it was a defence game for the visitors three-fifths of the time. However, the lads from the north played a hard, fast, dashing game, and there are not many tricks with which they are not familiar. Truth to tell, they might play a trifle fairer as regards tripping, they are past-masters at that accomplishment, and the referee, had he wished to, might have ruled a few of them off. The visitors were right on their men all the time, and stuck to their checks closer than brothers. The local team in some respects, have improved, greatly since they played before, Ford, in particular, showing much better stick handling. The colts of the team, Allen, Cook, Wallace, Burke and Ford, played excellently. The local defence had their work mapped out when they undertook to hold down the visitors' home, but they did it, and broke up many nice combinations. Patterson and Hitchon are two fine defence players. The local home hardly seemed to do themselves justice in the early part of the match. They seemed slow, and rather underrated their opponents in the matter of close checking. There was very little chance for fancy work on the home. The Peterborough defence did not play a lady like game by any means, and evidently had not acquired their knowledge at the ping pong table. However, it was hard luck more than the Peterborough defence that prevented the local home from scoring. They were swift and sure, but did seem on one or two occasions to indulge in unnecessary passing, thus giving the Peterborough men a chance to rally round the goal. However, the four B's Burke, Bogart, Browley and Burrill, played a great game, while Maguire held up his end with the Peterborough point. Four quarters of 20 minutes each were played, with ten minutes rest between. Peterborough scored first in 11 minutes, though most of the play had been in favor of Belleville. The second quarter had hardly started before the local team evened up, the time being 30 seconds. Four minutes later the visitors scored again, and when the playing time was half up up the score stood 2—1 in favor of Peterborough. The third quarter opened with a rush and Peterborough scored in one minute, and when they repeated the trick fifteen minutes later things began to look blue for the home team. However, Belleville scored another in two minutes and the quarter ended with the score 4—3, the locals having the short end. The Bellevilles were out to do or die in the last quarter. They fairly played all around the visitors and scored in two minutes. There was no let up to the pace and eight minutes later the home team scored again. The score was tied, and excitement ran high. Peterborough got the ball at the next face off; there was some swift passing and then a shot on goal. The ball went behind the net, but the umpire put up his hand, claiming the ball had gone under the net. Time to account. The spectators said the ball did not go in the net at all, but it counted just the same. No more scoring was done, and the match ended 5—4 in favor of Peterborough.

CRICKET.

The Lindsay Post says:—The Peterborough Cricket Colts failed to play the L.C.I. team here yesterday. The date—July 1st—for a match with Peterborough had been settled for two months, yet Peterborough neither came nor sent any word that they were not coming. Arrangements for lunch and the presentation of the bat and ball so kindly donated by Mr. J. C. Grace had been made, and the action of the Peterborough Colts is very unsportsmanlike. A game could easily have been arranged with a Toronto club to play here on the first had word been sent. Lindsay has suited Peterborough in regard to dates for games all year, and yet after all has been done, Peterborough has acted in this very queer manner.

BASEBALL.

The Shamrocks of town defeated the Elms of Ashburnham, by a score of 11—4 on the Separate school grounds on Tuesday.

The Victors defeated the Crescents by 24 runs to 8 on Wednesday.

The Rosneath baseball team will play the Auburns on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

THE PEARY RELIEF EXPEDITION HAS STARTED

Sailed From New York For The Great Frozen North

The Explorer Expected To Come Back On The Boat And To Have Found The Pole

New York, July 4.—The Peary Arctic steamer Windward sails out of New York harbour to-day, bound for the North, to bring back the Peary expedition, after its four years' stay, in the Arctic, during which it is confidently expected that Peary has found the Pole.

The Windward will be commanded by Mrs. Robert E. Peary, wife of the famous explorer, and this trip marks the first time that a woman has gone to the Arctic in command of an expedition. Provisioned for two years, fitted out to meet all the rigours of a sojourn in the great cold, the Windward is as fit to undertake the task of bringing the explorer back to civilization as she was when she went after Nansen in 1873, or on the Jackson-Harmsworth expedition in 1881.

Mrs. Peary will be accompanied by Capt. Samuel Bartlett and the crew which has accompanied her husband on several of his former trips.

WILL STOP AT SYDNEY.

The Windward's first stop will be at Sydney, Cape Breton. Thence she will go to Drisco and Upernavik, North Greenland, and then across the dreaded Melville Bay to Etah, where is located Peary's base of operations, and where it is hoped that the explorer will be found. At Etah Drs. Kane and Hayes made their winter quarters in 1851.

If Peary is not found there, the Windward will go to Cape Sabine, Ellesmere Land, the scene of the famous rescue of the survivors of the Greely Arctic expedition by the relief expedition commanded by Admiral Schley. If Peary has accomplished all that he hoped to when he left in the Arctic four years ago, it is expected that he will be on his return to Fort Conger, which is 400 miles north of Cape Sabine, by August 20. If he has not reached Cape Sabine, when the Windward arrives, the vessel will wait there for him.

After leaving Upernavik the last of this month, nothing further will be heard from the Windward until late in September, when it is probable that news of her, taken to Upernavik by Esquimaux, will be brought by a Danish war vessel which touches at that point once a year.

It is hoped that if all goes well the Windward will reach home some time in October, bringing the explorer and data of the greatest geographical interest, whether or not it furnishes proof that to America and to a United States naval officer belongs the dredit of penetrating the farthest north and bringing back the greatest geographical prize, the discovery of the Pole.

Matt Henson, Peary's only attendant besides the few Esquimaux who made up his party when he started on the final dash for the pole, will come back also, and it is expected that some news will be brought of Dr. Deidrich, who left the Peary party after a disagreement with the explorer to go on a search of his own.

MEDALS FOR PEARY.

Mrs. Peary has been spending the days ais and honors conferred on her husband by the Royal, French and American Geographical Societies in recognition of his work in the polar regions. She will also take the news to him of his promotion from the rank of lieutenant to that of commander in the navy, of which he as yet knows nothing.

Mrs. Peary has been spending the days before her departure at the home, of Albert Operti, chairman of the Arctic Club, of New York, which has seen to the fitting out of the Windward with new boilers and other necessaries for the present trip. Mr. Operti, who, by the way, is the author of the art tableaux production at Keith's Theatre this week, was the guest of Lieut. Peary during two years in the Arctic in 1896 and 1897 as official artist and correspondent of the New York Herald.

Soon after the rescue of the Greely survivors Mr. Operti was commissioned by the War and Navy Departments to paint two pictures, "Farthest North" and "The Rescue of Greely," and these pictures are now in the capitol at Washington. The paintings contain portraits of Admiral Schley, commander of the relief expedition; Chief Melville, who commanded the Jeannette expedition, and 17 other portraits. Mr. Operti visited Cape Sabine, where 17 members of the Greely party starved to death, the winter quarters of Drs. Kane and Hayes at Etah, and the scene of the loss of the Polaris.

Up to the present time Mr. Operti, who was commissioned to paint the two pictures mentioned in 1888 by Secretary Chandler, has been unable to collect from the government the pay for his work. Lately Senator McComas, of Maryland, has interested himself in the matter, and the prospect now is that the artist will receive that which is his due.

A True Nerve Tonic

Will act, not so much directly upon the nerves as upon the digestive functions and the abundant formation of red, vitalising blood. Nerves can't be fed on medicine. They can, however, be restored and strengthened by assimilated food. The marvelous action of Ferrozone arises from its action over the digestive and assimilative processes. When you take Ferrozone the blood is purified, strengthened, and grows rich and red. Then you grow vigorous, healthy and beautiful, ready for work, because you have the strength to do it. No tonic for the blood, brain or nerves compares with Ferrozone. Price, 50c., at druggists, or Ormond & Walsh.

HE CREATED A PANIC

And Now Reporters Will No Longer Report Cheese Board

Woodstock, July 4.—A resolution was introduced at the cheese board yesterday to keep reporters out of the market. There were several reasons for it, those who introduced the resolution said, one of which was that last week one of the reporters went over to the Oxford after the market to attempt to find out what cheese had been sold on the kerb.

A salesman said as a joke to the reporter, when presented with the question, "Why, yes, I got nine and three-quarters for mine."

As a matter of fact, no cheese was sold on the kerb that day at all, and only one lot was sold on the market, which brought nine and five-eighths. There is a big difference between three-quarters and five-eighths in cheese buying or selling.

The reporter referred to, however, took it for gospel, and wired to the papers that cheese had been sold at 9 3-4c. The high price was noted by dealers, etc., and it was taken as truth, and there might have been a general mixup over the doings of a gullible reporter.

James Anderson said he didn't blame the reporters for getting all the news they could. "It's hard enough to get, goodness knows," exclaimed the genial Jim.

After a lot of discussion, it was decided to have the secretary supply the report of the market to the newspapers.

Yesterday twenty-three factories boarded 6,510 boxes of cheese, none of which was sold on the board.

Next Saturday will be the 12th of July. The Peterborough brethren will go to Lindsay. Havelock is also having a big celebration.

KING HAS DIABETES

One Newspaper Says That He is Afflicted with It Without Doubt

Special to The Times.

London, July 4.—Reynold's Newspaper alleges to be able to state reliably that the examination of the physicians proved beyond all shadow of doubt that the King is afflicted with glycosuria and albumonuria—in other words, the presence of sugar and albumen in the urine. This denotes that he is suffering from diabetes and chronic inflammation of the kidneys.

LOOPING THE LOOP

Diavalo's Famous Act a Feature of Forepaugh-Sells Circus

Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' united shows are exploiting a new feature this season which eclipses in point of sheer daring anything ever attempted in any arena. It is the famous Diavlo in "his looping the loop" on a bicycle an act which created the profoundest sensation in New York city and Philadelphia, and elicited more praise and was given more space in the metropolitan press than any single act ever presented to the public.

Looping the loop is described as danger deriding and death defying, which is as near correct as words can make it. From the extreme height of the canvas dome Diavalo makes a thrilling descent down the narrow plane on a bicycle and the momentum thus gained carries him around the loop at a terrific rate of speed. At the top of the loop both rider and wheel are upside down and going at the rate of 40 miles an hour. It is a hair-raising act and one that all should see, as it gives a practical demonstration of the first science lesson of youth—The swinging in the circle of a bucket full of water without spilling. The date of the show here is Tuesday July 8th.

Distrust of Mining Investments

Investments in mines and mining stocks are as a rule looked upon with a great deal of distrust by the general investing public. Yet some of the wealthiest citizens of this country, and many hundreds in the United States have made vast fortunes through such investments. The great difficulty is not so much in the fact that mines do not pay, but that as a rule the ordinary investor has not the opportunity for investigating the stocks in which he places his funds. There are many fake mining concerns, but this is but another proof that such investments pay. "Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery." The financial firm of Wm. C. Benson & Company, of London, Ont., undertake to help investors along this line. They become agents for only such stocks as they can safely recommend to their customers. They take stock in each company they represent upon the merits of the company, and will, under no circumstances, recommend investment in a stock that will not with reasonable certainty become a profitable security. They have sold stock for several companies that are now paying regular dividends of from 8 to 18 per cent. per annum, and stock has advanced from 50 to 500 per cent., in value. Read the firm's ad. on second page, and write them for something good. They are looking for a can. its value. Read the firm's ad. on live agent in Peterborough.

ARMIES MUST NOW HAVE GOOD HORSES

Modern Warfare Shows That Equines are Essential For Military Purposes

LESSON FROM THE BOER WAR

One way in Which the Cavalry used by Buffalo Bill has Taught a Lesson to the World

London, July 4.—Experience in modern warfare has accentuated the fact that successful campaigns can only be made by rapid transportation of the fighting forces from one point to another. For years the military students of Europe depended mainly on railroad facilities, all of the great trunk lines and their branches were planned and laid solely on their military and strategetic importance and availability. But actual war has revealed that it is not only the railway but that in conjunction the horses must be relied upon for the movement of large bodies of armed men.

Three or four hundred cars can carry 30,000 or 40,000 troops to a given point, but a railroad terminus or junction is not always the natural selection of a site for a battle.

During the war in South Africa the British government has been compelled to use over 300,000 horses, 77,000 of which were purchased in America, and military strategists already recognise the fact that mounted infantry and mounted artillery must compose the bulk of an army in active service. The rough rider of America and the yeomanry of England have come to stay. The Cossack of the Russian steppes, and the Sikh cavalry of India, the rurale horsemen of Mexico and South America, the light cavalry of France, and the Chasseurs d'Afrique of Algiers will hereafter take a leading and tremendous part in the battles of the future.

CARRIED UP BY BALOON ROPE

Man Dangled 3,000 Feet in Air and Came Down Safe in a Treetop

Special to The Times.

Milford, Mass., July 3.—Louis Ward of this town was holding one of the guy ropes of Prof. Hellman's hot air baloon at Hong Park yesterday when the belloon was released. He became entangled in the rope and was jerked into the air head downward. He remained in that attitude only a minute or two. Prof. Hellman, leaning over the edge of the basket, gave him directions how to act, and he put himself in an upright position.

The balloon went up 3,000 feet and Hellman, after telling Ward to keep coll and hang on, dropped in his parachute and made a safe descent.

The ballon slowly collapsed and began to settle. It brought up on top of a tree and Ward, none the worse for his flight, reached the ground a mile from where he started. A crowd of 3,000 persons at the park saw him carried up.

THE DEFENCE OF THE EMPIRE.

Important Subjects Under Discussion by Colonial Conference

Special to The Times.

London, July 4—The Imperial conference was resumed today at the Colonial Office. The first subject on the momentous programme is the question of Imperial defence. This topic cannot stand by itself alone for it is inextricably associated with the question of trade. Some members of the conference, Sir Wilfrid Laurier for example, maintain that defence and trade are not thus closely associated but the discussions on the two subjects are almost certain to overlap.

Both Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of Canada and the Right Hon. E. Barton, Premier of Australia, in dealing with the subject of to-day's discussion, are playing with an edged weapon, which may destroy them. Hon Joseph Chamberlain, of course, holds the easiest seat at the Imperial table. He knows that England would welcome permanent military assistance from the colonies, and looking at the question from the Mother Land's point of view, he sees quite clearly that the tax-payers of the home land have gone to tremendous expense to fight wars which go to build up the Empire, and which will benefit not only the British Isles, but Canada Australia, New Zealand and every British colony in the remotest seas. To the groaning British tax payer it seems manifestly unfair that he should do all the paying and the colonies should share the glory, the greatness and the wealth of an Empire which depends upon a well-organized and strong system of defence.

LAURIER'S STAND.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier looks at the question through other spectacles. He is in a very difficult position. As he joins in the conference he remembers the divided sentiment at home. The Province of Quebec, his own compatriots, the French-Canadians, are solid against contributing to the defence of the Empire. English-speaking Canada, on the other hand, is largely, even passionately, in favor of supporting over-burdened England in her tremendous task of maintaining the bulwarks of the Empire. The voice of Col. Denison, representing the British Empire League, has been sounding in Sir Wilfrid's ears ever since he arrived in England. Col. Denison has declared that the majority of Canadians are intensely anxious to contribute to Imperial defence, because they realize that trade depends upon defence. Sir Wilfrid is also troubled by the decision of the Canadian Boards of Trade conference, which decided that it was the duty of the Dominion as an important division of the Empire, to share in the cost of the general defence of the Empire, and that an annual appropriation should be made in the Dominion budget for this purpose, to be expended as the Dominion Government may direct.

Sir Wilfrid will doubtless rely on the backing of the French vote, and follow his own inclinations by voting against contributing to Imperial defence, asserting that all Canada can do at present is to maintain a strong militia and improve her coast defence.

Hon. E. Barton, like Sir Wilfrid, is also sitting on pins and needles. He represents a newly formed confederation of colonies, some of which are bitterly opposed to accepting an additional burden of taxation for any purpose whatever. Hon. Mr. Barton must be very careful about antagonizing any of these members of the young Commonwealth, or disastrous results may ensue. He will probably take much the same line as Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and will point out that Australia is endeavoring to build up a navy, has established a strong militia defence, and is prepared to see to her own defence. Any further contribution to Imperial defence he will declare to be purely optional on the part of the colony which he represents. The background of the conference today, however, will be the glorious fields of the South African war and in the light of recent events the English statesmen at the conference will be doubly assured that England can always depend upon her children over sea whenever the need of armed sons shall arise.

PRIVELEGES FOR THE NEW SOUTH AFRICAN COLONIES

What Impressed Belgian Diplomat Most During Visit to London--Mint Proposed for S.A.

Special to The Times.

London, July 4.—Speaking at a conference of teachers in Government schools in the new South African colonies says the Johannesburg correspondent of The Times, Mr. Sargant, Director of Education, said the colored children had as much right as children of other taxpayers to access to the Government schools, and the Government recognized that it was its duty to provide schools for them. Mr. Sargant added that it was impossible to disregard the social usages of the generations, and therefore, in spite of the extra expenditure involved, separate schools, just as well equipped as those for the whites, would be provided for colored children.

London, July 4.—A despatch from Brussels to the Times says the Belgian diplomat who has just returned from from London, whither he was sent for the coronation, declares that what impressed him was not merely the magnitude of the preparations, not the respect of London, not even the fleet, "but the manifestation of power lying behind all this, and the self control of the British in adverse circumstances, which explain to me the position England occupies among the nations of the world."

AUSTRALIAN GOVERNOR'S TITLE.

London, July 4—The new title of the Earl of Hopetown, Governor-General of Australia, will, says a despatch from Melbourne to The Times, be "Marquis of Linlithgow."

MINT FOR SOUTH AFRICA.

London July 4.—The Times financial editor urges that British measures be taken to establish a mint at Pretoria, or Johannesburg, as, he says, it is absurd to pay insurance and freight on gold required there. Today 400,000 pounds of gold is to be shipped from here to South Africa, while a large amount of raw gold from South African fields is due here tomorrow.

HAS MORGAN BOUGHT LIBRARY.

London, July 4—The Times laments the continuous wholesale exportation of rare early printed books and illuminated manuscripts to the United States. It points out that the drain has been going on for more than half a century, and has recently reached huge proportions. Now, says, The Times, it has to chronicle the most important single transaction of this sort that has ever taken place, or it

THE KING'S CONDITION.

London, July 4—The bulletin regarding the King's condition posted at Buckingham Palace at 10 o'clock this morning says:—

"The King had a good night, and, indeed, slept better than at any time since the operation. The wound now gives less trouble and his Majesty can move in bed with greater ease. His Majesty's appetite has improved. is likely to take place. Sotherby, Wilkinson & Hodge have sold by private treaty to an American who refuses to have his name disclosed, but is believed to be Morgan, a library containing thirty-two Caxtons. The price runs into six figures. The nucleus of this library was formed by the late William Morris.

FRASERVILLE.

On the closing day of school the pupils of Cairo school, Fraserville, presented Miss Louie, Masters Arthur and George Steel with an address and presents.

The address was read by Miss Janet Waterman and Miss Mamie Whitfield presented Miss Louie Steel with a handsome vase and a silk handkerchief. Masters Earnest Armstrong and Charlie Hogg made the presentation to Masters Arthur and George Steel. Their gifts were handkerchief and collar boxes, and each a silk handkerchief.

The following is the address:

To Miss Louie, Masters Arthur and George Steel, Fraserville:

Dear schoolmates,—Your teacher and schoolmates at Cairo School, Fraserville, deeply regret that you are so soon to leave us, as we have learned to respect and love you. The time of parting is now drawing so near we seem to appreciate your friendship as never before, and as a slight token of our sincere regard for you, we ask you to accept these small gifts from us to remind you of the days spent at our school.

We all join in wishing you much success and happiness in the future, and if we may not meet again on earth we hope to meet where partings are unknown.

Signed on behalf of the school.

PEARL SCOBELL.
HARRY ROTHWELL.
OTTIE RUE.
WILBERT MONCRIEF.
BRUCE FISHER.
MAMIE WHITFIELD.
JANET WATERMAN.

Several ladies of the section were present, the Rev. and Mrs. Steel, being asked to call as it was the last day of school before the vacation.

Mr. Steel made an appropriate and excellent reply on behalf of the children, thanking the pupils kindly for their pretty gifts. He gave wise advice to the boys and girls and regretted that his children had to leave Fraserville school.

Their teacher, Miss Fair, also regrets they have to leave the school, as careful Christian training was reflected in their characters, and had a great influence for good.

Rev. Mr. Steel and family left for Hastings last Wednesday morning, and their departure is regretted by the whole community.

DECLINE OF MENTAL AND PHYSICAL VIGOR IN THE HOT WEATHER

Paine's Celery Compound Renews and Invigorates the Body and Maintains a strong and Clear Brain

Thousands of people in whose blood lurk the seeds of disease, decline mentally and physically when the hot weather comes on. They become weak, languid, morose, loss of appetite with wasting of of flesh.

For all such, Paine's Celery Compound is an absolute necessity at this time. It is the only remedy approved of by able physicians for purifying and enriching the blood, for feeding and nourishing the nerves, for maintaining digestive vigor, for the building of flesh, tissue and muscle, and for promoting refreshing and healthful sleep.

If your condition of health is not satisfactory; if you are not happy, active and vigorous at present, try the virtues of one bottle of Paine's Celery Compound; you will have cause to thank Heaven that such a marvellous recuperator was placed within your reach. The following letter written by Rev. P. Rioux, of St. Anne's church, Montreal, is convincing and comforting:

"I am fully convinced, both by personal experience and by the statements of many parishioners intrusted to my care, that the celebrated medicine, Paine's Celery Compound, deserves high recommendation. I therefore willingly indorse the testimonials already given in its behalf."

Items of News

Cleveland, July 4.—A gas that is cheaper than any fuel now in use and which gives a light which is exceeded in brilliancy only by electricity, is what Henry Soeder, a groceryman here, claims to have discovered.

Soeder will not tell how the gas is made, but he is now using it to light his store and to do the family cooking. He claims he takes the gas from the air.

Those who have seen tests of its heating properties say it is likely to revolutionize the industrial world.

A company has been formed to manufacture the gas, and Albert De Forest, manager of the American Steel and Wire Company, and several other men of wealth are among the stockholders.

The Cause of Deafness

Deafness and impaired hearing are due almost entirely to catarrhal inflammation of the eustachian tubes. Permanent cure is guaranteed to all who inhale Catarrhozone as directed. This vegetable antiseptic is inhaled at the mouth, and after traversing all the air passages of the respiratory organs is exhaled through the nostrils; it completely eradicates catarrh from any part of the system, clears the ears, nose and throat, and allays inflammation, congestion and soreness. For deafness, earache, ringing in the ears, head noises, catarrh, asthma and bronchitis, medical science can devise nothing as beneficial as Catarrhozone. TROUBLES IN THE NEAR EAST

Prussia's policy towards the Poles, says the Vienna correspondent of the Times, causes profound exasperation wherever there are Slavs. The correspondent says it looks like a fresh indication of the great future struggle between the Slav and Teuton which many thoughtful observers regard as inevitable. This question, declares the correspondent, is a factor of growing importance, which European statesmanship must henceforth take into account. The predominance of German influence, political and commercial, in the near East regions upon which Austria and Russia have claims will as assuredly, the correspondent says, soon be a cause of grave international trouble.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The eighty-seventh anniversary of the battle of Waterloo, celebrated the other day on the old battlefield, unearthed another historical puzzle. For a long time we have been accustomed to read about the cowardly conduct of the Belgian troops on that occasion, but the Independance Belge comes to the national defence, now with the following passage from an article in the London Daily News of the 21st of June, 1815:

"Although the official reports announce a great victory for the allied forces at Waterloo, it is plain to everybody who knows how to read between the lines that the action was indecisive and costly. As we have often had occasion to remark during the Peninsular War, the Duke of Wellington once more proved himself a poor strategist, and, if it had not been for the heroic bravery of the Belgians the English army would have been annihilated by the French."

Up to the present time the question has been much discussed among military men whether it was possible for the French army, after its defeat at Sedan, on September 1st, 1870, to have extricated itself by retreating to the north, towards Mezieres, in accordance with the orders given by General Ducrot, who momentarily assumed command at the request of General MacMahon, who had been wounded. The contingency of MacMahon's disablement had been provided for, however, by the Minister of War, who had given a secret order to General de Wimpfeu, confiding the command to him in that event. The army had first begun to execute Ducrot's order when de Wimpfeu producing his commission countermanded and directed a move to the south. That was found to be impossible, and, falling back on Sedan, the whole army surrendered the next day. It has now been conclusively proved that movement to the north as ordered by Ducrot was no less possible than movement in the opposite direction. The point was carefully studied by M. Duquet, who has just completed his history of the Franco-German war. The German general staff gave him all possible facilities for arriving at the facts; and it is shown that route to the north was absolutely impracticable. No less than 70,000 Germans were posted along it in strong defensive positions, while other divisions of the German army were prepared to press on flank and rear. It was a case of checkmate and surrender was inevitable. The French army numbered about 115,000 men. [illegible]

THE IDLER'S COLUMN

Conducted by a Man Who is Without Any Occupation

This column is, generally speaking, devoted to the pains and pangs and punctured tires of humanity. Sometimes I let a little levity creep into it—I can't help it—but, as I said in the start, generally speaking, it wrestles with the problems of Life, and takes the Kinks from the tangled skein.

Just now a man writes me and wants to know about Angora Goats. He wants me to tell him how much wool you can get from them, and what they cost a dozen, and I don't know what all he does not want to know. I am a Naturalist, if I am anything. However, the goats of my childhood's sunny hour were not Angora goats. They were the old-fashioned kind of goats that were formidable in war or in peace—the right of way was theirs by inheritance, and no man of my acquaintance ever successfully disputed it. They were goats which were without a purpose in Life, so far as I could ever discover unto myself. As I have twice before remarked in this same article, generally speaking, a Goat is a Heroic Animal. Like the boy who stood on the Burning Deck, I imagine that a goat would remain whence all but him had fled—remain in the hope of getting a chance to eat the spars, even if the sails were consumed. Outside of an Oil house on fire, I know of nothing with the consuming appetite of a goat, and I've travelled round a great deal—have been as far as Lindsay.

I know that goats love flowers. Their admiration in this line is intense. I have seen them gather whole flower beds at a single sitting—but as to the Wool Crop, or the Milk Crop, I am in total darkness. I regret that I cannot yield the information sought, but I'll buy some goats tomorrow—some of the Angora kind, and I'll shear them and figure out how many suits of All Wool and a yard Wide clothes one goat will yield, and I'll try to impart the information in this Fountain of Publicity just as quick as I shear them. There is nothing in the world that I will not do to accomodate a friend, and while it will take a little time to get this information, I do not care.

Now, if there is any other question you would like to ask the Professor while he is raising and shearing the goats, go ahead. A little music, please.

The old proposition that "sugar and spice, and everything nice," is what little girls are made of, is always proven when compared with her mischievous little brother. I have watched 'em and to my sorrow I have found that the Kid generally speaking, is a wild animal—while the lively little sister is instinctively just the reverse. While the little girl is at home writing an essay which would read something like this, where is her brother?

"HOW SWEETLY THE BIRDS SING!"

"The little birds are very beautiful and they have such fine feathers and they seem to be so happy. And how sweetly they sing! From my window in the mornings and evenings I hear them singing, and one of them is so tame that the little fellow comes to the window-sill and eats crumbs of bread right out of my hand. He will chirrup, and put his head sidewise, as much as to say, 'Thank you, little girl.' I do not see how the bad boys rob the nests of the old birds, and thus steal their little children, which must make them feel so awfully sad. I would like to live in the woods and have no other companions but hundreds of different kinds of birds. They are so innocent, and so happy and so pretty."

And while the little Miss was writing something like the above, her brother was out climbing a tree and robbing the nest of the little bird which had eaten crumbs of bread from his sister's hand. I do not suppose he would take time to write about birds, but if he would, he would about say:

"BURDS."

"They is a lot of feathered nusoonces which are Chattering around, disturbing things, and I'm going out with Bob Green and some other boys and Rob three nests this evening, and maybe we will ketch the old bird and throw some black pepper in her eyes, and see her fly agin a tree and bump her Brains out. Gosh, but we got fourteen eggs yesterday, and throwed 'em agains' old Squire Billin's house and made it look splotchy slick."

That would be the difference. Why it is, I do not know. That it is, in many cases, I do know.

But boys will be boys, they have told us, and I guess that it is so.

DIARY OF A YACHTING PARTY

The Idler has a friend who recently went off on a yachting party doing the Kawartha lakes, sleeping and eating on board:

On Board the Kitty, June 20.—Very poor yachting today. I opened a pot on kings up and was raised twice; went back the limit and still two men staid. Got the other king and put in every cent I had; also my coat and vest. I'll be blistered if Jenkins didn't make fours! Haven't anything left but my shirt and underwear; but I'm no quitter. Young Bilger says we're proceeding under forced draught, whatever that is. I'd like to get hold of a New York draft. I'd force the fighting for a little while.

JACK POTT.

On Board the Kitty, June 21.—Bilger just came below to report that the lookout has raised land, but he didn't say how much. I raised the limit 35 on the last hand and got two stayers. Bad move. Didn't better and lost $23. Luck has turned, and I'm losing. Pretty near down to my lee quarter.

JACK POTT.

On Board the Kitty, Fenelon Falls, June 26. (Special telegram)—Have sent photo of my last poker hand by mail. Get cut made and put in Times. Peterborough Olympic boys will be much interested.

JACK POTT.

[Collect.]

On Board the Kitty, Lindsay, June 27.—This is the last hand. I have lost everything—shoes, shirt, underwear, everything. I have finished the cruise in a barrel, and I have staked the barrel on this last hand. O Fortune, do not desert me in my extremity! Do not leave me "naked to mine enemies"! I am called. I throw down my hand defiantly. Three nines and a pair of treys. Is that good gentlemen?——

Will now close for this time, as I hear the comps. calling for "copy."

COPPER AT THREE AND HALF CENTS A POUND

George A. Treadwell Mining Company

27 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK. JEROME, ARIZONA.

Capital - - - - $3,000,000.

VALUE OF SHARES $10.

In a suit recently tried in the New York courts it was proved from the books of the United Verde Copper Company and the sworn testimony of the bookkeepers that the cost to that company of producing copper was only three and a half cents a pound, not counting the gold and silver values, which—allowed for—reduced the cost to a still lower figure.

Nowhere outside the Verde Copper Belt in Yavapai County, Arizona, is copper produced in quantities for less than twice this cost.

The United Verde has about two hundred acres on the north end of the Belt and the George A. Treadwell Company has several times as much in the central and southern parts of the Belt. The conditions along the whole Belt are entirely similar. We already have three mines developed—the Cliff, Brookshire and Iron Queen—one of which, the Cliff, seems to be larger and better than the United Verde, and the other two at least approach it in magnitude and value, while we have several others, including Badger, Pastime, Green Monster and Spoke and Stonewall, which, though less developed, are equally promising.

Professor Treadwell believes we have at least half a dozen United Verdes within the broad and extensive limits of our holdings.

As soon as our smelter plant which is now in process of erection, is completed, we can certainly produce copper as cheap as our rich neighbor on the north.

The United Verde for several years has produced one-tenth the copper of the world. When our plants are fully installed we expect the Verde Belt to produce one-half the copper of the world, and the George A. Treadwell Mining Company will be prepared to do more than its full share.

Before investing in copper in unproved localities, consider the stock of the George A. Treadwell Mining Company, named after the great pioneer and explorer of the Verde Belt and owning the largest and best aggregation of properties on it.

The price of the stock is [illegible] a share. Make checks payable to the order of the company and send to 27 William Street New York

Pennies by the Ton.

When one has put a penny in the slot and got his correct weight or a piece of chocolate, he seldom thinks of the thousands of other pennies dropped that very hour into other machines. The companies that own these "automatic vendors" receive tons of pennies, which they can turn back into circulation only through the United States Subtreasury, since banks refuse to handle pennies unless they are counted and packed in rolls, and the slot-machine companies would have to hire a large force of clerks to do this, and that would curtail their profits. The problem of counting pennies for deposit in the Subtreasury is simple. They are weighed like so many bullets on a scale, which registers not pounds and ounces, but dollars and cents. The collections from the slot-machines do not go directly to be weighed. The coin has first to be sorted, for it is mixed with all kinds of refuse—lead weights, buttons, bangles and counterfeits, put into the slot either in a spirit of mischief or to defraud the company. The boys who do this sorting wear antiseptic gloves, for the coins are very dirty and likely to spread disease. The refuse from the sorting process is usually valueless, although now and then gold pieces, bits of jewelry, gold and silver charms engraved with tender inscriptions find their way into the iron throat of the machine which swallows only copper cents. Hundreds of German pennies and many coins of higher value are found in the machines, put there through carelessness, for in these cases there can be no intention to cheat; there is nothing lower than a cent. Counterfeits abound. The cost of making is not great, and the per cent. of profit is large. People seldom take the trouble to look carefully at pennies, so counterfeits pass easily. On the Bowery in New York and at Coney Island from one to two per cent. of the copper in circulation is said to be spurious. So the owners of the penny-in-the-slot machines have more trouble with the actual money they receive than men in any other business. Making change relieves a street-car company from receiving nothing but nickels, but the penny-in-the-slot company must take the actual copper stuff and turn it into more convenient form. On lower Broadway it is no uncommon sight to see a wagon load of pennies going to the Treasury, in appearance only a load of canvas sacks, but really a clumsy embarrassment of riches.

A Believer in the Birch.

There are two very amusing little anecdotes in the newly-published "Memoirs of Herr von Busch," who lived for years in the confidence of Prince von Bismarck. It appears that the Iron Chancellor was not tender to his two sons when they were little, and spanked them for the slightest offence. Once Herbert and "Bill" had been caught stealing nuts in the garden of a neighbor, who, full of respect for the little gentlemen, only scolded them mildly.

At that very moment, however, Bismarck and Moritz Busch put in an appearance. "What!" cried the stern father; "is that all you find to say to these little scoundrels? Please cut one of the most elastic branches from your despoiled tree, and give them, under my very eyes, the best thrashing that they ever had. And, depend upon it, when I do it myself I do not spare them!" There was no getting out of it; so the neighbor set about the task as tenderly as possible, but Bismarck, stamping with his foot, kept on crying, "Go on! Go on! You coward!" till the wretched farmer, excited by the commanding voice, hit so hard that the boys asked for mercy.

Herr von Busch was indignant, and could not help venturing a few observations. "Bah!" Bismarck answered, "you are too much of a sentimentalist, and seem to ignore that the birch is the salvation of our German children. Look at the Prince Imperial himself! The birch never for a moment leaves the back of the chair of Fraulein H., his governess, who obeys orders, but hates beating her august pupil."

Then, choking with laughter, the Prince went on: "One day the poor, kind lady, after having administered a severe correction to Wilhelm, said, 'Believe me, your Highness, it hurts me more than it hurts you when I have to punish you so.' The boy shrugged his shoulders, looking somewhat incredulous. A little later, at luncheon time, when all the family was gathered round the table, he suddenly said to the governess, 'Is your back better?' On which Princess Victoria kindly asked her what was the matter with her back. 'Not much, I hope,' quickly answered the mischievous boy who is now Emperor, 'for I scarcely feel mine now, but you see, mother, Fraulein H. has such a sympathetic back that it begins to hurt her directly she commences to cane me, and she performed on me this morning.'"

The Glass Eye.

"The following good story comes from Ceylon:—A tea-planter—he had a glass eye—was very desirous to go and have a day's shooting with a friend, but he knew that immediately the natives, who were at work on the plantation, got wind that he was away, they would not do a stroke of work. How was he to get off?—that was the question. After much thought an idea struck him. Going up to the men, he addressed them thus: "Although I myself will be absent, yet I shall leave one of my eyes to see that you do your work." And, much to the surprise and bewilderment of the natives, he took out the glass eye and placed it on the stump of a tree and left. For some time the natives worked like elephants, now and then casting furtive glances at the eye to see if it was still watching, but at last one of them, seizing the tin in which he carried his food, approached the tree, and gently placed it over the eye. As soon as they saw that they were not being watched they all lay down and slept peacefully until sunset.

Mrs. Hickey (who is entertaining her little son's playmate, aged five, to dinner)—Willie, can you cut your own meat? Willie (who is struggling with a piece on his plate)—Yes, thank you (with a desperate saw at the beef), I've cut quite as tough meat as this at home.—Glasgow "Evening Times."

A HARD JILT FOR THE CROWN PRINCE

Pretty Countess May Has no Eyes For the Heir to the German Throne

ENGAGED TO DASHING NOBLE

Though Frederick William is Head over Heels in Love with Her, she Will Wed His Rival

Special to The Times.

Berlin, July 4.—The engagement of Countess May Festetics to Prince Furstenberg has made a deep impression on the crown prince, who was wildly in love with the pretty girl. When Frederick William visited Vienna last year, he seemed to have eyes for May only at the great balls, receptions and other festivities.

Indeed, his court-martial had to threaten him with a telegram to the Kaiser, lest he forego dancing with May and pay some attention to the archduchesses present. Countess May's future husband is in the diplomatic service and heir presumptive to the family estates.

He is mentioned as the future attache of the Washington embassy.

Countess May's mother is the divorced first wife of the Prince of Monaco, and the hereditary prince of the gambler kingdom is her half-brother.

KAISER STOPS "L" ROAD.

Orders have been issued by the chief of police to stop trains whenever the Kaiser's carriage approaches the "L" road. Hereafter, when he drives out, stationmasters are notified when his coach may be near the tracks, and lookouts are established to stop the trains both ways.

KAISER DISINHERITED.

It now turns out that the Kaiser isn't mentioned in the last will of the late Prince George, who left about $500,000 Neither was Prince Henry directly benefited; the bulk of the estate goes to Henry's children, who probably will not live to enjoy it. Prince George's Berlin palace was long ago sold to the crown, and one of the Kaiser's sons will be lodged there.

ALEXANDER'S BATTLEFIELDS.

Colonel Janke and his aide, Lieutenant von Bismarck, are expected here after a three months' stay in Asia Minor, where by the Kaiser's orders they searched for some of the lost battlefields of Alexander the Great.

They discovered the battlefield of Issus, where Alexander licked Darius, and also that of Granicus, where the Persians were thrashed.

EMPRESS VS. STUDENTS.

The Empress is backing the Protestant synod in the attempts to secure a police regulation that forbids university students to visit saloons Sunday during church hours, attired in the gay colors and caps of their societies. While driving to church recently at 9 a.m., the Empress saw a number of students drinking beer in open saloons, the boys being conspicuous for their many gay-colored ribbons and other student paraphernalia.

MONT PELEE STILL ACTIVE

Fort de France, Martinique, via St. Lucia, July 4.—The new summit of Mont Pelee was reached for the first time on June 20th by Edmund C. Hovey, assistant curator of the American Museum of Natural History, New York, and George Carroll Curtis. A cairn was built on the top.

The mountain has been lowered and old Lake Palmistes has been entirely destroyed. The highest point of the new crater rises 4,200 feet by the aneroid barometer. A large fragmental cone occupies the southwestern part.

The crater is belching out incandescent ashes and mud by a deep, narrow lip into a ravine on the leeward side.

The first recorded ascents from the leeward side were on June 24th and 26th. The cairn was built at an altitude of 3,700 feet on a ridge ascending from St. Pierre.

The crater is in constant eruption. The ascents were rendered possible by a strong southeast wind, which carried the showers of ashes to the northward. A fierce rush of mud was witnessed in the eruption of the 24th. A gorge 60 feet deep was filled with mud to a depth of 15 feet in one hour.

An eruption of considerable size was seen on June 26th at 11.30 p.m. from a sloop anchored off Carbet. No new lava has flowed.

The Love Letters of a Christian Scientist.

My beloved Prince of the New Thought—I have been wondering to-day if our exchange of gifts seems as beautiful to you as it does to me. Most lovers exchange rings, but how much more your betrothal gift to me really means! The thought that you have given me your well-studied and dog-eared copy of Science and Health with a Key to the Scriptures, and that I have given you my copy of the Mother's Words, thrills me to the heart—or would, if there were any reality in matter. (Heart would come under the head of matter, wouldn't it? And matter is reflected, of course, from mortal mind, which is evil.)

Do you remember the day, darling Vibration of the Mind Universal, that we sat together planning what we should represent at the Lemar's Book Party? It seems but yesterday! We decided that you would wear goggles and your college cap and gown, for you were to represent Science, and I, Health (trusting to my red cheeks, to treating the guests for Intelligence, and to silent affirmations that I was Health), to reveal the name of our book—the Mother's Book—and our Engagement! (Do you know, Beloved, they say the Mother has demonstrated an immense fortune out of her Words—really, three dollars and fifty cents to give for them is something fierce, isn't it?) Well, we were just finding a way to represent the Key (by putting ourselves in touch with the Way Universal), when your mother came in and asked the day of the month, and apologized for addressing us in English, adding sarcastically that she didn't speak Christian Science! Ah, my Own, I have to vehemently affirm that I am one with Love Omnipotent, Omnipresent, Omniscientific, every time I think of your mother. I begin each day by treating myself for Love and Non-resistance, and yet I must say your mother is without exception the most antagonistic old party I ever met! But then she is your mother—our mother—and All Is Love, and You are All—or almost All.

I hope my gift with a Key to the Scriptures will arrive safely and bring you the kisses I entrust to its wise care. How dear are the Mother's Words! Do you like kisses? Yours, with a Key to the Scriptures, would I could wear at my heart! It was so sweet of you not to select as the first manifestation of your Individual Love, some vulgar thing to dazzle the world, such as a grand piano. I would so much prefer having you simple, adorable Radiator of Hope, like Wisdom. Hold me in your Thought, as I hold you in mine—even as Thought (the Universal Mind)—holds us both to its breast! And come in to tea soon—soon.

P. S.—You remember, Bobby, don't you, Beloved? The poor child has such a frightful claim of superfluous flesh—actually, the neighborhood boys call him "the fat boy of the circus," but he is getting strongly in accord with the Principle of Life and will yet demonstrate his Freedom. Yesterday, Bobby was walking along with Ralph Hughes, when an unenlightened little street urchin yelled, 'Hello, Skinny! hello, Skinny! hello, Skinny!"

"Smash him!" suggested Ralph.

"Not on your life!' said Bobby. "He is giving me a Treatment!"

Isn't it touching to see such Belief in the Power of the Word as this child has? Did I tell you that we have given up the claim of mice? Yes. We are now entirely free from them!—Ethel Shackelford in "Life."

Chimmie Fadden on Company Promoting.

"I see by de poipers where a company dat is going to make birch-bark canoes—or is it go-carts?—by machinery, offers stock for toity-tree cents a share which is sure to pay one hundred per cent. on one hundred dollars a share. Dis proves how wonderful is de metods of modern finance. But dat is not what most excites my fancy. De same company says de same stock will be forty-seven cents in tree days, a dollar and six-bits in ten days, and will sell for two or tree hundred dollars inside of six monts. Dat being so, sir—and of course dey would not say so if it was not—I is filled wit astonishment dat dey lets de public in at toity-tree cents!"

"Dey may be philantropists," says Miss Fannie.

"I am not sure," says Mr. Paul. "De only ting sure about 'em is dat dey is not in jail; and a man out of jail may be anyting. Den dere is de oil companies wit spouting wells, pipe lines, and railroads, who is selling stock easy wort seven hundred dollars a share for from four to twenty cents. As de poet says, 'I often wonder what de vendors buy one-half so precious as de stuff dey sell.' "

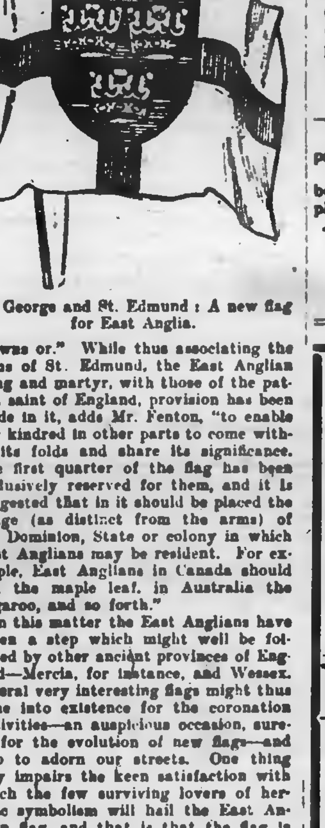
England's Royal Guests.

It is expected that more royal personages will be in London at the coronation than England has ever before seen together. When Victoria was crowned not a European court sent a representative with rank higher than ambassador extraordinary; but in the years between that occasion and her Jubilee the Queen fortified England against another such slight by becoming grandmother to most of the ruling monarchs of Europe. The accommodation of so much royalty is giving the Royal host some anxious moments. London has no such assortment of colossal royal palaces as most of the great European capitals. Marlborough House and Buckingham Palace will not lodge comfortably any save the privileged close relations of the King and Queen. It is said that a large hotel near Buckingham Palace has been taken for the King's guests, and that several noblemen have placed their London houses at King Edward's disposal. After the coronation week many of the royal guests will visit Windsor and Sandringham, and certain of the great country homes of England; so mighty preparations for elaborate entertaining are being made throughout the length and breadth of the land, as well as in London, and the amount of money that will be hospitably spent during the season is beyond ordinary calculation.

A New Flag.

It is a pleasant surprise, in these days of heraldic decadence, says The Daily Graphic, to find that a really handsome and correct new flag has come into existence. Our illustration shows the new East Anglian flag, adopted by the London Society of East Anglians in accordance with the recommendation of the committee appointed for the purpose of inventing such an ensign. "Mindful of the great traditions of East Anglia," says Mr. Charles Fenton, the Secretary, in a report on the flag, "it has been the endeavor of the committee to obtain a flag which should be especially associated with the old Kingdom of Engle, or Angle Land, from which England takes its name, and be also a worthy emblem of East Anglian energy."

The design of Mr. G. H. Langham, one of the members of the society, has been chosen—namely, the ensign of St. George, argent a cross gules, charged with an escutcheon bearing "the arms of St. Edmund—namely, azure three crowns or." While thus associating the arms of St. Edmund, the East Anglian King and martyr, with those of the patron saint of England, provision has been made in it, adds Mr. Fenton, "to enable our kindred in other parts to come within its folds and share its significance. The first quarter of the flag has been exclusively reserved for them, and it is suggested that in it should be placed the badge (as distinct from the arms) of the Dominion, State or colony in which East Anglians may be resident. For example, East Anglians in Canada should add the maple leaf, in Australia the kangaroo, and so forth."



St. George and St. Edmund: A new flag for East Anglia.

In this matter the East Anglians have taken a step which might well be followed by other ancient provinces of England—Mercia, for instance, and Wessex. Several very interesting flags might thus come into existence for the coronation festivities—an auspicious occasion, surely, for the evolution of new flags—and help to adorn our streets. One thing only impairs the keen satisfaction with which the few surviving lovers of heraldic symbolism will hail the East Anglian flag, and that is that the flag is not of the ancient square shape, but is of the odious modern "twice-as-long-as-high" form, so ill adapted for heraldic display. On a modern flag the cross of St. George is distorted in absurd fashion, the cross arms being longer than the shaft, whereas in the ancient banner the arms were at least of equal length. A perfectly square flag is a handsome enough object on a staff, as may be seen in the case of the German Imperial banner, which preserves the mediaeval form, and the name "banner," there correctly used, is a finer sounding word than flag. "The banner of East Anglia" is a better phrase than "the East Anglian flag."

Care of Horses' Feet.

Quarter cracks are generally occasioned either from improper shoeing, permitting the feet to become very dry by standing on hard, dry floors, paring away the bars and weakening the heels, burning the foot in shoeing or springing the shoe off at the heel. These causes produce contractions of the hoof, which becomes dry, loses its elasticity and finally cracks. In treating the object is to remove the contracted disposition in the hoof by rasping it at the quarters until an appearance of serum, after which let the crack be opened on both sides with a drawing knife, so that friction of the fractured parts may be avoided. Then rasp or cut out the bottom of that quarter which is cracked, so that no part of it may bear on the shoe. After the wall has been lowered, should the frog project below the bottom of the foot, pare it flat. By doing this the frog will grow wider and assist the foot in expanding. When the cracks occur well back at the heels it is sometimes necessary to protect the weak parts from concussion by applying a bar shoe.

Commence thinning the shoe at the centre of the quarters, carrying it off both toward the heel and toe, having the shoe light and the tear wide to obtain strong frog pressure. When the cracks occur opposite the wings of the coffin bone level the foot and shorten the toe as much as can well be done. If the crack occurs only on one side have the shoe cut off on the side of the crack so as not to extend quite to the latter. This will relieve the weak quarter of all the weight. If there are cracks on both sides of the hoof, shoe with a three-quarter tip. File or rasp the wall on both sides of the crack from coronet to ground surface as thin as can be done with safety. New growth of hoof can be promoted by keeping the hoof moist with cold water bandage around the coronet. Have the shoe removed every three weeks to prevent an excessive growth of horn.—N. J. Shepherd, in Twentieth Century Farmer.

Do not overlook buckwheat, especially where bees are kept. It will grow on poor land, and if not desired for its grain makes an excellent crop for ploughing under. It provides forage for bees at a time when many other plants are not in flower.

THE OPERATION FULLY DESCRIBED

Twenty-Two Ounces of Pus Removed Giving Great Relief

HOW THE WORK WAS DONE

There is Little Probability That any Relapse Will Occur to the Royal Patient

Special to The Times.

London, July 3.—A version of the operation on the King which is more hopeful than any yet given comes from a source which there is good reason to believe possesses positive knowledge on the subject.

According to this account the physicians all advised the operation a week earlier, but the King declined as long as possibility remained of carrying out the coronation programme. The operation itself, when it finally took place, occupied scarcely five minutes. It consisted of nothing more than the opening of the abscess within the abdominal cavity.

Stripped of technical language, what happened was this: Sir Frederick Treves made a quick incision about four inches long through the skin and a thick layer of adipose tissue to the abdominal muscles directly over the abscess, which had been correctly located by a digital examination.

An instrument resembling a blunt probe was then used to push through the muscles, without cutting them, into the pus sack within. A large quantity of pus was immediately released.

An instrument resembling a scissors with the outside instead of the inside blades sharpened, was then slid along the groove on the side of the probe into the abscess. This instrument was kept closed until the probe was withdrawn.

Then the so-called scissors was opened, making a free opening within the sack. The pus released by this means amounted to almost twenty-two ounces. The wound was thoroughly deluged with antiseptic solutions and a drainage tube was inserted.

The wound was then closed with sutures and the operation was completed. There was not even a free opening of the abdominal cavity and no attempt was made to examine or remove the vermiform appendix.

It was taken for granted that the abscess itself practically destroyed it and that no subsequent operation would be necessary.

HAVE INTESTINES BEEN DAMAGED.

A point in doubt was whether the intestines, aside from the appendix, had been damaged or degenerated by the abscess or inflammation. The doctors were as ignorant as anybody else on this point when they had finished.

It is almost a safe conclusion that the non-appearance of septic conditions within forty-eight hours after the operation was sufficient proof that no such disaster had occurred.

The operation above described is such as Sir Frederick Treves always performs in cases of acute appendicitis. When the abscess is found it is much simpler and shorter than the removal of the appendix.

During the quiescent period of the disease it is an operation which, according to Sir Frederick Treves' own statistics, proves fatal in 30 per cent. of cases, a far higher proportion than the removal of the appendix itself in non-acute cases, on account of the danger of blood poisoning.

END OF A CHINESE ROMANCE

Interesting Event to Take Place at Coney Island To-day

New York, July 4.—Gay, reckless, rollicking Coney Island has been the scene of all sorts of events, but never, perhaps, in its long and unique career, has the world-famous resort witnessed anything quite so quaint as the wedding scheduled for to-night at Gold Dollar's dancing pavilion, when little Miss Wee Lung Fong becomes the bride of Ling Foy, a wealthy magnate of Pell street. The marriage is the end of a romance which had its beginning in Hong Kong, and in which highbinders, kidnapping and ransom are freely intermingled.

The bride-to-be is a mere slip of a girl. Last February she was purchased from her father in her native land by an agent of Ling Foy, and brought here to become his bride. She was landed at Vancouver, B.C., and subsequently brought to New York. Shortly after her arrival here she was kidnapped by the highbinders and held for a ransom. From one city to another she was taken under guard. At every town where she stopped she was placed in a dark, dismal room, and kept under the closest surveillance. Ling Foy was furious over his loss, and spared no expense to recover his prospective bride. From New York to Boston she was traced with her abductors, thence to Philadelphia, and finally to Chicago, where she was located in an opium joint in South Clark street. After considerable negotiation Ling Foy paid her captors $500, and the girl was released and returned to New York.

Plans on an elaborate scale have been completed for the wedding ceremony. It will be conducted with all the ceremonies and weird rites known to the almond-eyed sons of the Flowery Kingdom. The bride will be gaily arrayed. Her tiny feet will be encased in satin shoes, and down the front of her satin bridal suit a gorgeous dragon will wander undulatingly. The master of ceremonies will be Marty Martin, the "Mayor of Chinatown," and the bridesmaids two white girls who have wedded Chinamen. At the conclusion of the ceremony the guests will be ushered into the dining-hall, where, under a thousand lanterns and garlands of paper flowers, the happy couple will be congratulated and feted and toasted until the rising of the morning sun. The bridegroom has promised his friends that the festal board will literally groan with its load of bird's-nest soup, shark-fin soup, specially prepared pigtails from porkers raised in China, rice wine and other things that tickle the palate and makes glad the heart of a Mongol sa.

PRIZE WON AND LOST

A Tragedy in Prose and Verse Without Much Metre

The following touching lines describe a modern tragedy in Peterborough high life. The spasm came to this great family journal in an official envelope, and bore no signature:

O, she was the belle of her toney set, a winsome and ravishing young brunette, with a pair of eyes that could read your thoughts and tie your affections all into knots. There wasn't a fellow in Big Bug street, but had laid his heart at her shapely feet; and she kept them guessing, those hearts a-thump, which way the kitten would some day jump. But one there was, he a scheming chap, and he set for his game an enticing trap in the shape of a rig with a "record" horse, that skimmed o'er the ground with rapid force, and his rivals were wallowing in dismay, when they saw the couple one balmy day spin forth like a streak for a country ride, on her face a picture of new-born pride, and his rivals muttered in worst of moods, "Our name is Dennis! He's got the goods!"

And o'er the country roads they went
In high-grade rapture spinning;
Both in a dream of sweet content,
Spasmodically grinning.

They talked of this and they talked of that, she through her bonnet and he through his hat; he whispered lies of the genius white, she swallowed them in her new delight. Upon the lines her hand he placed to guide the horse, and round her waist his arm like a noiseless serpent crawled and closer to him her form he hauled. He breathed in her ears the usual words that lovers toss to the dickey birds, and she responded in tones so sweet, each sugared sentence seemed good to eat. He'd won the prize, and his soul was filled with joy till the foam o'er the edges spilled, and she was happy to think she'd force to win a fellow that owned a horse, and the jaybirds chattered and rustic cows bawled hoarse hoorays to their fresh sealed vows.

And on they sped, of their sense bereft,
So tightly did Cupid bind 'em,
Some seventeen miles behind 'em.

Then the clouds came up and the rain came down and sprinkled its tears on her new spring gown, then changed from a drizzle to a falling flood, and the road was a channel of slush and mud, and the horse stopped in rebellious mood—like a balky mule in the roadway stood. And there they sat in the worst of storms, with no umbrella to shield their forms, and they got as soaked on their dizzy perch as a new convert in the Baptist church, and their love was chilled by the rainy slush, till it grew impassive as cold fried mush. 'Twas full two miles to a Lakefield town, and with scowling features he helped her down, and off they trudged through the muddy lane in the pitiless pour of the blawsted rain, her eyes all chafed with the tears she shed, his lips calcined with the things he said, and they learned at the station with souls aghast, that the last dummed train for the day had passed.

And approached her with new endeavor,
For the language used on that soggy trip,
Queered him with her forever!

Very early in the development of electric traction it was predicted that the use of the horse would ultimately decrease and perhaps disappear. Electric traction has now, however, been brought to a high degree of perfection, and yet the horse is still with us. Notwithstanding this, statistics show, we are assured editorially by the "Electrical Review" (April 19), that the horse is going—slowly, perhaps, but none the less surely. Says this paper:

"Some interesting statistics lately published by our lively French contemporary, 'La Locomotion Automobile,' show that in Europe the horse is rapidly disappearing in the various large cities. For example, in Paris the total number of horses in 1901, according to a municipal census of these animals, was 96,695, while this year it is only 90,796, a falling-off of about six per cent. In London, in the same period, the equine population has decreased ten per cent., while in Berlin, Vienna, and even in St. Petersburg, the same falling-off exhibits itself. This is partly due to the new trolley-roads, and very largely to the numerous and continual increase in the number of automobiles used both for pleasure and business.

"In this country the supersession of the horse by the trolley-car has been absolutely astonishing in its extent. Probably to-day in New York there are not more than two-thirds as many horses employed as were used twenty years ago. So far, the automobile appears to have made no great inroads into the horse business, and it is likely that the extension of the use of automobiles will have to wait upon the growth of more scientific ideas regarding street-paving and road-making. However, the decadence of the horse is upon us, and his disappearance may be looked for sooner or later.

"As certainly as anything can be predicted the progress of engineering advance will totally extinguish the horse as a beast of burden. We may look forward with certainty and satisfaction to the day when cities at least will be horseless and when we will be removed from the tyranny of this animal, which has imposed upon us stone-paved streets, unending dirt, and, curiously enough, the house-fly—an insect dependent upon the existence of stables for its birth and breeding. What the future of the horse will be is hard to say. It is likely that horses will continue for centuries to come to be used as instruments of sport and pleasure, but the day of their emancipation from hard labor in the streets and roads is not far distant."

Earthquakes and Causes.

One of the most disastrous earthquakes of recent times is that reported from Russian Transcaucasia. The town of Shamaka has been practically destroyed, only a dozen houses being left standing, while a population of 25,000 has been rendered homeless. The number of fatalities is as yet unknown. Over 300 bodies had been recovered at the latest accounts.

To the student of seismic phenomena, says the San Francisco "Chronicle," the interesting and suggestive feature in the Shamaka earthquake is that it has occurred in the neighborhood of the Baku oil district—the most productive field in the world, not excepting that of Beaumont, in Texas. It is, furthermore, a section of the world which has hitherto been exempt from these phenomena. The scientific enquirer will naturally search for a cause, for cause and effect go together in the scientific analysis of all phenomena. Is the great natural oil reservoir tapped by the oil wells of Baku, on the shores of the Caspian Sea, located under the site of Shamaka, and has the tremendous drain of mineral oil from the same caused a void and a subsequent shrinkage in the earth's crust in that neighborhood? The enquiry is not far-fetched. It is usually assumed that water takes the place of the oil withdrawn from the measures, filling the vacuum created by the latter's withdrawal, but if the water, being more tenuous, should find an independent vent elsewhere, the vacuum created by the draining of the mineral oil would remain, and a shrinkage of the unsupported crust of the earth would naturally follow sooner or later.

It has been suggested that the tapping of the oil measures in the southern part of California has relieved the mineral oil-bearing formations from the pressure of the gas created in them, and the possible subterranean gas explosions produced by excessive pressure, and thus removed one of the supposed causes of earthquakes in that section. There may be nothing in the theory, but it has been observed that the Los Angeles district has been notably exempt from seismic disturbances since the oil measures were tapped and vent given to the gases generated in them. Likewise, the theory that the Shamaka earthquake was due to the drain on the petroleum reservoirs in the Caucasus by the Baku wells may be entirely at fault. But the two phenomena seem to invite the attention of the scientist, and open a new field for the study of seismic disturbances.

Bees in War!

We do not know that bees have ever been recognized as among the accessories of war, but there is an old army story current in the Southern States of a party who were out scouting or foraging, probably both, one morning, and saw a much larger party of the enemy's cavalry riding down on them. It was useless to retreat across an open plain, for the horses could go faster than they, while to surrender meant a fate but little better or perhaps a little worse than death. They gathered behind a wall or embankment, resolved to sell their lives as dearly as possible, when one of their number spied a stand of beehives a little way behind them. Quickly he communicated his idea to his comrades, and enough ran back to each to seize a hive and throw it over the wall in front of them. Very quickly those bees were at work as busily as if they had been sworn into the service, and while the riders might have faced them, the horses would not, but were soon in full retreat a half mile away. Some of the boys got stung in trying to send missiles more powerful than bee stings after the enemy, but they all reached camp again soon without needing the surgeon's care.

THE GIRL OF THE PEOPLE

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

deal table, spread with a few common dishes and a tin or two; there were three or four rough wooden chairs; a big box, heaped with a strange medley of cooking utensils and women's outdoor wraps; a mantelshelf, littered with odds and ends; and a kitchen range, into which a woman, with her back turned to me, was throwing a few coals from a battered shovel.

"May, 'ere's a lydy to see you," brusquely announced my guide. The woman turned, shovel in hand. My eyes sought her face wistfully, imploringly, for the one gleam of hope left. But the last flicker died as our eyes met. No subtle voice of nature cried out in my heart: "This is your mother; you are of one flesh and blood." She was a tall, thin woman, who might once have been pretty, even ladylike-looking in better days, but there was hardly a vestige of past beauty remaining, though in years she was not really old. Her scanty, grizzled hair was pulled carelessly back from a lined forehead. Her small mouth had a fretful droop; slightly open, in surprise at sight of the visitor, it showed that one front tooth was gone. The cheeks were hollowed in, the well-cut nose sharpened, the complexion of the uniform, faded gray most fashionable in East street among those who were not over-florid. She wore a rusty black dress, and a colored cotton handkerchief was tied round the thin throat instead of a collar.

My tongue clove to the roof of my mouth. It seemed physically impossible to tell her who I was, to ask her if she were not my mother. But they were both waiting for my explanations. I had to speak. "I—I hope——" A few lame words had come stammeringly, when the elder of the two broke in. "If you're one of those district visitors, why, I can just tell you as I told the last one, that you ain't wanted here," she said, acidly, with a rather better accent than the girl's.

"I—my name is Cope," I stammered. "At least, I always thought it was until to-day."

Still she stared at me, with little, if any, awakening comprehension in her eyes. I blundered desperately on.

"Perhaps, if you don't know what I mean it may be a mistake after all. But Lady Cope is dead. I was brought up to believe her my mother, and now——"

Suddenly the woman's pale face changed and reddened with a vivid flush. The small fire-shovel she had been grasping slid out of her hand and fell to the floor with a metallic crash.

"My goodness, gracious me!" she ejaculated, with a gasp. "It's Jenny."

A faint shiver ran through me. I was not even "Sheila" any more. I was "Jenny."

"I heard to-day that—that——" I faltered.

I could not go on. But she took up the words with a shy, awkward sort of eagerness, as if she were half-afraid of me; while the girl stood by, wide-eyed and dumb in bewilderment. "Did they tell you the whole story? Did they tell you who I was, and all?"

"Sir Roger Cope told me that you were—my mother," I said, dully.

"Well, I never. He told you that! And after Lady Cope making me swear I'd never breathe a word to a soul as long as I lived."

"Oh, ma, it ain't true, is it?" cried the girl. "She ain't my sister?"

"Hold your tongue and mind your own business," was the sharp answer, and I felt, rather than saw, the flounce of her poor skirts and the toss of her tousled head that the girl gave.

The woman looked keenly at me, her face still flushed and excited, half-suspicious; but she did not take a step nearer.

"I don't think Lady Cope meant me to be told," I answered, choking back a sob. "But Roger knew from the first. Moth—Lady Cope only died a few days ago, though it seems a long, long time."

"You heard to-day, and you came straight here to see me," said my newly-found mother, reflectively. "Well, that was very good of you, my dear, that it was. I only wish I had a better house for you to come to. But I haven't had any luck. Totsey, get the young lady a chair. Dear me, I wonder now if you'd let me make you a cup of tea?"

She still spoke to me as to a stranger of another class from hers, a visitor who must be entertained. She was nervous, and suddenly she became a pathetic figure in my eyes, though I had no stirrings of love. Perhaps this was unnatural, hard-hearted. I cannot help that, for I must paint the picture truly.

I could have screamed or broken into hysterics as Totsey rather sullenly placed a chair for me; but I almost fell into it.

"Is—is it possible that this is my sister?" I forced myself to ask.

"Your half-sister," was the quick reply, as if there were relief in responding to definite questions. "After Lady Cope adopted you—it was hard enough to part with my only one, I can tell you, my dear, but what was I to do?—after she took you away I married again. 'Twas the only thing to do, for I wasn't the sort of woman to be left alone. I had two girls by my second husband, a very different sort of man from your father. I thought, though he was but a rough fellow compared to him, he'd be a protector. But 'twasn't long before I found out it was the money he was after—the money Lady Cope gave me when she took you."

So I had been sold for a price! was the thought that darted through my mind. But I was silent, listening.

As she went on there was a loud noise in the passage outside the door. The handle turned. I started and turned round. What was to come now?

CHAPTER IX.

Home, Sweet Home.

A big, black-eyed girl in a coarse blue dress, with a large hat trimmed with feathers, bounced into the room, but paused at sight of me. This, I was sure, was my other half-sister. She was older than "Totsey," quite a young woman in appearance, and had the [illegible]

County Police Court

Four cases against Mr. George Stevens, the well known junk man, for using a measure that was not stamped with the Government stamp, came before Police Magistrate Edminson at Norwood yesterday. The measure was used by Mr. Stevens' men in buying ashes. The first case was dismissed and judgment on the other three reserved.

A Midsummer Wedding

The home of Mr. George Long, Ashburnham was yesterday afternoon the scene of a pretty home wedding, when his daughter, Miss Maud, was united in marriage to Mr. W. Peace, of Toronto. The nuptial knot was tied by Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, rector of St. Luke's. The bride was attended by Miss Mary McWha and the groom was supported by Mr. Robert Long, brother of the bride. The happy couple will reside in Toronto.

AT THE POLICE COURT

Three Cases Disposed of Yesterday by Magistrate Dumble

There were three cases disposed of at the Police Court yesterday.

Bert. Hunt, who was charged with assault, was fined $2 and costs.

B. J. Brady, who faced the court on a charge of using profane language, was assessed $2 and costs.

Hector Baker, a young man was sentenced to three months in jail for robbing cloth lines.

SCIENTIFIC FEEDING

And Exercise Solves the Problem

Dr. H. L. Warner, in a recent issue of the New York World says:

"Only a small percentage of the American people have perfect digestion and assimilation of food and the elimination of the waste matters of the body. In the matter of food and exercise, the whole problem of health is contained. By making these right, we can create perfect health.

Digestive disturbances are due either to improper food or too much or too little proper food. With proper food taken in reasonable amounts, the imperfect actions of the various processes are corrected.

This is not a fad but a fact established by the researches of pathologists and bacteriologists. The actions of foods on the digestive and assimilative organs is known exactly. The result to the blood and through it to the whole system is certain and definite."

The most highly nutritive food now manufactured is Grape-Nuts. It is made from certain parts of the grain and put through a mechanical process whereby the starches are changed to grape sugar and the phosphates of the cereals retained and thus supply the necessary nourishment and vitality to the body, brain and nerve centers.

In its predigested form, Grape-Nuts does not overtax the stomach, but renders sufficient assistance to the digestive organs to permit of the easy assimilation of other food.

Thoroughly cooked at the factory by food experts, brings Grape-Nuts from the grocer to you ready to serve with the addition of cream, and its crisp taste with the delicate sweet of the grape sugar, makes it pleasing to the palate of the most critical epicure.

These are scientific facts which can be proven by anyone and a trial of ten days or two weeks will show what you can do on scientific feeding.

The recipe book in the package shows many delightful ways of serving the food.

A HOUSE OF REFUGE

Police Magistrate Dumble Writes on the Subject to the Council

The appended letter has been received by the Town Clerk from Mr. D. W. Dumble, Police Magistrate:

Peterborough, July 3, 1902

S. B. Armstrong, Esq., Clerk of the Town of Peterborough—

Dear Sir,—You will remember that some months ago I wrote to the town drawing their attention to the Criminal Code Amendment Act of 1900, which provides—"That no aged or infirm person shall be convicted as a loose, idle or disorderly person or vagrant in the county of which he has been for the two years immediately preceding been a resident." There is now in the jail at Peterborough one, John Evans, whose only crime is that he is infirm, a paralytic. His term of imprisonment will expire in a day or two and under the law in force since January 1st, 1901, I am not permitted to convict this man as a vagrant and send him back to jail. I recently wrote the Provincial Secretary a letter in these words: "You may remember that some time ago I spoke to you about a man, called John Evans, who is in jail as a vagrant. The man is a son of Evans, the stone cutter. He is paralyzed and is not fit to be kept in jail. You intimated that there was some more fitting place where he might be kept. This morning I remanded him for ten days and if in the meanwhile you can get him entrance to some home for incurables or House of Providence it would be well. If you will kindly bear this matter in mind, and if possible act on the matter within ten days I will be greatly obliged." To which I received this morning the following answer: "In reply to your favour of the 27th inst. in reference to John Evans, a paralytic, who has been committed to the jail at Peterborough under the Vagrancy Act. It is true that the gaol is not suitable for the care of this invalid. Dr. Chamberlain Inspector of Prisons, thinks that the man should be sent to one of the homes for incurables; otherwise he should be sent to one of the Houses of Providence or to a county House of Refuge. As the Homes for Incurables are not Government institutions, but are under the management of private individuals, his admission to such would require that some person undertake to pay for his care and maintenance. If he has no means or friends who can afford to pay for him, the municipality should see that he is sent to one of the institutions I have named and pay for his maintenance therein."

Under these circumstances this man Evans will be turned out on the street unless he is provided for as suggested by the Hon., the Provincial Secretary. Humanity demands that this poor fellow should be cared for and as I have no means of providing for him I respectfully suggest to the Mayor and Council that they should take upon themselves the duty of making some provision for him.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
D. W. DUMBLE,
Police Magistrate

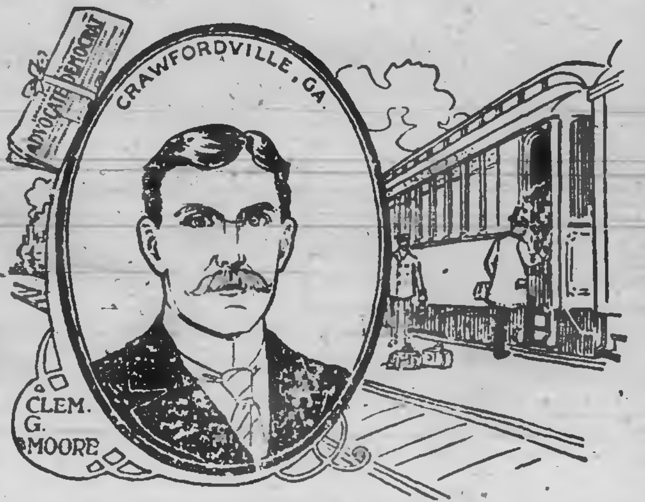
Nearly Drowned

Hastings Star: When the steamer Rainbow was leaving Harwood for Jubilee with an excursion on Thursday last, one of the excursionists, J. Mooney, fell overboard, and if it had not been for the prompt action of the mate of the boat, Mr. Albert Young, would likely have drowned. Mr. Young deserves a great deal of credit for his timely action as he launched the lifeboat, and with only a pikepole reached the drowning man, and then, by his presence of mind, regardless of the rough sea, restored him to consciousness by his promptness in putting him through the regular rules of restoration, doing so over the seat of the skiff.

FOR SYSTEMIC CATARRH

Peculiar to Summer Pe-ru-na Gives Prompt and Permanent Relief.



Clem G. Moore, Editor of the Advocate-Democrat of Crawfordsville, Ga., write the Peruna Medicine Company as follows:

Gentlemen—"After four years of intense suffering, caused by systemic catarrh, which I contracted while editing, and traveling for my paper, I have been greatly relieved by the use of Peruna. I gave up work during these years of torture, tried various remedies and many doctors, but all the permanent relief came from the use of Peruna. My trouble was called indigestion, but it was catarrh all through my system, and a few bottles of Peruna made me feel like another person, noting the improvement after I had used the first bottle. Peruna is undoubtedly the best catarrh remedy ever compounded.—CLEM G. MOORE.

Judge Wm. T. Zenor, of Washington, D. C., writes from 213 N. Capital Street, Washington, D. C.:

"I take pleasure in saying that I can cheerfully recommend the use of Peruna as a remedy for catarrhal trouble and a most excellent tonic for general conditions."—Wm. T. Zenor.

Mrs. Amanda Morrill, 136 Reid street, Elizabeth, N. J., writes:

"I have been sick over two years with nervous prostration and general debility, and heart trouble Have had four doctors; all said that I could not get well. I had not walked a step in nine months, suffering with partial paralysis and palpitation of the heart every other day, and had become so reduced in flesh as to be a mere skeleton weighing only 85 pounds.

"Up to this date I have taken Peruna for seven months. It has saved my life as I can safely testify. I have not felt so well in five years, having walked over one mile without ill result, and have also gained thirty pounds since commencing to take Peruna. In fact, I cannot praise it too highly."—Mrs. Amanda Morrill.

Peruna never fails to prevent systemic catarrh or nervous prostration if taken in time. Peruna is the most prompt and permanent cure for all cases of nervous prostration caused by systemic catarrh known to the medical profession.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

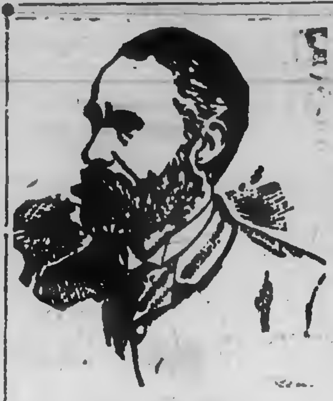
THE POLITICAL OUTLOOK POINTS TO COALITION

Regarded Now as More Probable Than Ever Before

Lines on Which a Coalition Government is Possible

How Mr. Ross and the Liberals Lack in the Bye Elections

The Two Parties So Near Equal That it Makes Coalition Probable



HON. G. W. ROSS.

Toronto, July 6.—The excitement in political circles caused by the turn-over in Lennox is not subsiding, and gives rise to considerable speculation as to the future. The announcement made in The Times a few days ago regarding the prospects of a coalition government being formed is likely to be borne out by facts before very long. Mr. Ross, however, will only consent to an arrangement of this kind on certain conditions.

The Times' correspondent learned yesterday from a gentleman high up in political authority, that the Government will only consent to a coalition on condition that the present officeholders throughout the Province will not be disturbed, and that in future an even distribution will be made as they occur. In the meantime the Liberals are disposed to await the outcome of the protests and the bye-elections that are sure to follow. That North Grey will go Conservative is regarded by many Liberals as probable, in which event Mr. Ross would be in a minority. This, however, will not affect the situation, as it is fair to assume that if the Liberals are unable to carry on the government, the Conservatives are in nowise more able to do so.

It all depends, therefore, on the result of the protests. If the protests do not place either party stronger than they are at present, a coalition will follow. It is either this or another general election.

The Toronto papers have not referred to the coalition movement for the simple reason that they have, I am told, been asked not to do so at present, as the subject is only in its embryo stages.

The matter is, however, fairly well advanced, and will be submitted to Mr. Ross as soon as he returns from England. Should a coalition be formed, it is understood that the Premier will get the Lieutenant-Governorship as soon as Sir Oliver Mowat's time has expired. Hon. Mr. Stratton, Harcourt, and probably Gibson, may stay in the new Government. The coalition movement could be effected in short order if Mr. Whitney would consent to stand aside from the premiership, and a new man, outside of the present Provincial political leader, selected. In this connection Sir Wm. Meredith's name has been mentioned, but it is said that he will not consent to re-enter the political arena. Hon. Mr. Stratton, who is regarded by both political parties as the mostaggressive man in the House, might undertake to form a coalition cabinet, but this would not suit Mr. Whitney, even if he were offered a portfolio.

THROUGH BOER WAR WITH THE BRITISH

Stephen Talbot, 19 Years Old, Served With the British

HOME AGAIN AFTER THREE YEARS

He Says Some of It was Very Mild Fighting Indeed—His Account of the Way the War was Waged

Three years ago Stephen Talbot, the sixteen-year-old boy, son of Mr. Hiram Talbot, formerly with the Canadian General Electric Company, Peterborough, left his home and went to New York, where he secured a position on a cattle ship, when he went to London, where he joined the British army and served for three years in South Africa. He had no end of experiences.

He returned home lately, having been discharged from the army a few months ago, and told some of his experiences to a Times reporter.

"When I got to London on the cattle steamer I was broke," he said. "I was hungry as blazes and was eating a banana while walking along the street when a fellow who evidently saw that I was hungry stopped me and asked me if I didn't want to join the army.

"I hadn't had any idea of doing that but I was so hungry that I asked him if I'd get enough to eat. He said I would, so I went right off with him and enlisted.

"The regiment I joined was the First Leinsters, and after a stay of six months in Ireland and two months in Aldershot we were shipped to Cape Town. The first day we were there we were placed on guard over the 1,000 Boer prisoners who were camped in the racecourse.

"While we were on guard it was discovered that some of the Boers had begun to tunnel into the town from the enclosure, and had a good long hole dug. Knapsacks bearing the names of three of them were found in the excavation and their owners were shipped away in a hurry.

"During my stay in Cape Town and later in the country I had a good chance to see how a cook can rule officers. The cook for the officers' mess was the man who had acted in the same capacity on board the transport which took us to South Africa. He was a good cook and the officers persuaded him to give up his job and come with them.

"He was an ex-prize fighter and wasn't afraid of any of them. There was a young Lieutenant named Cameron in the regiment who was about 16 years old and was very self-important. He used to practise saying 'Waitah, bring me a drink,' in his tent until he got his nerve and one day used the phrase to the cook.

"The man didn't pay any attention to him. Cameron attempted to call him down for his inattention and the cook gave him the greatest talking to I ever heard. He asked Cameron if his mother knew he was out and several other things not exactly respectful.

"Cameron made a kick to his Colonel, but nothing was done about the breach of discipline as the cook was the only good culinary artist in the vicinity and they couldn't afford to lose him.

"The men of the regiment were mostly Irishmen and had a fondness for getting drunk. There was a crowd of about fifteen drunk somewhere in camp every night, and when they became too noisy the officers ordered them to be crucified.

"That is a punishment I never heard of before. A long plank was set upon uprights about five and a half high parallel to the ground. The men were backed up against it and their arms outstretched and tied to the plank. There they were left until morning, and it was no easy punishment.

"After a couple of months with the Regulars I found that I was making only one shilling a day while the Volunteers were getting six shillings. A lot of us talked it over in camp and made up our minds to desert and join the Volunteers; so we did.

"Fourteen of us changed regiments and only one was caught. He was recognized seven months later and got nine months in prison.

"The Volunteer regiment I was in was sent out into Cape Colony. The regiment was a good deal different from the Regulars and was composed of the worst lot of bums and hoboes I ever saw. A good many of them were deserters from the ships that came into Cape Town and there was a lot of mule tenders in it.

"It wasn't much of a regiment. Its Colonel was an M.P., and was so afraid he might do something that would bring discredit upon him and spoil his chances for reelection that he didn't dare to chase the enemy, engage them or do very much of anything.

"When he was supposed to be chasing the Boers he would advance until he heard that they were only a little distance in front and then he would stop. On a couple of occasions he accidentally ran on some of them and he didn't like that a bit so he retreated.

"With a Colonel like that it is no wonder that we didn't see much fighting. He didn't want to hurt the Boers and they didn't want to injure us. After a few little skirmishes prisoners told us that they were mighty sorry that they had to hurt some of us and that they wouldn't have done it if they could have helped it.

"There was a little town inland which the Boers held and which I suppose we were sent to capture. The actions around that town were funny.

"Whenever the Colonel wanted to go in and take supplies to the inhabitants he sent word to the Boers to leave for a little while and they all got out. Then the English would go in and deliver the supplies. If they didn't do it quickly enough the Boers would send in word that they were coming back and our Colonel would get out in a hurry.

"The Boers captured two of our men there and told them, after keeping them a couple of days, that they might go back to their camp if they would carry a note to the Colonel. They agreed. The note told the Colonel to chain the two men up, as they ate so much food that the Boers could not afford to feed them.

"Finally the Generals learned how much good our Colonel was and we were ordered back to Cape Town where, he was deposed and Col. Price put in command.

"He was better than his predecessor, but not a great deal better. On one occasion we were camped at night on a ridge on a farm. In the morning the sentry saw about eighty Boers sleeping in a cornfield near-by. There were 500 of us, so Price made up his mind that he could take a chance and attack them.

"He ordered us to go around to another ridge and to fire down on them from there. There wasn't any order in the way the men went and the first man to gain the ridge began to fire.

"That let the Boers know that they were being attacked and they made a rush to get away without trying even to get their horses. They had to pass right in front of the English in their flight and we had a fine time firing at them as they went by. In spite of that we hit only one and he got away.

"Their horses stampeded and followed them. The rush excited two of our horses which were carrying boxes of Maxim cartridges and they ran over and joined the Boer horses.

"One of our Captains, named Farrington and three or four men chased out to get them. Farrington was terribly unpopular among the men and while he was trying to regain the horses he was shot through the legs and later both of them had to be amputated.

"The reports said that the Boers fired the shots that did it, but I know better. He was shot by some of the men on our side who hated him and were ready to do almost anything to be rid of him.

"One of the men who went out with him to capture the horses had his mount shot under him. That fixed it so he could not run away and he held his ground. Later he was rewarded for his bravery in not running.

"One can get a pretty good idea of the reason the Volunteer officers were not more ambitious, from a conversation I heard between some officers and Boer prisoners. The Boers asked the Englishmen how long the war would last. The officers answered that it would go on about three years.

"They said that they were satisfied with their jobs. They didn't have to work very hard and were drawing better pay than they could get at home at work, so they didn't want to do anything to help end the war.

"The men were willing enough to fight as a rule, but I know only one Volunteer officer who really tried his best to conquer the enemy. He was named Davis and worked for all he was worth. When he found a man that was not fighting in an engagement Davis would sail in, punch the laggard and make him fight.

"I don't want you to think that all the officers were Englishmen, though. Most of them in my regiment were Scotchmen, and in the ranks there were men of almost every nationality, with not a great many English.

"The news of all this shirking never got into the papers. All reports had to be censored, and the censor fixed it all so that one might think the regiment was doing great work.

"The worst regiment I saw in South Africa was the Sixth Worcestershire. In it there were hardly a dozen men who were over 18 and they didn't know how to shoot a gun—that is some of them didn't.

"When they got to Cape Town they were the laughing stock of the place. About eighty of them went to the hospital the first day, and there was nothing worse than toothache or stomach ache the matter with any of them.

"That regiment was sent out to guard a line of blockhouses. One day a sentry reported that he saw something in the distance, so the detachment at that point, about eighty men, went out to investigate without thinking to take their guns. They didn't find any Boers during their investigating tour, but when they came back to the blockhouse they found that the Boers were there and had captured all their ammunition and guns.

"The Boers told them to get out or they would get hurt, so they went back to the Colonel and reported. Many of them were crying like babies about the sad affair.

"The loss of several blockhouses was reported at the headquarters at Stormberg and Bergersdorf, which were on either side of the blockhouses. Armored trains were sent out from each place to try and regain them. The trains collided on the single track and twenty-seven were killed.

"Once when our regiment was in camp near a farm the sentries were stationed on a ridge. I was sent out to relieve one of them and couldn't find him anywhere.

"Finally I saw a bunch of Boers a little distance off carrying the sentry away. Evidently he had been lying down smoking when they came on him and took his gun away.

"I gave the alarm and I never saw anything like the actions that followed. The officers all ran into the farmhouse and lay low. The men when they saw what the officers had done took to the barns and the Boers came on.

"Then the officers sent word by a servant to the men in the barn telling them to come out. They were willing enough to do that if they had any officers, so they charged and the Boers ran away.

"About the funniest thing in the whole campaign was our allowance of winter clothing. All I got was a pair of sox, coat and trousers and a set of underclothing. All I got was a pair of shoe laces and a chin strap for my cap.

"We didn't fare badly, though. We didn't get much food from the authorities but we did have permission to forage and take anything in sight, so we came out pretty well.

"About six months ago they found they didn't need a good many men so they weeded them out and sent a lot home. They found that I had bad teeth from eating army biscuits and that my heart was weak, so I was discharged.

"I was sent back to London, and there the Government gave me a ticket home in the steerage, so after all I haven't any complaint to make about the way I was treated."

LORD SALISBURY'S BECOMING ABSENT MINDED CAUSES RUMOR OF RESIGNATION

During the Last Few Months He Has More and More Detached Himself from Cares of Office

Colonial Conference Outlook Not Very Bright, No Conclusions in the Immediate Future

Special to The Times.

London, July 5.—At the earliest possible moment Lord Salisbury contemplates retiring from public life, but that severance from the affairs of the Empire, which he has so long administered, is not likely to come until after the coronation it my possibly be still further delayed by now unseen reasons of state or politics.

During the past few months the Premier has more and more detached himself from the cares of office. With increasing age, his dislike of publicity and dread of details, which high office-holding, involves, have been strengthened into an antipathy, so strong as to render the Conservative leaders less importune in their demands that he remain Premier.

Those who have recently been brought into contact with the aged statesman privately comment on his absent-mindedness which is only overcome by great effort when it is absolutely necessary for him to deliver a public utterance on a question of importance.

One of those intimately associated with the Premier throughout his political career, more so, perhaps, than any other person, said to a representative of the Associated Press today:

"I suppose that no one can have failed to notice that Lord Salisbury lately has seemed to be slipping more and more away from public life. The reports of his failing mentality are largely exaggerated, but for a long time it has been an open secret that he is extremely anxious to retire. I do not know any reason for believing he will announce his determination in the immediate future, but I fear it is only a matter of a short time, perhaps after the coronation."

London, July 6.—After two meetings of the Colonial Premiers there does not seem to be a prospect of reaching any conclusions in the immediate future. The question of imperial defence was first considered by the distinguished visitors Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Premier of Canada, and Sir John Gordon Sprigg, the Prime Minister of Cape Colony, appear to differ materially from Edmund Barton, the Premier of Australia, and Richard J. Seddon, Prime Minister of New Zealand, as to what the colonies ought to do.

Dick's Ready Tongue.

Mr. Seddon is being constantly employed as spokesmen both in and out of the councils, and this has given rise to no little jealousy among his brother Premiers. Canadian circles openly express dissatisfaction, and declare that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is not being treated with the deference due to a man whose Imperial statesmanship is so universally admired.

Scrapped with Joseph.

In the fight against the suspension of the constitution of Cape Colony, Sir John Gordon Sprigg had the tacit support of all the Colonial Premiers who feared that the suspension might create a precedent most dangerous to their constituencies. It is said that before the Premier of Cape Colony attained his purpose, unusually sharp passages occurred between himself and Mr. Chamberlain the Colonial Secretary.

Hits at Milner.

The decision of the British Cabinet not to suspend Cape Colony's constitution is taken to be a serious blow to Lord Milner's prestige. The latter openly opposed the Premier, and Sir John's victory is not likely to improve relations which are already strained.

CONSTITUTION STANDS.

Cape Town, July 5.—Lord Milner the British High Commissioner in South Africa, has received a despatch announcing that the Imperial government decided against the proposal to suspend the constitution of Cape Colony.

The Imperial Government has notified the acting Premier that the Colonial parliament should be assembled as speedily as possibly.

A BABY UNDER THE TRAIN

Distressing Accident at Orillia the Other Day

The following taken from the Orillia News-Letter should prove a salutary warning to persons entrusted with the care of children in public places. Almost every day, infants, left in brakeless carriages in front of George street stores are saved by passers-by from being dumped off the high pavement into the gutter, and on one occasion, a little over a week ago, the child fell under the feet of a horse standing at the curb and had a miraculous escape from being trampled to death by the frightened animal. The News-Letter says:

A sad accident marred the holiday in Orillia, at the railway depot at half-past four yesterday afternoon, when Marguerite Pretoria, the two-year-old daughter of Mrs. J. H. Holmes, of Toronto, lost an arm, and miraculously escaped death. A guest for the holiday was Mrs. Hodgerson, of Kirkfield, and Mrs. Holmes was at the depot to say good-bye to her visitor, who was to leave on the Midland train going south. The daughter, who is her only child, was sitting in a small go-cart near the baggage room, three or four yards from the edge of the platform, when the train pulled in, and her mother was standing near by. Suddenly a gust of wind swept across the corner of the baggage room and swept the go-cart with its occupant across the platform and onto the edge of the track. When the front wheels went down the cart threw the infant forward and the strap of the cart broke. The child fell on the track with its head and one arm across the rail. Simultaneously the train pulled up about half a foot to allow the engine to draw water and the front wheel of the coach crushed the child's arm to a jelly from the elbow down. There was quite a large number of people on the platform and they were horrified.

The child was removed to Mrs. Tresidder's residence. Drs. Ardagh and Harvey amputated the arm below the shoulder and this morning the child's recovery is doubtful, but we hope for the best.

KING TO BE CROWNED WITHIN SIX WEEKS.

King Passes Another Excellent Night.

London July 5. The following bulletin regarding King Edward's condition was posted at Buckingham Palace at 10 o'clock this morning:

His Majesty had another excellent night. He is cheerful and feels much stronger. We are glad to state that we consider the King out of danger. The evening bulletins, will, therefore, be discontinued.

(Signed)
Treves.
Laking.
Barlow

The big function, the King's dinner to 500,000 poor, was fittingly celebrated today as a thing of joy for the recovery of the King. His mind was ever with the people during his illness. Before the operation he declared, "I will go to the Abbey if I have to be carried there," and his constant worry was, "What will my people do?"

London, July 5.—A number of coronation rumors are current. The optimists say King Edward will be quietly crowned six weeks hence. However, the court authorities have been consulting the business world, with the view of ascertaining public interests prior to making any definite arrangements.

The proprietor of one of the largest hotels in London urged that the beginning of October would suit the populace best. He pointed out that the King could not possibly be well enough to undertake any ceremony until August, when society will be shooting in Scotland, the working classes will be enjoying their holiday and London will be deserted. This condition prevails up to the end of September.

By October 1 also hundreds of Americans and others who are now visiting the Continent will be passing through the metropolis on their way home. Already many of the previous disappointed persons have secured options on rooms for the end of September in anticipation of seeing the coronation. It seems likely that the crowning will occur somewhere about that time, but with little or no pageant, however.

KING EDWARD FEASTS THE POOR OF LONDON

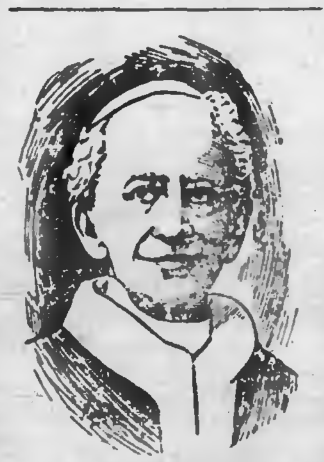
His Majesty Carries out This Part of the Programme

London, July 5.—The "King's Dinner" to London's "submerged tenth" took place to-day. It was the only feature of the original coronation programme not abandoned by reason of the King's illness. Ever mindful of the welfare and happiness of his subjects, even in the face of death, His Majesty made a special request that the dinner to the poor be given as planned.

It is doubtful if history records anything like a parallel of to-day's feast. No single structure in all London could be found large enough to accommodate the army of diners, so a score of immense halls located in various parts of the metropolis were employed for the occasion. Upwards of half a million men, women and children were fed at the tables and it is probable that as many more, including the aged, sick and infirm, made a merry feast over the edibles which the diners were permitted to carry home after their own appetites had been satisfied. In the task of feeding the great hungry horde more than 7,000 stewards and an army of waiters were employed, while 1,500 music hall performers furnished entertainment.

The King, much to his regret, was unable to attend any of the dinners, but Sir Thomas Lipton, who personally managed the affairs, "looked in" on as many of the dinner parties as he could conveniently reach. The comprised roast beef, potatoes boiled in their jackets, coffee and several varieties of vegetables, the whole being topped off with heaping dishes of plum pudding. Each male diner received an ounce of smoking tobacco and free pipes were also presented by a liberal and enterprising manufacturer. As a memento of the occasion there was presented to each of the King's loyal but hungry guests a handleless souvenir cup made by Doulton, the royal potter, and bearing under its glaze photographs of the King and Queen and a memorial design selected by the King himself.

THE POPE AND NURSE SWAP STORIES.



Pope Leo XIII.

Anna Moroni, over 100 Years Old Who was Leo's Attendant When Young, Given Audience

"Do You Remember Time When Bad Boys Tried to Lick You?" Pontiff is Asked

Rome, July 7.—The Pope recently gave audience to Anna Moroni, a woman over 100 years old, who, as a young girl, acted as his nurse.

She was conducted over the "royal staircase," otherwise reserved for sovereigns, and sat opposite the Pope in a big arm-chair, also an extraordinary favor, much against vatican etiquette.

The Holy Father smiled benignly on "Signora Anna," cautioning her to rest well before she spoke.

After awhile the old woman commenced to talk of old times and old friends. "Do you remember when good old Auntie Propert saved you from the bad boys in the market-place in Belletri. They would have licked you, sure, if auntie hadn't interfered, for you were not a strong boy."

The two old friends talked for over an hour, Dr. Lapponi occasionally interpreting, for both Anna and Leo are hard of hearing.

As she hobbled away the old woman excused herself for having given the doctor so much trouble.

"That's all right, Anna," said the holy father, "both of us heard so much in our long life—no wonder our ears refuse to serve."

MORE PILGRIMS GO TO ROME.

New York, July 6.—The second contingent of the Roman Catholic jubilee pilgrimage to Rome left to-day on the Hohenzollern. The party, which is under the spiritual direction of Rev. Father Ryan and Father Smith, of Jersey City, will go direct to Naples and thence to Rome. After leaving the latter place, the pilgrimage will travel through Italy, Switzerland, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Scotland and Ireland. The start for home will be made from Queenstown, September 6th.

NO LACK OF MARKETS

There is not much probability that the conference in London will lead to a preference for Canadian products in the British market. The first obstacle is the disinclination of the British to put a tax on their imports from foreign countries in order to have something to remit to the colonies. The second obstacle is the disinclination of the colonial statesmen to lower their tariffs sufficiently to satisfy the British that the reciprocity would be fair. In other words, Britain is afraid of protection, and Canada is afraid of free trade. The two sides may get closer together after discussion in the conference, but it would not pay Canadians to be sanguine about it. The present duty of our producers is to perfect the quality of their products, and to enlarge the quantity. Britain will pay a fair price for good goods, with or without a tariff preference. There must be no skim milk in the cheese, no turnips or leeks in the butter, no smut in the wheat, and the apples in the middle of the barrel must be as sound and as large as those at the ends. Under such conditions trade between the mother country and the colony will be profitable to both. Of course Canadian free traders would be delighted with any arrangement involving a substantial reduction of Canadian duties, but other elements in our population would object, and as our country is very prosperous under present conditions, it is hard to plead urgency for a change.

Besides the British market, our producers will have a chance at the home markets of northern Ontario, Northwest Territories and the Yukon district, in all of which sales can be made without any tariff restrictions. Judge Macaulay, from the Yukon, highly approves of the action of the Canadian Manufacturers Association in sending an agent to that Territory, which he says, "will never be a manufacturing or an agricultural country, and it will be a splendid market for Canadian manufacturers if trade is encouraged. The demand of the entire people appears to me to be for an all-Canadian route, and the citizens of Dawson are apparently hopeful that they will secure this before long. As I have said, there is a great market for the best lines of goods. Canadian canners, I am glad to say, have seized the opportunity, and a large proportion of the canned used in the Territory comes from the Bay of Quinte and Simcoe districts. There are also splendid opportunities for a market for machinery, wearing apparel, and one Canadian manufacturer of boots and shoes who has invaded the field has met with a great measure of success."

The pay for all these things will have to be in the form of gold, which is Yukon's only exportable product, but as that commodity finds a sale in all parts of the world, there will be no difficulty in trading it for anything else Canadians may happen to want.

INCREASING OUR POPULATION

About 65,000 immigrants settled in Canada during the fiscal year which ended on Monday last. At that rate we shall have an increase of 650,000 in our population from this source during the current census decade, which is considerably greater than the recorded increase in former census returns. The same influences which induce foreigners to make their homes in Canada will cause our own native Canadians to remain at home, thus accelerating the increase of population. We notice that the Professor of philosophy in Queen's University has resigned his chair to become a farmer in the Temiskaming district. Our factories are very busy now, trying to supply the requirements of the new and old farmers, and there will be employment for more of them when all these immigrants become producers as well as consumers. Canada is all right.

One 15 Cent Package Makes Twenty-Five Meals

The use of beef in the hot weather is very frequently the cause of indigestion and serious stomach derangements. The use of heavy and rich meats at the morning meal is responsible for thousands of cases of dyspepsia.

A dish of Malt Breakfast Food will supply more nutrition, energy and strength for the day's work than a pound of beefsteak can afford. It keeps the stomach in perfect condition, prevents constipation, and keeps the blood at normal temperature. If you would have a clear brain and full physical vigor, use Malt Breakfast Food every morning. 15 cents a package. All grocers

Princess Victoria 34

Special to The Times.

London, July 5.—Persons who take an interest in the doings of royalty are reminded of the fact that the Princess Victoria, the only unmarried daughter of the King and Queen, will enter upon her thirty-fifth year tomorrow. Her Royal Highness was born at Marlborough House July 6th, 1868. She is a year and four months older than her sister, Princess Charles of Denmark, who has now been married more than five years. Gossip has had the Princess betrothed any number of times, but, according to her most intimate friends, Her Royal Highness has no intention of changing her lot of single blessedness.

George A. Treadwell Mining Company

27 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK. JEROME, ARIZONA.

Capital - - - - $3,000,000.

VALUE OF SHARES $10.

In a suit recently tried in the New York courts it was proved from the books of the United Verde Copper Company and the sworn testimony of the bookkeepers that the cost to that company of producing copper was only three and a half cents a pound, not counting the gold and silver values, which—allowed for—reduced the cost to a still lower figure.

Nowhere outside the Verde Copper Belt in Yavapai County, Arizona, is copper produced in quantities for less than twice this cost.

The United Verde has about two hundred acres on the north end of the Belt and the George A. Treadwell Company has several times as much in the central and southern parts of the Belt. The conditions along the whole Belt are entirely similar. We already have three mines developed—the Cliff, Brookshire and Iron Queen—one of which, the Cliff, seems to be larger and better than the United Verde, and the other two at least approach it in magnitude and value, while we have several others, including Badger, Pastime, Green Monster and Spoke and Stonewall, which, though less developed, are equally promising.

Professor Treadwell believes we have at least half a dozen United Verdes within the broad and extensive limits of our holdings.

As soon as our smelter plant which is now in process of erection, is completed, we can certainly produce copper as cheap as our rich neighbor on the north. The United Verde for several years has produced one-tenth the copper of the world. When our plants are fully installed we expect the Verde Belt to produce one-half the copper of the world, and the George A. Treadwell Mining Company will be prepared to do more than its full share.

Before investing in copper in unproved localities, consider the stock of the George A. Treadwell Mining Company, named after the great pioneer and explorer of the Verde Belt and owning the largest and best aggregation of properties on it.

The price of the stock is $11 a share. Make checks payable to the order of the company and send to the 27 William Street New York

"The Umbrella."

"It seems that the same Sherlock Holmes-like instinct which is prepared to reconstruct a man's whole mode of life from a study of his cigarette ends has now been brought to bear upon the umbrella, and the expert umbrellist is prepared to give a complete character-sketch of any individual, with the principal events in his past and future history, after a critical survey of his behavior with an umbrella. For instance, if a man is observed carrying an umbrella over a lady's head in such a way as to preserve her Bond street hat from the rain, while a little stream trickles softly down the back of his own neck, it is pretty safe to prophesy that she is his Best Girl. If, on the other hand, it is his own gasometer which is kept dry, while the trickle is reserved for the lady, it is a safe thousand-to-three on that she is his wife. When a man carries an umbrella horizontally under his arm, it is generally a sign that someone is shortly going to have his, or her, eye put out. When a brand-new umbrella is deposited with a lot of others in the umbrella-stand of a club, it is frequently a sign that it is about to change owners. There are many other ways in which the umbrella may be taken as an indication either of coming events or of character, but the Best Girl, who has been running her eye over the above, says emphatically that it is perfectly absurd to judge any average man from his umbrella. When pressed for a reason she explains sarcastically, 'Because it so seldom belongs to him!' And there is something in that."

Dooley on the Romantic Novel.

But lithrachoor is th' gr-reat lifewurruk iv the modhren woman. Th' conthrol is passin' into th' hands iv th' fair sect, an' th' day will come whin th' wurrud book will mane no more to an ablebodied man thin th' wurrud gusset. Women write all th' romantic novels that ar-re anny good. That's because iv'ry man thinks th' thrue hayroe is himself an' ivry woman thinks he's James K. Hackett. A woman is sure a good, sthrong man ought to be able to kill anny number iv bad, weak men, but a man is always wondherin' what th' other la-ad w'u'd do. He might have th' punch left in him that w'u'd get th' money. A woman niver cares how many men are kilt, but a man believes in fair play, an' he'd like to see th' polis intherfere about Chapter Three.

Woman writes all th' good romantic novels, an' reads thim all. If anny proud la-ad in th' gum business thinks he riprisints th' ideal iv his wife's soul, he ought to take a look at th' books she reads. He'll l'arn there th' reason he's where he is because he was th' on'y chanst, not because he was th' first choice. 'T w'u'd humble th' haughtiest prince iv thrade to look into th' heart iv th' woman he cares most f'r an' thinks last about, an' find that, instead iv the photygraft of a shrewd but kindly man with a thriflin' absence iv hair on his head an' a burglar-proof safe on his watch charm, there's a pitcher iv a young la-ad in green tights playin' a mandolin to a high front stoop. On th' stoop, with a rose in her hand, is his lawful-wedded wife, th' lady Annamariar Huggins iv Peotone. Ye can't keep her away fr'm a romantic novel. No matther what Edward Atkinson tells ye, she prefers "Th' Age iv Chivalry" to th' mos' atthractive housewurruk. — "Century Magazine."

A Different View.

"I never like to go to the theater with Fred. He always goes out between the acts." "You mean he comes in between the drinks."

Very Little Difference.

"Is that an historical novel you're reading?" "That's what they called it at the library, but it seems to me to be more hysterical than anything else."—Chicago "Record-Herald."

An Esquimaux Tradition.

There is a remarkable tradition amongst the Esquimaux which explains why the women in the north are deft with the needle while those of the south dance nimbly. Long ago the northland was inhabited by men only, and no woman had ever come among them. It was noised abroad that far away in the south one woman dwelt alone, and one of the northerners set his face southward and journeyed until he reached the woman's dwelling. In course of time he married her, and rejoiced that he had a wife while the son of the headman of the north was still a bachelor. But meanwhile this same bachelor was traveling southward with the same object in view, and, coming to the house while the man was within, hid himself and waited until night fell. Then he forced his way in, and, seizing the woman, began to drag her away. The noise, however, woke the husband, who grasped his wife's feet, and both tugged violently, with such effect that the poor body was torn in twain, the robber going off with the upper half only. The rightful husband carved a body of wood and fastened it to his wife's legs, while the other man completed his half in a similar manner, each addition receiving life as soon as finished, two women being thus made out of one. But, although the woman of the south could dance nimbly, her wooden fingers prevented her from embroidering, while the woman of the north excelled only in needlework, and thus originated the characteristics of the women of the south and north.

Edward Everett Hale said at the celebration of his eightieth birthday last month, "I never had but one enemy, and last week, when I was trying to think of his name, I found I had forgotten who he was." This is better than keeping him in mind by making plans every day for "getting even."

"There, now, Clara, how would you like to be those people who can't get home from Paris because their funds gave out?" "Well, dear me, Clarence, they are better off than we, whose funds gave out before we got started."—"American Register."

TROUBLES IN THE NEAR EAST

Prussia's policy towards the Poles, says the Vienna correspondent of the Times, causes profound exasperation wherever there are Slavs. The correspondent says it looks like a fresh indication of the great future struggle between the Slav and Teuton which many thoughtful observers regard as inevitable. This question, declares the correspondent, is a factor of growing importance, which European statesmanship must henceforth take into account. The predominance of German influence, politican and commercial, in the near East regions upon which Austria and Russia have claims will as suredly, the correspondent says, soon be a cause of grave international trouble.

PRIZE WON AND LOST

A Tragedy in Prose and Verse Without Much Metre

The following touching lines describe a modern tragedy in Peterborough high life. The spasm came to this great family journal in an official envelope, and bore no signature:

O, she was the belle of her toney set, a winsome and ravishing young brunette, with a pair of eyes that could read your thoughts and tie your affections all into knots. There wasn't a fellow in Big Bug street, but had laid his heart at her shapely feet; and she kept them guessing, those hearts a-thump, which way the kitten would some day jump. But one there was, he a scheming chap, and he set for his game an enticing trap in the shape of a rig with a "record" horse, that skimmed o'er the ground with rapid force, and his rivals were wallowing in dismay when they saw the couple one balmy day spin forth like a streak for a country ride, on her face a picture of new-born pride, and his rivals muttered in worst of moods, "Our name is Dennis! He's got the goods!"

And o'er the country roads they went
In high-grade rapture spinning;
Both in a dream of sweet content,
Spasmodically grinning.

They talked of this and they talked of that, she through her bonnet and he through his hat; he whispered lies of the genius white, she swallowed them in her new delight. Upon the lines her hand he placed to guide the horse, and 'round her waist his arm like a noiseless serpent crawled and closer to him her form he hauled. He breathed in her ears the usual words that lovers toss to the dickey birds, and she responded in tones so sweet, each sugared sentence seemed good to eat. He'd won the prize, and his soul was filled with joy till the foam o'er the edges spilled, and she was happy to think she'd force to win a fellow that owned a horse, and the jaybirds chattered and rustic cows bawled hoarse hoorays to their fresh sealed vows.

And on they sped, of their sense bereft,
So tightly did Cupid bind 'em,
Some seventeen miles behind 'em.

Then the clouds came up and the rain came down and sprinkled its tears on her new spring gown, then changed from a drizzle to a falling flood, and the road was a channel of slush and mud, and the horse stopped in rebellious mood—like a balky mule in the roadway stood. And there they sat in the worst of storms, with no umbrella to shield their forms, and they got as soaked on their dizzy perch as a new convert in the Baptist church, and their love was chilled by the rainy slush, till it grew impassive as cold fried mush. 'Twas full two miles to a Lakefield town, and with scowling features he helped her down, and off they trudged through the muddy lane in the pitiless pour of the blawsted rain, her eyes all chafed with the tears she shed, his lips calcined with the things he said, and they learned at the station with souls aghast, that the last dummed train for the day had passed.

And his rivals chattered with merry lip,
And approached her with new endeavor,
For the language used on that soggy trip,
Queered him with her forever!

The eighty-seventh anniversary of the battle of Waterloo, celebrated the other day on the old battlefield, unearthed another historical puzzle. For a long time we have been accustomed to read about the cowardly conduct of the Belgian troops on that occasion, but the Independance Belge comes to the national defence now with the following passage from an article in the London Daily News of the 21st of June, 1815:

"Although the official reports announce a great victory for the allied forces at Waterloo, it is plain to everybody who knows how to read between the lines that the action was indecisive and costly. As we have often had occasion to remark during the Peninsular War, the Duke of Wellington once more proved himself a poor strategist, and, if it had not been for the heroic bravery of the Belgians, the English army would have been annihilated by the French."

The White Star Line.

It is not perhaps generally known that the White Star Company, whose accession to the Morgan pool created so deep an impression in England, run New Zealand and Australian lines of steamers. For many years the Australian trade was carried on by the company's fleet of sailing vessels. These were sold, and replaced by a line of five steamships running between Liverpool and Australian ports, via the Cape, viz., the Afric, Medic, Persic, Runic and Suevic. The New Zealand service dates from 1883. Three vessels are employed, and each of them makes the voyage round the world twice or thrice a year. The steamers in this service are the Gothic, Delphic and Ionic. They are specially fitted for dealing with the frozen mutton trade. The White Star also owns a Pacific line worked by the Occidental and Oriental Steamship Company of San Francisco. The Gaelic, Coptic and Doric are the White Star ships in this branch. They run between San Francisco, Yokohama and Hong Kong. The remaining vessels of the White Star Line are exclusively employed on the Atlantic. The service is double—a fast passenger and mail service and also one for cargo and cattle. Below is given a complete list of the steamships hitherto owned by the White Star Line, all of which have been built by Messrs. Harland & Wolff.—

Improve the Brood Mares.

We think the great reason why so many ordinary horses are bred on the farms comes from relying wholly upon the stallion and paying little attention to the character and breeding of the mares. In horses uniformity is worth money in any market, especially in those of good class, whether they are heavy draughts or carriage teams, and you cannot get uniformity in the produce except through kindred blood. You cannot breed a mare or Percheron and trotting blood and other with coach, Clydesdale and trotting blood, to the same stallion, and get a pair of matched colts. Nature will not belie herself, and she has declared so often and emphatically that "like produces like," and what you sow so shall you reap, that it is useless to attempt longer to do the impossible.

So, the first thing a farmer should do when he starts raising horses is to get brood mares of the class he wants, and with more or less of the blood of the breed he proposes breeding them to —the more the better. This will be found equally advisable whether he proposes raising draughts, carriage horses or roadsters. And such mares should not be matched haphazard, but after careful examination of the stallion and his breeding, and of some of the colts if possible. But do not condemn a stallion because he gets some poor colts until you examine their dams. As a rule, you will find most of the trouble is with the mares, not the horse, although, of course, there are worthless stallions of all breeds.—Michigan Farmer.

Summoned His Father.

An immaculate-looking boy about twelve years of age, clad in a good Eton suit and snow-white collar, once appeared in the witness-box of a London Police Court, according to a recently published volume of reminiscences.

"Please, sir, I want a summons."

"Against whom?"

"My father, sir."

"What has your father done to you?"

"Please, sir, he has assaulted me."

"That was very wrong of your father. Why did he do so?"

"Please, sir, he said that I had been rude to my sister."

"Did he, though? Yes, you can take a summons."

"Please, sir, how much will it be?"

"Two shillings, my little man."

"Please, sir, I am under twelve. Can't I have it half price?"

"Oh, no, my boy; we have no half prices here."

"But I have only one shilling, sir."

"Then you must go and get another before your summons can be issued."

They thought they had done with him, but no; in a short time the boy came back with another shilling, and the summons was issued. One day therefore father and son appeared in court. The father, a portly, well-dressed man, was boiling with rage, and could scarcely restrain himself while the boy gave evidence and told how his father had beaten him.

"Has your father ever assaulted you before?" the Magistrate asked. "No, sir, this is the first time." "I am sorry for that," said the Magistrate, "because I am going to dismiss the summons — on one condition only, and that is, that your father takes you home and gives you a double dose of what he gave you last time." And, turning to the father, "and mind you do it, sir."

"I will cheerfully carry out your Worship's instructions," the father said.

"Having formally organized," said the President of the new woman's club, "we must now discuss the aim of our society."

"Better call it 'object,' if it's a good one," cried the rude man who really had no business there. "A woman's 'aim' is notoriously bad."—Philadelphia Press.

Mainly About People.

A High Church stranger who was visiting a rural church in England enquired: "Have you matins in this church?" "Oh, no, sir," replied the rustic verger, "but we have oilcloth right up to the chancel."

An Argyllshire elder was asked how the kirk progressed in his locality. "Ah, weel," said he, "we had four hundred members. Then we had a divession and there were only twa hundred left; then a disruption and only ten left. Then we had a heresy trial; and now there's only me and ma brither Duncan left, and I ha' grave doots o' Duncan's orthodoxy."

The great Mendelssohn was once compelled to accept the office of bookkeeper with a banker who was a very ignorant man. A few days after the banker said to Mendelssohn: "Do you think God works things wisely? You He made to be a bookkeeper, and me a rich banker." "Just notice the wisdom of God," promptly replied Mendelssohn. "If He had made me the banker, do you think I would engage you for a bookkeeper?"

The story is told that President Roosevelt was once traveling in Idaho, and passed a bookstore in the window of which was a copy of his "Winning of the West." Going into the bookstore he enquired, "Who is this author Roosevelt?" "Oh," said the bookseller, "he's a ranch-driver." "And what do you think of his book?" asked the President. "Well," said the dealer, slowly and deliberately, "I've always thought I'd like to meet the author and tell him that if he had stuck to running a ranch and give up writing books he'd have made a powerful more of a success at his trade."

The chief of the Leslies is said to have prayed before a battle: "Lord, be on our side! An' gin ye canna be on our side, aye lay low a bit, an' ye'll see thae carles get a hidin' that must please ye." An old Covenanter, who ruled his household with a rod of iron, is said to have prayed in all sincerity at family worship: "O Lord, hae a care o' Rab, for he is on the great deep, an' Thou holdest it in the hollow o' Thy hand. An' hae a care o' Jamie, for he has gone to fight the enemies o' his country, an' the outcome o' the battle is wi' Thee. But ye needna fash Yersel' wi' wee Wully, for I hae him here, an' I am cawpable o' lookin' after him mysel'."

Lord Kelvin, the great British scientist, now in this country, is much given to preoccupation. It is said his students were wont to accompany the endless repetition of the definition of an ideal magnet, "an infinitely long, infinitely thin, uniform, and uniformly and longitudinally magnetized bar," by a stately tramp of feet. At the conclusion of this staggering performance, Professor Thomson, as he then was, would invariably shout, "Silence." One day the boys put it up to keep absolutely still, but the cry of "Silence" came at the end just the same. It is told of him, too, that he once went sound asleep presiding at a banquet. It was the penalty of overwork.

Opie Read, the Southern novelist, who lives in Chicago, has accepted the nomination for alderman from a Republican convention in a Republican ward. Until the last Presidential campaign Mr. Read had always affiliated with the Democracy. During the campaign of 1900, however, he made speeches in the West in behalf of the sound-money ticket. When his bill of expenses went to Mr. Hanna the chairman noticed that Mr. Read's expenses in Denver were much larger than at any other place. Mr. Hanna called Mr. Read's attention to this. "I reckon as much," Mr. Read replied, "but did you ever play poker in that pesky town?" Mr. Hanna made no answer, but put an "O. K." on the account.

Clerk Newton of the Parker House, Boston, is telling a good story at his own expense. When a small boy on the farm his folks often sent him to the neighbors to buy a dozen eggs when their hens failed to lay enough. He noticed that the old farmer always held each egg before a lighted candle and examined it carefully. In his innocence of Yankee shrewdness, Newton supposed that this was prompted more by honesty and intention to detect whether the eggs were bad or not. One day, however, when he counted his eggs, according to custom, there were only eleven in the basket. With a determination not to be cheated, the lad trudged proudly back to the house, and quickly made known his discovery. "Oh," said the old farmer, "that's all right, my boy; one of them has a double yolk."

Written on the Face.

We write our characters on our faces; yet, though we are quick to read our neighbor's face we are slow to realise that our own is open for him to read. But it is. The story is there, and we are writing it every day of our lives. Not only do smiles and frowns leave traces, but every passion which sways the heart stamps its record upon the face. Even a ride in a street car on a short railway journey gives proof of this. Look around you. Those two strangers opposite you never saw before, yet you know that one is passionate, the other mean, and your heart warms to the little old lady near by. You want no one to assure you she is kind and gentle, while a whole network of wrinkles about the eyes tells you that the old gentleman in the corner loves his joke. Character, indeed, is written plainly on every face. Some speak of tragedy, some of comedy, and not a few give you a distinct warning.

Uneasy Lies, Etc.

An American chiropodist now in Berlin advertises that he "has removed corns from all the crowned heads of Europe."

THE IDLER'S COLUMN

Conducted by a Man Who is Without Any Occupation

This column is, generally speaking, devoted to the pains and pangs and punctured tires of humanity. Sometimes I let a little levity creep into it—I can't help it—but, as I said in the start, generally speaking, it wrestles with the problems of Life, and takes the kinks from the tangled skein.

Just now a man writes me and wants to know about Angora Goats. He wants me to tell him how much wool you can get from them, and what they cost a dozen, and I don't know what all he does not want to know. I am a Naturalist, if I am anything. However, the goats of my childhood's sunny hour were not Angora goats. They were the old-fashioned kind of goats that were formidable in war or in peace—the right of way was theirs by inheritance, and no man of my acquaintance ever successfully disputed it. They were goats which were without a purpose in Life, so far as I could ever discover unto myself. As I have twice before remarked in this same article, generally speaking, a Goat is a Heroic Animal. Like the boy who stood on the Burning Deck, I imagine that a goat would remain whence all but him had fled—remain in the hope of getting a chance to eat the spars, even if the sails were consumed. Outside of an Oil house on fire, I know of nothing with the consuming appetite of a goat, and I've travelled round a great deal—have been as far as Lindsay.

I know that goats love flowers. Their admiration in this line is intense. I have seen them gather whole flower beds at a single sitting—but as to the Wool Crop, or the Milk Crop, I am in total darkness. I regret that I cannot yield the information sought, but I'll buy some goats tomorrow—some of the Angora kind, and I'll shear them and figure out how many suits of All Wool and a yard Wide clothes one goat will yield, and I'll try to impart the information in this Fountain of Publicity just as quick as I shear them. There is nothing in the world that I will not do to accomodate a friend, and while it will take a little time to get this information, I do not care.

Now, if there is any other question you would like to ask the Professor while he is raising and shearing the goats, go ahead. A little music, please.

The old proposition that "sugar and spice, and everything nice," is what little girls are made of, is always proven when compared with her mischievous little brother. I have watched 'em and to my sorrow I have found that the Kid generally speaking, is a wild animal—while the lively little sister in instinctively just the reverse. While the little girl is at home writing an essay which would read something like this, where is her brother?

"HOW SWEETLY THE BIRDS SING!"

"The little birds are very beautiful and they have such fine feathers and they seem to be so happy. And how sweetly they sing! From my window in the mornings and evenings I hear them singing, and one of them is so tame that the little fellow comes to the window-sill and eats crumbs of bread right out of my hand. He will chirrup, and put his head sidewise, as much as to say, 'Thank you, little girl.' I do not see how the bad boys rob the nests of the old birds, and thus steal their little children, which must make them feel so awfully sad. I would like to live in the woods and have no other companions but hundreds of different kinds of birds. They are so innocent, and so happy and so pretty."

And while the little Miss was writing something like the above, her brother was out climbing a tree and robbing the nest of the little bird which had eaten crumbs of bread from his sister's hand. I do not suppose he would take time to write about birds, but if he would, he would about say:

"BURDS."

"They is a lot of feathered nusoonce which are Chattering around, disturbing things, and I'm going out with Bob Green and some other boys and Rob three neses this evening, and maybe we will ketch the old bird and throw some black pepper in her eyes, and see her fly agin a tree and bump her Brains out. Gosh, but we got fourteen eggs yesterday, and throwed 'em against old Squire Bullin's house and made it look splochety spiot."

That would be the difference. Why it is, I do not know. That it is, in many cases, I do know.

But boys will be boys, they have told us, and I guess that it is so.

DIARY OF A YACHTING PARTY

The Idler has a friend who recently went out on a yachting party doing the Kawartha lakes, sleeping and eating on board:

On Board the Kitty, June 20.—Very poor yachting today. I opened a pot on kings up and was raised twice; went back the limit and still two men staid. Got the other king and put in every cent I had; also my coat and vest. I'll be blistered if Jenkins didn't make fours! Haven't anything left but my shirt and underwear; but I'm no quitter. Young Bilger says we're proceeding under forced draught, whatever that is. I'd like to get hold of a New York draft. I'd force the fighting for a little while.

JACK POTT.

On Board the Kitty, June 21.—Bilger just came below to report that the lookout has raised land, but he didn't say how much. I raised the limit $5 on the last hand and got two stayers. Bad move. Didn't better and lost $23. Luck has turned, and I'm losing. Pretty near down to my lee quarter.

JACK POTT.

On Board the Kitty, Fenelon Falls, June 26, (Special telegram)—Have sent photo of my last poker hand by mail. Get cut made and put in Times. Peterborough Olympic boys will be much interested.

JACK POTT.

[Collect.]

On Board the Kitty, Lindsay, June 27.—This is the last hand. I have lost everything— shoes, shirt, underwear, everything. I have finished the cruise in a barrel, and I have staked the barrel on this last hand. O Fortune, do not desert me in my extremity! Do not leave me "naked to mine enemies"! I am called. I throw down my hand defiantly. Three nines and a pair of treys. Is that good gentlemen?—

Will now close for this time, as I hear the comps, calling for "copy."

BASEBALL.

Roseneath defeated the Auburns on Saturday afternoon by a score of 2 to 1.

Toronto lost a pitcher's battle at Worcester being unable to hit McFall, while Esper allowed only two runs in the seventh, that proved sufficient to win. Providence beat Montreal in 11 innings, and Jersey City beat the tail-enders. Buffalo and Rochester were down for a double-header, but rain stopped proceedings in the third innings of the first game.

LACROSSE.

Toronto defeated the Nationals by 6 to 4 at Montreal on Saturday.

Orangeville defeated St. Catherines at Orangeville.

Toronto Telegram:—By the way, has it been remarked yet that President McKeown has unearthed some good referees this season. Harry Gillespie is one and Peter McMillan is another. Both know the rules and are not afraid to enforce them, and both are of the kind that will command the respect due to the referee. Down in Port Hope the other day, Mr. Gillespie was working on the Port Hope-Oshawa argument, and a Port Hope player, who felt aggrieved at the referee's decision, told the official that he was "fixed." Go and put on your clothes," was Harry's comment. "What! Not for the whole match?" demanded the surprised Ontario "Yes, for the entire match," replied the referee. Then the player proceeded to say some things. Again he was cut short. "Look here, my boy, if you want to play lacrosse at any time in the future you had better go and put on your clothes and stop all that." Then the youth reflected and went. After the game he saw the errors of his ways still more clearly and apologized.

LAWN TENNIS.

Niagara-on-the-Lake, July 7.—Interest of lovers of tennis is now centered in the annual championships of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association, which will begin here today and continue throughout the week. The contestants represent many parts of the Dominion. The events to be decided are the all-comers' singles, handicap men's doubles and ladies singles.

CHESS.

Thousand Islands, N.Y., July 7—Beginning today and continuing throughout the week the Murray Isle Hotel is to be the Mecca for the devotees of the game of chess from all parts of the East. The occasion is the annual midsummer meeting and tournament of the New York Chess Association. The special feature of the meeting is a competition for the Rice challenge trophy, between representatives of clubs, leagues and associations in the Eastern states, including New Jersey and Philadelphia.

The Evils of Constipation

This dangerous condition causes sick headache, abdominal pains, piles and in severe cases insanity and apoplexy. The most agreeable and satisfactory remedy is Ferrozone, which makes the bowels so well ordered that natural and unassisted action is established. It is mild and certain in action, and never causes distress or inconvenience, and may be taken as long as required. Pains in the stomach and intestines, piles, billiousness and headache disappear at once when Ferrozone is used. Recommended and sold by druggists, price, 50c., and by Ormond & Walsh.

No Pills like Dr. Hamilton's.

County Police Court

In County Police Court on Saturday morning Mrs. Edward Jory, through her solicitor, Mr. R. R. Hall, applied for cause why a distress order should not be issued to levy an amount from her husband upon the order of the County Magistrate made some time ago in connection with her claim of non-support. The order was granted. Mr. O. E. Langley, of Lakefield, appeared for defendant, and took the stand that an appeal pending in the case should cause a stay of the Magistrate's previous order. It was pointed out, however, that an appeal could not operate as a stay of proceedings in the case. There will be a session of the County Court this morning, the principal business being the hearing of motions for appeal. Deputy Judge Edmison will preside.

Special Trains on Circus Day

For the convenience of visitors to Forepaugh and Sells Bros' Circus, which exhibits in Peterborough, July 8th, the Grand Trunk Railway will run a special train, leaving Peterborough at 6.30 p.m. for Campbellford and intermediate points. The G.T.R. regular morning train from Campbellford will reach Peterborough in time for the mammoth street parade, and this special evening train for the return journey will enable visitors to spend a good day in town and return home at an early hour.

THE GIRL OF THE PEOPLE

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

Author of The Barn Stormers Fortune's Sport, Miss Nobody, Her Royal Highness, Lady Mary of the Dark House, etc.

[illegible] she was a beauty—for Easel street.

"I didn't know there was comp'ny," she remarked, bridling.

"It's a wonderful thing's happened, Fan," said the mother of us all. "This young lady—I never told you before my daughter by my first husband was alive—but it's so. And here she is."

The poor, faded creature spoke as if she were half-ashamed, half-proud of the startling revelation.

"Lawk!" said Fan. Then, giggling: "She seems to 'ave done pretty well by 'erself."

"She was adopted by a grand lady, a lady of title," answered the elder woman, with emphasis. "Things were different with me in those days. I was poor, goodness knows; but her father was a gentleman, if he had come down in the world, and he knew how to treat a woman. Yours brought me to this, as I was telling her when you came in."

"You never pyde us a call before," said Fan, still laughing with a certain jealous defiance.

"She never knew who she was till today," said our mother, sharply, defending me from the innuendo. "I do hope, my dear," she continued, turning again to me, "that her ladyship left you well off? It's what you had a right to expect. And though, perhaps, I shouldn't say it, it would be a comfort if you could feel inclined to give us a little lift from time to time. Not that we'd expect you to come often, or——"

"I've just six pounds in the world," I interrupted, impulsively; "nor shall I have any more till I've earned it. And I've even lost my home."

For an instant nobody spoke. "That's bad; that is bad," said my mother, gloomily, at last. "What a shame. Can't anything be done? Can't you go to law?"

I shook my head. "Lady Cope's nephew comes into everything. He was her husband's cousin as well, and has the title. No will was made, and I have no chance at all. Besides, I wouldn't fight him for the money if I could."

"Well, I don't see why!" exclaimed my mother. "I'd fight him for all I was worth. Your friends—you must have a lot of grand friends—would pay the costs. You'd get something. But there, that's your father all over! It's wonderful how blood tells. He was on his beam-ends when he came to my mother's house to lodge, poor fellow, for he'd been unfortunate—everything had failed. But he was a gentleman. And he looked at things different from any man I ever saw. I didn't pretend to understand him. He had relatives with some money; but when we were at our worst, and he dyin' for lack of medicine and proper food, he wouldn't let me go to them. 'Let me die,' says he. 'I'm no more good to you or the baby. It's better I should die than they should know what I've sunk to.' Now, it's the same thing with you."

"What sort of feller's the heir?" enquired Fan. (She pronounced it "hair.") "Is 'e young or old?"

"Over thirty," I answered.

"Ow, not past the marryin' age. Couldn't you 'ave set yer cap at 'im? Then it would 'a bin all right. Jest like the stories in 'My Love' novelettes."

I shuddered, I fear perceptibly, for her face hardened and she tossed her head, with its wild profusion of dark locks. I heard her indistinctly murmur something about "folks that were too stuck up to live."

"What are you going to do?" asked my mother.

"I—I don't know," I almost sobbed.

"Six pounds won't go far."

"No, indeed," I admitted.

"You'll live with friends, I suppose, till you get something to do—governessing, or—or a lady's companion."

"I'm afraid I haven't anyone among the old friends who would take me in; no one, at least, that I would ask."

"There it is again. Just your father's pride. How it does bring back old times! I used to get cross enough with him till he'd fling out of the house, like as not, and stop away for hours."

My poor father, whom I had never known! My heart warmed to him; and I wondered if he cared for me in his freedom from the bondage of this sordid world; if he could see and feel sorry for me?

Quickly my thoughts traveled on to possibilities. To stay with my mother and her two daughters did not seem to be among them. Yet, with six pounds between me and starvation, what other way was open?

"I hear that even for smart, lady-like girls it's hard work to get a place as a governess," the poor, pale woman was querulously saying. "Of course, I don't know anything about it, though. Such things are a good many cuts above me, or Fan and Totsey. Fan's in an artificial flower factory. Totsey was with her till her health broke down, when she came home and helped me with the tailoring. I do for a West End sweater—for that's what he is. You ought to get something miles better. You might go into a grand draper's shop, only there you'd have to pay a premium. But it may be months before you can get hold of what you want. Wouldn't Lady Cope's heir do something, a little allowance——"

"I wouldn't have a penny from him!" I reiterated, picturing the blank lack of comprehension in these poor narrowed minds if I should blurt out the truth that I had refused Sir Roger Cope, with everything that was now his.

"You must 'ave meant to go somewheres," observed Fan, still sulkily, "for you've got a lot of reg'lar Noer's harks out there on your growler. I bet you wasn't goin' to stop 'ere?"

She finished jocosely, but my face must have betrayed that she had stumbled upon the truth. Her jaw dropped.

"Well, I never!" she ejaculated. "If I don't believe you meant that very thing!"

"I didn't know," I tried miserably to explain, "that—that there were other daughters. I came because I had nowhere else to go, and I hoped—but, of course, I see—"

"We might put you up," said my mother, thoughtfully, "if you could stand it. It does seem hard to send one's own flesh and blood away from one's door. You'd have to help with the expenses, of course. That's what the girls do, though it nearly all comes on Fan now, and I couldn't afford anything else. Your six pounds would last you pretty near three months, the way we live, and you could go about looking for a place. But——"

"Law! you must be off your chump, ma!" coarsely exclaimed Fan. "A sweet plyce this would be for a fine lydy like 'er. She's 'most ready to 'old 'er nose as it is."

My mother's thin face flushed angrily, and I felt the blood rush to mine. Until Fan's taunt it would have appeared unbearable to stay in such surroundings, crowding the occupants, who must already be cramped for breathing space. But her words raised in me a curious antagonism, a desire to contradict.

"It is my mother's house," I said, stiffly. "If she says that she will have me I will stay."

"There!" cried my mother. "Well, I do say it."

"Can you really put up with me?" I asked, pretending not to hear Fan's rude laughter.

"Fan can come in here to this bed," my mother returned. "You'd have to bunk in the back room with Totsey."

"I'll send the cab away," I said, drearily. Then, suddenly I remembered a new embarrassment.

"My luggage!" I exclaimed. "What shall I do with it?"

"Lor!" groaned my mother, ruefully eyeing the proportions of my boxes through the one small window of the bedroom-kitchen.

"Oh, 'ave 'em in, do!" entreated Totsey, almost dancing in excitement at the prospect. "We'll manage some'ow. I'm jest dyin' to see 'er things."

Half the street was ready to help the driver carry my belongings into the little house. The big trunks were taken to a tiny bare back room, furnished only with a narrow bed and shabby chest of drawers, the latter having a tin basin and a cracked yellow jug on its top. Small as the room was, the lack of furniture made accommodation for the boxes possible, and they were piled one on top of another against the wall. The cabman, evidently very curious, was paid, and sent away; and during the process of finding the right change I heard Totsey whispering to a slatternly woman from next door that her "sister had come 'ome to stop—quite a lydy, with no end of smart clothes, and 'ad been livin' with a pirress."

Ten minutes later, no doubt, all Easel street was in possession of this savory morsel.

Mother had been engaged in replenishing the fire for "tea" when I had arrived. Now Totsey was sent out with a few coppers, and shortly after returned with something brown wrapped in newspaper. This something resolved itself into four bloaters, a delicacy with which my nose and eyes for the first time made acquaintance, as I was informed that it had been provided in honor of my coming.

While the bloaters frizzled pungently on the fire, and the tea brewed in a brown earthen pot with half a spout, I was invited by Totsey into the next room, which I was to share with her. Fan followed, with none too good a grace, to remove her belongings from two or three hooks on the wall, and the top drawers of the dilapidated chest. But her big black eyes sparkled as they roved over my boxes.

"I sye, you must open them after tea," she said, with a commanding air which was characteristic of her. "It'll be fun to see what you've got."

"Wouldn't it be rather useless?" I asked, tonelessly. "I only brought so much luggage because I could not leave anything at ho—at Arrish Mell Court, and didn't know where to store the boxes. But, of course, I shall not need the things while I'm here, and they might as well stay packed as they are."

"Well, you will be a pig if you don't let us 'ave a look in!" exclaimed Fan, her red cheeks growing redder. "But it's jest what I egspected."

"Oh, if you really care, you shall see everything, of course!" I sighed. And so it was settled. We were to come back directly after tea for the entertainment.

We sat down at the deal table, which had no cloth, and my mother hewed thick, repulsive rounds of bread off the strangest, most humpbacked loaf I had ever seen. The girls spread this with the grease from the newly-cooked bloaters, while I turned away, with a spasm of the throat. The tea was bitter as lye, and we drank it without milk; Fan and Totsey, with their elbows on the table, stirring in yellow sugar, which they took from a paper bag, with their own pewter spoons. I had eaten no lunch and suddenly discovered that I was faint with hunger; but the bread choked me, and though I grieved to run the risk of hurting my mother's feelings, I could not touch the terrible bloater.

Tea was a serious meal in Easel street, and my three newly-acquired relatives laid in rations to last for several hours, asking me questions with their mouths full, about the doings of the aristocracy. I answered kindly, though as briefly as I could, but they hung upon my words with curious greediness, which I did not understand. Then, pushing back their well-polished plates at last, Fan and Totsey sprang up, reminding me of my promise.

Then followed a strange scene, I knew not whether more comic or tragic. But my sense of humor swooned; and, sick at heart, I took from my boxes, exquisitely packed by Swift, my smart frocks, and underlinen of cambric or silk, and lace, sweet with the scent of orris root and violets. Each garment reminded me of something in the past. The girls snatched every article from my hands as it left the box, turning it about and exclaiming over it in almost incredulous admiration. "Why," said Totsey, "I didn't 'spose anybody but the Queen 'd 'ave things like these!"

Many treasures which I had loved for one reason or another I found myself bestowing upon these strange half-sisters of mine; things utterly unsuitable to them, yet delighting their hearts with a joy such as, perhaps, they had never known. After the first gift or two, Totsey capitulated entirely, smothering me with moist kisses, which I tried not to find repulsive. But Fan was still curiously on the defensive. She accepted what I gave with a stiff "thank you," but she eyed me as a house-cat eyes another suddenly imported to share its rug. I caught her watching me sometimes with a sullen [illegible]

A Good Catch

On Friday afternoon, Mr. Bruce Patterson, of the Canadian General Electric Works, caught a nineteen pound 'lunge in the Little Lake while trolling. On Saturday several beauties were hooked by local nimrods. The fact is Peterborough is fast becoming noted for its excellent fishing, and is sure soon to become the favorite haunt for fishermen from all parts of the country.

Dying By Slow Degrees

Although not always aware of it yet thousands die by slow degrees of catarrh. It first attacks the nose or throat, then the lungs, and finally spreads all through the system. Catarrhozone is the only remedy that will immediately prevent the spread of this awful disease. Every breath from the Inhaler kills thousands of germs, and clears the throat and nose, aids expectoration, and relieves the pain across the eyes. Catarrhozone eradicates every vestige of catarrh from the system, and is highly recommended also for bronchitis, asthma, deafness and lung trouble. Price, $1; trial size, 25c., all druggists. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

—The Monetary Times:—The Burleigh Falls Power Co., of Peterborough has purchased the Buckhorn Falls with a capacity of 2,000 horse power. A syndicate of New York capitalists is reported to have been formed for the purpose of furnishing power from this and other sources for use in Peterborough, Cobourg, Port Hope and other places in Ontario.

Killed in Pittsburg

Alexander Frame, of Lindsay, received the sad intelligence from Pittsburg, that his son, John, employed as a brakeman on the Pennsylvania and Ohio railway had met his death as the result of an accident in that city on Tuesday at 9.30 a.m. Particulars were not given, but it is supposed that the unfortunate man met his fate by being crushed between two cars while shunting. The young man was known by many in Peterborough, who will deeply regret the sad event.

FOR STEALING FLOWERS

John Dunn Gets 10 Days for Robbing Victoria Park

John Dunn, who was charged with stealing flowers from Victoria Park, did not appear at the Police Court on Saturday in answer to the summons. A warrant was accordingly issued for his arrest. John was gathered in shortly after dinner, and at a special session of the court at 4 o'clock he was given his choice of paying $2 and costs or rusticating on the hill for ten days, He took the latter.

The Police Magistrate requests The Times to state that all future cases of vandalism will be severely punished.

PRESSED HARD

Coffee's on Old Age

When prominent men realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

Mr. C. C. Wright, superintendent of public schools in North Carolina, says:—"My mother, since her early childhood, was an inveterate coffee drinker, and had been troubled for a number of years, and complained of that 'weak all over' feeling and sick stomach.

Some time ago I was making an official visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat peculiar flavor of the coffee, and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum Food Coffee. I was so pleased with it, that after the meal was over, I bought a package to carry home with me, and had wife prepare some for the next meal; the whole family were so well pleased with that we discontinued coffee and used Postum entirely.

I had really been at times very anxious concerning my mother's condition but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time, she felt so much better than she did prior to its use, and had little trouble with her heart and no sick stomach; that the headaches were not so frequent, and her general condition much improved. This continued until she was as well and hearty as the rest of us.

I know Postum has benefitted myself and the other members of the family, but not in so marked a degree as in the case of my mother, as she was a victim of long standing."

THE GREATEST STORM OF THE SEASON

Considerable Damage Done by the Cloud Burst.

WATER FLOODS MANY CELLARS.

And Plays Havoc with the Crops—Houses Struck by Lightning—The Sewer Bursts at the Corner of Park and Sherbrooke Streets.

A terrific storm of lightning and rain swept over this district on Saturday night. The rainfall is estimated at eight inches, and consequently very great damage was done to crops, fences and bridges. The creeks were changed from quiet streams into rushing torrents in a few hours, and it is feared that many serious washouts have occurred. In town when the storm was at its height, many persons had come out to do their week's shopping, which many unfortunately leave until Saturday night, and were forced to spend a couple of hours in the stores before they could venture out. The pavement at Ormond & Walsh's corner was several inches under water, which ran into the cellars of many of the stores, doing much damage. The sewer was soon choked up, and could not commence to carry off the water.

The steamer City of Peterborough, with over 100 passengers on board, fortunately was in the lock when the storm came on, and the captain very properly decided to remain there until it had passed over. Some of the passengers were badly frightened, but none of them got wet or suffered any inconvenience.

The passengers on the Stony Lake steamers had a hard time of it, many of them getting a thorough soaking. The rain came down in such torrents that it was almost impossible to keep dry.

Struck by Lightning.

So far as we could learn there was no serious damage done by lightning. In Ashburnham a house on Sophia st., occupied by Mr. Wm. Chrow, who is employed in Mr. E. Mann's cheese box factory was struck by lightning. The shingles were ripped and a hole made in the side of the building. Fortunately no one was injured.

A Close Call.

The storm on Saturday morning, although not accompanied by [illegible] downpour, was nevertheless very severe. A house belonging to Mr. Henry Cox, situated about four miles from town, on the boundary between North Monoghan and Smith, was struck by lightning. The fluid tore a hole in the side of the window and split a bed post into kindling wood. The hired man was sleeping in the bed at the time and had a narrow escape.

The Damage to the Sewers.

That the sewers of the town have been damaged there is every reason to believe. The outfall sewer is not nearly large enough to carry off the surface water, and the pressure of water must have been enormous. At the corner of Sherbrooke and Park streets the strain was so great that the sewer burst open, flooding out many cellars. The loss will be considerable.

OBITUARY

Death of Mrs. Burnham, an Esteemed Citizen of Ashburnham

We very much regret to record the death of Mrs. Burnham, of Ashburnham, at the ripe old age of 92 years, which sad event occurred at "Inglebourne," Ashburnham, on Saturday. The deceased lady had not been in good health for some time, and her demise was therefore not unexpected. She was the widow of the late Rev Mark Burnham, and was of U. E. loyalist descent, being the daughter of the late Sheriff Bostwick, of the county of Simcoe, Ont., and the neice of the late Revds George, John, William and Egerton Ryerson. Her grandmother was supposed to have been the first white child born in Canada after the cession of the French and was known as the "mother of Nova Scotia."

About seventy years ago the deceased was married to the late Rev. Mark Burnham, who at that time was Rector of St. Thomas, afterwards, in 1852, receiving the appointment of Rector of St. John's Church, Peterborough.

On coming to Peterborough Mr. Burnham took up his residence in the village that bears his name, where the family have ever since resided.

Of the deceased it can be truly said, she lived only to do good. Her life was one of purity and unselfishness, and in her declining years she bore her illness with true christian fortitude and resignation. The funeral will leave the family residence this afternoon at 4 o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery.

One by one the heavy laden
Sink beneath the noontide sun.
And the aged pilgrim welcomes
Evening shadows as they come.

One by one with sins forgiven,
May we stand upon the shore,
Till her gentle, tender spirit
Takes our hand and leads us o'er.

A Serious Accident

Mr. Michael Guerin, of Ashburnham, while working on a scaffold at the Cereal works on Saturday stepped on a small stone causing him to slip, by which he was precipitated to the cellar below Besides being severely shaken up, his arm which caught on a brace, in the descent, was badly hurt, but providentially it broke the fall and altered his posture, and thus prevented what might otherwise have been a fatality. The scaffold was fifteen feet from the earth, but he fell on a pile of building stone in the cellar, about ten feet below the surface.

A GREAT FUTURE FOR THE NORTH WEST

The Marvellous Productive Qualities of the Soil of Saskatchewan

Destined to Become the Great Milling Centre of the World — Long Season Without Night.

Ronald Cates, of Edmonton, Alberta, owner of 10,000 acres of wheat land in Athabasca, and an enthusiast concerning the future of the Northwest Territories, was in town yesterday.

"There is no doubt," said Mr. Cates, "that in the course of comparatively a few years the milling center of the world will be in Canada, not in Minnesota. I told some of the people of that State the other day that it was a pity that they were not a few hundred miles nearer the dead center of wheat culture in the Western Hemisphere, which is the Saskatchewan valley. Either they will have to move their mills under the other flag, or we shall build mills there that will do the bulk of the business.

"Nature provides for the perfection of wheat in the Saskatchewan as nowhere else on the face of the earth. Where the ground freezes ten feet deep in winter, our wheat crop derives its nourishment from the slowly dissipated frost in the ground. Wheat in the Saskatchewan gets more moisture and derives more benefit from the frost that comes up than from the rain that comes down. Wheat is a plant adapted to the rigors of such a climate as ours. The tap roots of wheat commonly go four feet down into the earth in search of the moisture that is to be derived from frost. The feeder roots, or those closer to the surface, drink in the rain that falls, but frost is what makes the crop.

"The time will come when men of this generation will see the bulk of the Northwestern wheat crops shipped out of Hudson Bay. Comparatively unimportant improvements at Grand Rapids, on the west coast of Lake Winnipeg will enable vessels to go down the river 300 miles or more to terminals that will be established on Hudson Bay. Ice crushers of the types now in use on Lake Michigan, and by the Russians at Vladivostock, would make Hudson Bay an open port.

"The average time for the growth of wheat in Minnesota is 115 days. This is from the time it is put into the ground until it is harvested.

"Last year they took crops off the Saskatchewan valley farms in ninety days. This is easily explained. Our crop is now a few days behind theirs, most likely. Before two weeks have passed it will be away ahead of theirs. The reason is that in the midsummer days Saskatchewan knows no night, practically speaking. One sees the sun go down at 10 o'clock, and it is very easy to read a newspaper without artificial light after midnight. After that comes about an hour of twilight, and then sunrise again. So you see that our wheat crop is growing every hour of the 24, to all intents and purposes. There is more sunlight and more moisture than can be found anywhere else in the world, as a result of which, while you appear at one part of the season likely to beat us out on the crop, we invariably pass you at the turn into the stretch and win comfortably on both yield and time.

"There are so many hundreds of thousands of acres capable of growing the finest wheat in the world, open to American farmers, that there is no wonder they are flocking to the fields of Saskatchewan. Fifteen years from now you will see the most marvelous transformation. Where there are units in the Canadian Northwest now, there will then be thousands.

"How about the winters in Saskatchewan?"

"Well, we are not talking about those much. That is the reverse side of our picture, but for hardy races there is nothing in a Saskatchewan winter to terrify. It is cold enough, to be sure, but people build warm houses, dress for the climate, and altogether seem quite as happy in their winters as in their summers."

JAPAN'S WONDERFUL MARINE EXPANSION

The Little Empire Making Great Strides in Ship Building

BRITAIN HELPING HER

The Treaty Recently Made with England Gives Japan a Good Start—Is Now a Great Naval Power

Special to The Times.

London, July 8.—Japan is rapidly becoming a great factor in the maritime world. In alliance with Great Britain its dominance in the Pacific ocean is already assured. It was long ago predicted by a great Englishman that the head office of the P. & O. Company would one day be at Tokio. This may or may not come to pass. But Japan's recent development of its mercantile marine bids fair to outdistance anything the world has yet seen. It has increased in three and a half years by 315 steamers and by 3,242 sailing vessels, the increase in tonnage in each class being respectively 127,392 and 294,562 tons. This is a striking rate of progress, and one rarely met with in the case of other countries, especially if the increase in the number of large steamers is taken into account. In fact, in 1896 Japan possessed only one merchant steamer of a tonnage exceeding 5,000 tons, but at this moment it possesses twenty-one steamers whose individual tonnage is above 6,000 tons. In proportion as the volume of shipping has grown, so there has been an increase in the number of seamen available for manning the ships, and it is to be remarked that Japan can provide its own skippers and naval engineers. At the end of last June the number of ship's officers with a captain's certificate, and of engineers, was 15,412, of whom 15,108 were Japanese, and only 304 were foreigners. The number of engineers serving in the mercantile marine of Japan was 2,791.

GRAHAM DEFENDS CAPE COLONY

Whole Scheme of Suspension Unnecessary for Supremacy.

FEW WHITES WERE REBELS.

Only Two Per Cent.—Would Make the Dutch Sullen and Resentful of the British

Cape Town, July 6.—Mr. Graham, the Acting-Premier of Cape Colony, addressed a large and enthusiastic meeting in the Wynberg Town Hall. He said all he wanted was to do right in the interests of the future of the country. Four years ago he stood before the electorate an imperialist to the finger tips and he remained so to-day. The colony was in a most flourishing condition. The recent successful flotation of a loan had proved that. Sir J. Gordon Sprigg's optimism was justifiable, and it was this flourishing country that the suspensionists wished to reduce to an ignominious vassalage. The fraternisation of Briton and Boer since the peace had disproved the continual calumnies on the noble conduct of the troops. They had now gained what they had fought for — the liberty and freedom of South Africa. The power of Krugerism had been destroyed, the Afrikander Bond had been crushed, and they were now asked to suspend the Constitution, which meant to capitulate to the Bond without firing a shot, and to reduce the people's position to that of political helots. If they thought suspension necessary for British supremacy, and that measures would not be passed by Parliament ensuring that supremacy, he would not hesitate for a moment to concur in suspension; but the whole scheme was unnecessary. Suspension would reduce the colony to the level of a little dependency such as Turk's Island —a step unprecedented in the history of the Empire. He sketched the history of the suspension movement stating that at Mr. Rhodes' meeting of twenty Progressives, when a petition was first signed, the idea of the members was that the Constitution should be suspended only for a few days. He was quite sure that Mr. Rhodes was under the impression. Later, the members met the Government, on which occasion it was stated that the Constitution could be suspended by Act of Parliament, first, by a clause in virtue of which they could suspend the Constitution, and, lastly, by a clause in which they could re-enact it. The Government said that was impossible. There is very little possibility, he continued, of the Act necessary for suspension being introduced in the Imperial Parliament before September.

REBELS ARE THE SCUM.

It is said that 2 per cent. of the whites of the colony are rebels, and because a handful of the scum have gone into rebellion is the colony to be branded with the stigma of rebellion? If every Dutchman in the colony were branded as a rebel he would store for ourselves a heritage of woe, and if the Constitution were suspended Dutchmen would certainly think they were branded. If we thought that Mr. Chamberlain would govern here for twenty years, or Lord Milner, good and well, but what if Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman were in power? I am told that suspension is necessary to gain a progressive majority, but I am certain that with the new registration return there will be a good progressive majority. Mr. Chamberlain will have petitions and counter-petitions, and before November there will be an opportunity of the Cape Parliament meeting. Then Mr. Chamberlain will see how member support the measures necessary to ensure British supremacy. Would suspension allay radical feeling? What would the Dutch farmer think, who would be deprived of practically everything, if his vote were also taken? The Dutch would return to their farms sullen and resentful, and bide their time. The Constitution, if suspended, would not be given back until Federation was an accomplished fact. The Cape would have no voice in the matter, and Natal, with responsible institutions, would dominate the position. If Federation were forced upon the Cape during the suspension we should lose control of the Customs, railways, and defence, and lose the possibility of protecting the colony from dismemberment. Nothing would prevent the Orange River being made the boundary of the Cape or Bechuanaland being added to the Transvaal or Griqualand East being annexed to Natal. He wanted to warn England. The voice of the provinces was inarticulate owing to martial law, therefore signatories to the petitions were not representative of the Colony. He wished English statesmen to pause before taking such a step in the question.

LIVE MAN IN EXPRESS BOX

Went From Boston to Marshall, Mich., and Then Found Out

Special to The Times.

Miles, Mich., July 7.—When the American express on the Michigan Central reached Marshall to-night, Messenger George Hall was sorting express matter for transfer. He turned over a box which struck his experienced touch as being suspicious. The box was shipped as merchandise from Boston and was addressed to persons in Cheney, Wash.

Messenger Hall tore the cover off the box and found a live man inside. At Kalamazoo the man was arrested.

He had provisions in the box. He said some friends had shipped him as merchandise because he had no money and desired to get to Washington. He is a foreigner.

THE ALASKAN BOUNDARY

Americans are at Last Becoming a Little Nervous

Special to The Times.

Washington, July 7.—A report from St. Petersburg to the effect that two agents of the United States Government have been at work in that capital, seeking information from the Russian archives respecting the Alaskan-Canadian boundary, has led the State Department at Washington to make an investigation, for it has not sent any agents on that errand to Russia. It is now learned that Philadelphians have been in St. Petersburg looking into the boundary matter, but acting in a purely private capacity. They are said to be very much concerned over the prospect of trouble in connection with this matter.

Wretched Hot Weather Sufferers

Paine's Celery Compound

SHOULD BE USED IN JULY AND AUGUST

The extraordinary variable spring and early summer weather of the present year has been the cause of a vast amount of sickness in every part of our country. Strong men and women have been victims: the weak, rundown and sickly have suffered intensely, and many families now mourn the loss of near and dear ones.

The nervous, weak, rundown and debilitated should now devote their best energies and attention to health-building, so as to enable them to withstand the enervating effects of the approaching hot weather.

The use of Paine's Celery Compound will soon bring a return of true physical strength; the nerves will be fed and braced; the blood will be made purer and richer; digestion will be corrected, and sweet, refreshing sleep will take the place of insomnia and irritability.

Paine's Celery Compound is doing a marvellous work for the sick and suffering at this time. It is the only preparation that possesses value and virtue for recruiting the strength and spent energies of weakly and sick people in summer time. The trial of one bottle will give you happy results.

TEACHERS APPOINTED

At a Special Meeting of the Board of Education Last Night

In my haste yesterday I overlooked this letter, which should have been answered:

Chicago, Ill., July 5.—Mr. Idler: My son is suffering some awful pains and says he cannot stand them. I have been readin' up on the Faith Cure business, and am doing all I can for him in that line. Do you think there is much in the Faith Cure Idea? Let me know at once, as my son is kicking and cursing, and swears he is in awful misery.

MRS. R. S. L.

Ans.—Before I could give you a positive answer, I would have to know something about your son's symptoms. Did he ever have the measles? Has he been exposed to hydrophobia? Does he wear False Teeth, and are his feet cold? Is his pulse regular or irregular, or both, and how often? Send me his picture, a lock of his hair, and tell me, is he subject to Fits? Also what was your maiden name before marriage? You should have written me about this before he was seized with the Cramps and Pains, if you expected me to give immediate relief. A thing coming so sudden this way naturally upsets me. I may find time to drop in and see him Sunday afternoon, if he does not succumb before that time.

THE TOWN COUNCIL IN REGULAR SESSION

The Otonabee Bridge to be Repaired Jointly by the Town and County

Reports of Committees—Mr. W. J. Green Re-Appointed Tax Collector—A New Boiler Required for Town Buildings.

The Town Council met in regular monthly session last night when there were present Mayor T. H. G. Denne and Aldermen Edgcumbe, Shortly, McGregor, Morrison, Batten, Rush and Corkery.

The minutes of the two preceding meetings were read and confirmed.

NO FUNDS FOR DREDGING.

A communication from the Hon. J. Israel Tarte was read as follows:

T. H. G. Denne, Esq.—

Dear Sir,—Permit me to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of May 30th regarding additional accommodation on the river applied for by the citizens of your town.

As I have explained to you Parliament has not placed at my disposal any money to carry out that work. I have no right to take any steps toward such work without a special authorization from my colleagues. When I came to Ottawa there was not a quorum of Ministers at the Capital. I will do my level best to make the necessary arrangements, but it is indeed very difficult, as when Parliament has not voted money for a work a Minister has no right whatever to go on with that work.

As soon as I am back in Ottawa, I will see the Acting Prime Minister and ask his advice and cooperation in the matter.—Received.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From R. M. Dennistoun and property the construction of a sewer to drain the construction of a sewer to drain Dennistoun Avenue and Water street. This sewer to be constructed along the lane laid out parallel with these streets running from Inverlea street to Smith street, and also asking that the sewer may be laid upon the said lane upon the understanding that the Town will not take over the said lane as a highway or become responsible in any way for the same as a public lane. Sewer to be continued west on Smith street to Water street and south on Water street to the junction with the main sewer—Board of Works with power to act.

From a number of ratepayers at the south end of the town, complaining that the surface water accumulates in a low place on Lock street and asking that a catch basin be constructed there for drainage.—Board of Works.

From John Crane, manager of Ontario Bank, advising council that the account of the Town of Peterborough on June 30th stood: debit $19,566.36.—Received.

From Miss E. Morrow, asking that the amount of $5 paid for an eating house license for the Y.W.C.A. be refunded.

From Robert Elliott, asking for a free license to keep a stand on the street for selling lemonade—License Committee with power to act.

From D. W. Dumble, regarding the man named John Evans, who being paralyzed and without any means of support, is at present confined in the jail as a vagrant. Mr. Dumble quoted Dr. Chamberlain, Inspector of Prisons, as saying that the invalid Evans should be sent to one of the Houses of Providence or to a County House of Refuge, and he (Mr. Dumble) thought the municipality should see that he was sent to one of these institutions at once, and pay for his maintenance therein.—This matter was was left in the hands of the Finance Committee with power to act.

From W. G. Morrow, Secretary of the School Board, asking that a School Trustee be appointed in the place of Mr. Bamford resigned.—Legal Committee with power to act.

From S. R. Armstrong, Secty.-treas. Peterborough Water Commissioners saying that he had, under instructions, handed to the Town Treasurer a cheque for $2,500 on account of surplus revenue over the expense of supporting the Water Works.—Received.

From L. K. Jones, Secretary Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, as follows: Referring to the application of the Town of Peterborough for the grant of a lease of the unavailable surplus water at Dam No. 4 on the Peterborough —Lakefield division of the Trent Canal. I am directed to inform your that the Department cannot allow the said Town a date later than August 1st next in which to give it a definite answer in this matter, as other parties are pressing for the grant of leases of water power at the point in question.—On motion of Ald. Morrison, seconded by Ald. Batten the clerk was instructed to write the department that the town is willing to waive its prior claim to this dam providing that the power is brought to Peterborough.

From J. H. Yelland, asking for remission of taxes on two dogs he owned at time of assessment. He thought he was entitled to this as one of the animals was poisoned and the other stolen shortly after assessment was made. Court of Revision.

From W. H. Hill saying that on the evening when peace was declared in South Africa one of his office windows was broken by the heat from bon-fires in the street; as the cost of relettering the same will be $32.10, he thought the Town should issue him a check for that amount.—Legal Committee.

From G. L. Hay, J. D. Tully, H. M. Morphet and W. Squires, asking for remission of dog tax. Court of Revision.

From P. H. Sims, secretary of the British America Assurance Company, asking the town to make good the insurance claimed from this Company for damage done to building No. 159 Hunter st. and No. 389 on the corner of George, during the celebration of peace in South Africa. The Company claim that the bonfire which caused the damage, was lighted in the middle of the road by the town's authority.—Legal Committee.

The Police Constables applied for holidays—Referred to the Committee on Appointments with power to act.

FINANCE REPORT.

Ald. Corkery submitted the following:—

Gentlemen—Your Finance Committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows—

1. That a cheque for $2875 be issued to the Town Trust Commissioners to pay interest on the Waterworks Debentures as asked for by the Commissioners.

2. That J. G. Hutchinson be allowed $14.97 on account of the claim made in his letter of May 29th, 1902, and that the attention of the Property Committee be called to the matter so that it will not occur again.

3. That the following accounts be paid:

REPAIRS TO OTONABEE BRIDGE.

Ald. Morrison submitted the report of the Joint Committee as follows:

Gentlemen,—Having been appointed to meet the representatives of the County Council, regarding repairs to Otonabee Bridge, we met Messrs. E. A. Peck Commissioner, and J. E. Belcher, County Engineer on the 3rd inst. at 9 a.m.

After a thorough examination of the Bridge we came to the conclusion that the present condition of the floor and joists was so bad that any attempt at patching would be a waste of money.

We therefore recommend that the following renewal be carried out:

Complete new joists 3 x 12 set 18 inches apart centre to centre.

The old material to be divided equally and to be used for repairs elsewhere.

The superstructure requires tightening. Many of the rods and bolts being quite loose and causing undue vibration.

An experienced man with proper appliances will be required for the operation.

We also recommend that notice be put up at each end of the bridge, prohibiting driving faster than a walk.

This report was adopted and referred to the Board of Works with power to act.

BOARD OF WORKS.

1. We recommend that the town pay William Downer, caretaker of the locks bridge, $45 a year as the Town's share of to his salary.

2. We recommend that James English be paid $50 a year additional salary, to

A SUMMERLESS YEAR

Spring weather came upon us very early this year; but it did not last long, and up to a few days ago it looked much as if we were going to have a repetition of the great "summerless year"—1816. All sorts of much stretched stories have been told of that year by "oldest inhabitants." For instance, it was recently stated in a Toronto paper, on the strength of an old man's information, that in 1816 "the ground was covered with snow from the middle of June to April of the following year.

A correspondent of the Toronto Telegram has recently unearthed some 1816 files of the Quebec Gazette, and these give reliable information for, at least, that part of the country. The following from the Quebec Gazette of June 6, 1816 will make good reading for Peterborough people just now:

"From eleven o'clock till half-past twelve, this day, the 6th of June, there has been an uninterrupted fall of snow in this city." August 22, 1816, the same paper said: "The weather since the beginning of this month has been uncommonly favorable for the fruits of the earth of every description. On Thursday a great deal of rain fell, which threatened some hurt; but yesterday the sky became clear, with a pleasant breeze, which has removed the bad effects of the rain. Contrary to expectation, the wheat harvest will in some districts be very abundant, and in others at least a middling crop. In this vicinity the reaping will be general next week. In the eastern townships a great deal of wheat is remarkably fine. Barley is said to be productive beyond former years; the grain of astonishing weight. The occasional rains have been beneficial and the farmer was never more agreeably disappointed. We are happy to learn the same may be said of Upper Canada. There, as well as here, hay is, however, far short of an ordinary crop. The quality of flour at St. John's is great; price, 40s."

October 10, 1816, the same paper said: "Since the first week there has been a continued drought to the end of the month; the weather has generally been very hazy, attended with cold winds; on the 15th a severe frost was experienced. The 19th and 20th was extremely warm; the 26th, 27th and 28th the frost was so severe as to complete the destruction of the potato crop, which escaped that of the 11th. The effect of such unseasonable weather has been particularly felt by all the standing crops, which are in a backward state, requiring warmth and rain to bring them to maturity. The wheat in the fields, which remained at the date of our last report, has been housed and is very fine. There still remains out through the district a quantity of oats, a great portion of which cannot ripen and must be cut for forage. ~~The early peas have been got in~~, the quantity is great, but the sample will not be generally good, there being nearly one-third that were not perfectly ripe. * * * The Indian corn was destroyed by the frost of the 11th: it is doubtful whether seed may be obtained for another year. * * * The potatoes * * cannot be rated at more than half a crop. The meadows have made little progress since they were mowed; the country has seldom witnessed so great a want of green food for feeding of stock as has been experienced this summer."

UNCLE SAM FOR PEACE

This is the glorious summer of Uncle Sam's content. On the 3rd of July, he signed a treaty of amity and other things with Spain; and, on "the fourth" he proclaimed peace in the Philippines. A month or so ago he withdrew from Cuba, and left her a republic, and Cuba promptly proved her gratitude by returning to him all his criminals who happened to get caught on the island. The Filipino "rebels," who rebelled against the sale of themselves by Spain to the Americans, are all amnestied. The advertisement is out that if they will return home now and be good all will be forgiven. Uncle Sam is out for peace with all his might, and he will have it even if it takes an army corps to bring it in o' camp.

And there are many features of this episode in his history, beginning with the declaration of war upon Spain and closing with peace in the Philippines and independence in Cuba, which are very much to his credit. He promised to set Cuba free from the Spanish yoke; and he did it, and did it thoroughly, substituting no padded yoke of his own in its place. He took in Porto Rico "en route," but that only goes to show that he is still a man and has not lost his appetite for territory. He also captured the Philippines on a side, but he afterwards paid Spain for them and will give them better government than they have ever known. It is easy for outsiders to regret that he did not give them their independence, too; but the American people spent good money on the war and they are adverse to the profits that come from extended markets.

A FAKE BATTLE

The New York Evening Post says:—

"Admiral Dewey's testimony before the Senate committee on the Philippines establishes beyond dispute the spurious character of the so-called battle of Manila. His guns commanded the city absolutely, but the Spanish Governor-General wanted a little fighting to salve his imperilled 'honor,' and so, to oblige his opponent, Admiral Dewey very politely and jauntily 'killed a few people,' as he puts it. Apparently no hunter could destroy a dozen squirrels with less compunction. Moreover, he expressed no regrets for the American soldiers needlessly killed in the land attack. Perhaps with him, as with the responsible generals, the highest rewards bestowed upon the leaders of this sham battle quite overshadowed the casualty list. Yet this is one of the achievements of which we were so proud in 1898!

A citizen of Toronto has just won a lawsuit against a local tailoring company which sued him for the balance of the cost of an $18 outfit. His defence was that the clothes were too tight, and burst when he put them on. "The coat and vest I cannot use and the pants I simply use when riding a bicycle." Judgment for the defendant, who ought to come to Peterborough for his tailoring in future. The best sartorial artists work in this city.

Inflamed Nose and Throat

And such diseases of the respiratory organs as bronchitis, weak lungs, cold in the head and nasal catarrh, are treated with marvelous success on strictly scientific principles by Catarrhozone. The medicated vapor of Catarrhozone quickly traverses every air passage possible to be reached by any treatment. Any soreness, pain, congestion and inflammation are at once dispelled, and by means of the healing powers of Catarrhozone the vitiated tissues are quickly restored. Where Catarrhozone is used colds only last ten minutes, coughs half an hour, and catarrh, consumption, asthma and bronchitis flee as from fire. A trial will convince any one of the startling merit of Catarrhozone. Costs $1.00, small size 25 cents. At druggists, or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

George A. Treadwell Mining Company

27 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK. JEROME, ARIZONA.

Capital - - - - $3,000,000.
VALUE OF SHARES $10.

In a suit recently tried in the New York courts it was proved from the books of the United Verde Copper Company and the sworn testimony of the bookkeepers that the cost to that company of producing copper was only three and a half cents a pound, not counting the gold and silver values, which—allowed for—reduced the cost to a still lower figure.

Nowhere outside the Verde Copper Belt in Yavapai County, Arizona, is copper produced in quantities for less than twice this cost.

The United Verde has about two hundred acres on the north end of the Belt and the George A. Treadwell Company has several times as much in the central and southern parts of the Belt. The conditions along the whole Belt are entirely similar. We already have three mines developed—the Cliff, Brookshire and Iron Queen—one of which, the Cliff, seems to be larger and better than the United Verde, and the other two at least approach it in magnitude and value, while we have several others, including Badger, Pastime, Green Monster and Spoke and Stonewall, which, though less developed, are equally promising.

Professor Treadwell believes we have at least half a dozen United Verdes within the broad and extensive limits of our holdings.

As soon as our smelter plant which is now in process of erection, is completed, we can certainly produce copper as cheap as our rich neighbor on the north.

The United Verde for several years has produced one-tenth the copper of the world. When our plants are fully installed we expect the Verde Belt to produce one-half the copper of the world, and the George A. Treadwell Mining Company will be prepared to do more than its full share.

Before investing in copper in unproved localities, consider the stock of the George A Treadwell Mining Company, named after the great pioneer and explorer of the Verde Belt and owning the largest and best aggregation of properties on it.

The price of the stock is $11 a share Make checks payable to The order of the company and send he 27 William Street New York

THROUGH BOER WAR WITH THE BRITISH

Stephen Talbot, 19 Years Old, Served With the British

HOME AGAIN AFTER THREE YEARS

He Says Some of It was Very Mild Fighting Indeed—His Account of the Way the War was Waged

Three years ago Stephen Talbot, the sixteen-year-old boy, son of Mr. Hiram Talbot, formerly with the Canadian General Electric Company, Peterborough, left his home and went to New York, where he secured a position on a cattle ship, when he went to London, where he joined the British army and served for three years in South Africa. He had no end of experiences.

He returned home lately, having been discharged from the army a few months ago, and told some of his experiences to a Times reporter.

"When I got to London on the cattle steamer I was broke," he said. "I was hungry as blazes and was eating a banana while walking along the street when a fellow who evidently saw that I was hungry stopped me and asked me if I didn't want to join the army.

"I hadn't had any idea of doing that but I was so hungry that I asked him if I'd get enough to eat. He said I would, so I went right off with him and enlisted.

"The regiment I joined was the First Leinsters, and after a stay of six months in Ireland and two months in Aldershot we were shipped to Cape Town. The first day we were there we were placed on guard over the 1,800 Boer prisoners who were camped in the racecourse.

"While we were on guard it was discovered that some of the Boers had begun to tunnel into the town from the enclosure, and had a good long hole dug. Knapsacks bearing the names of three of them were found in the excavation and their owners were shipped away in a hurry.

"During my stay in Cape Town and later in the country I had a good chance to see how a cook can rule officers. The cook for the officers' mess was the man who had acted in the same capacity on board the transport which took us to South Africa. He was a good cook and the officers persuaded him to give up his job and come with them.

"He was an ex-prize fighter and wasn't afraid of any of them. There was a young Lieutenant named Cameron in the regiment who was about 18 years old and was very self-important. He used to practise saying 'Waitah, bring me a drink,' in his tent until he got his nerve and one day used the phrase to the cook.

"The man didn't pay any attention to him. Cameron attempted to call him down for his inattention and the cook gave him the greatest talking-to I ever heard. He asked Cameron if his mother knew he was out and several other things not exactly respectful.

"Cameron made a kick to his Colonel, but nothing was done about the breach of discipline as the cook was the only good culinary artist in the vicinity and they couldn't afford to lose him.

"The men of the regiment were mostly Irishmen and had a fondness for getting drunk. There was a crowd of about fifteen drunk somewhere in camp every night, and when they became too noisy the officers ordered them to be crucified.

"That is a punishment I never heard of before. A long plank was set upon uprights about five and a half high parallel to the ground. The men were backed up against it and their arms outstretched and tied to the plank. There they were left until morning, and it was no easy punishment.

"After a couple of months with the Regulars I found that I was making only one shilling a day while the Volunteers were getting six shillings. A lot of us talked it over in camp and made up our minds to desert, and join the Volunteers; so we did.

"Fourteen of us changed regiments and only one was caught. He was recognized seven months later and got nine months in prison.

"The Volunteer regiment I was in was sent out into Cape Colony. The regiment was a good deal different from the Regulars and was composed of the worst lot of bums and hoboes I ever saw. A good many of them were deserters from the ships that came into Cape Town and there was a lot of mule tenders in it.

"It wasn't much of a regiment. Its Colonel was an M.P., and was so afraid he might do something that would bring discredit upon him and spoil his chances for reelection that he didn't dare to chase the enemy, engage them or do very much of anything.

"When he was supposed to be chasing the Boers he would advance until he heard that they were only a little distance in front and then he would stop. On a couple of occasions he accidentally ran on some of them and he didn't like that a bit so he retreated.

"With a Colonel like that it is no wonder that we didn't see much fighting. He didn't want to hurt the Boers and they didn't want to injure us. After a few little skirmishes prisoners told us that they were mighty sorry that they had to hurt some of us and that they wouldn't have done it if they could have helped it.

"There was a little town inland which the Boers held and which I suppose we were sent to capture. The actions around that town were funny.

"Whenever the Colonel wanted to go in and take supplies to the inhabitants he sent word to the Boers to leave for a little while and they all got out. Then the English would go in and deliver the supplies. If they didn't do it quickly enough the Boers would send in word that they were coming back and our Colonel would get out in a hurry.

"The Boers captured two of our men there and told them, after keeping them a couple of days, that they might go back to their camp if they would carry a note to the Colonel. They agreed. The note told the Colonel to chain the two men up, as they ate so much food that the Boers could not afford to feed them.

"Finally the Generals learned how much good our Colonel was and we were ordered back to Cape Town where he was deposed and Col. Price put in command.

"He was better than his predecessor, but not a great deal better. On one occasion we were camped at night on a ridge on a farm. In the morning the sentry saw about eighty Boers sleeping in a cornfield near-by. There were 300 of us, so Price made up his mind that he could take a chance and attack them.

"He ordered us to go around to another ridge and to fire down on them from there. There wasn't any order in the way the men went and the first man to gain the ridge began to fire.

"That let the Boers know that they were being attacked and they made a rush to get away without trying even to get their horses. They had to pass right in front of the English in their flight and we had a fine time firing at them as they went by. In spite of that we hit only one and he got away.

"Their horses stampeded and followed them. The rush excited two of our horses which were carrying boxes of Maxim cartridges and they ran over and joined the Boer horses.

"One of our Captains, named Farrington and three or four men chased out to get them. Farrington was terribly unpopular among the men and while he was trying to regain the horses he was shot through the legs and later both of them had to be amputated.

"The reports said that the Boers fired the shots that did it, but I know better. He was shot by some of the men on our side who hated him and were ready to do almost anything to be rid of him.

"One of the men who went out with him to capture the horses had his mount shot under him. That fixed it so he could not run away and he held his ground. Later he was rewarded for his bravery in not running.

"One can get a pretty good idea of the reason the Volunteer officers were not more ambitious, from a conversation heard between some officers and Boer prisoners. The Boers asked the Englishmen how long the war would last. The officers answered that it would go on about three years.

"They said that they were satisfied with their jobs. They didn't have to work very hard and were drawing better pay than they could get at home at work, so they didn't want to do anything to help end the war.

"The men were willing enough to fight as a rule, but I know only one Volunteer officer who really tried his best to conquer the enemy. He was named Davis and worked for all he was worth. When he found a man that was not fighting in an engagement Davis would sail in, punch the laggard and make him fight.

"I don't want you to think that all the officers were Englishmen, though. Most of them in my regiment were Scotchmen, and in the ranks there were men of almost every nationality, with not a great many English.

"The news of all this shirking never got into the papers. All reports had to be censored, and the censor fixed it all so that one might think the regiment was doing great work.

"The worst regiment I saw in South Africa was the Sixth Worcestershire. In it there were hardly a dozen men who were over 16 and they didn't know how to shoot a gun—that is some of them didn't.

"When they got to Cape Town they were the laughing stock of the place. About eighty of them went to the hospital the first day, and there was nothing worse than toothache or stomach ache the matter with any of them.

"That regiment was sent out to guard a line of blockhouses. One day a sentry reported that he saw something in the distance, so the detachment at that point, about eighty men, went out to investigate without thinking to take their guns. They didn't find any Boers during their investigating tour, but when they came back to the blockhouse they found that the Boers were there and had captured all their ammunition and guns.

"The Boers told them to get out or they would get hurt, so they went back to the Colonel and reported. Many of them were crying like babies about the sad affair.

"The loss of several blockhouses was reported at the headquarters at Stormberg and Bergensdorf, which were on either side of the blockhouses. Armored trains were sent out from each place to try and regain them. The trains collided on the single track and twenty-seven were killed.

"Once when our regiment was in camp near a farm the sentries were stationed on a ridge. I was sent out to relieve one of them and couldn't find him anywhere.

"Finally I saw a bunch of Boers a little distance off carrying the sentry away. Evidently he had been lying down smoking when they came on him and took his gun away.

"I gave the alarm and I never saw anything like the actions that followed. The officers all ran into the farmhouse and lay low. The men when they saw what the officers had done took to the barns and the Boers came on.

"Then the officers sent word by a servant to the men in the barn telling them to come out. They were willing enough to do that if they had any officers, so they charged and the Boers ran away.

"About the funniest thing in the whole campaign was our allowance of winter clothing. All I got was a pair of socks, coat and trousers and a set of underclothing. All I got was a pair of shoelaces and a chin strap for my cap.

"We didn't fare badly, though. We didn't get much food from the authorities but we did have permission to forage and take anything in sight, so we came out pretty well.

"About six months ago they found they didn't need a good many men so they weeded them out and sent a lot home. They found that I had bad teeth from eating army biscuits and that my heart was weak, so I was discharged.

"I was sent back to London, and there the Government gave me a ticket home in the steerage, so after all I haven't any complaint to make about the way I was treated."

Yale's "Criminal Club."

The Criminal Club of Yale will revive the custom of holding an annual banquet this spring. The announcement has revealed to many the existence of perhaps the most peculiar social organization in existence in the collegiate world. According to the New York "Sun," membership has never been based on the social or financial status of the students taken, nor have men been taken into the fold because of their prominence in the world of athletics, literature, or debating. The one requirement has been that the proselyte shall have been arrested and taken into the toils of the law, whether guilty or innocent of the offence with which he stood charged. Often to secure membership in this exclusive, yet thoroughly democratic club, students have violated the law, and then calmly awaited the coming of the police, as usual non-present at the time, and permitted themselves to be taken into custody. More often the men have been caught red-handed, without being able to escape the bluecoats. From year to year the club has increased in numerical strength, this depending wholly on the law-breaking proclivities of the undergraduates in college at the time. At present the club numbers one hundred members.

The annual banquets have long held a prominent place in undergraduate life. Where and when these feasts are held is never known to the uninitiated until long afterward. Usually, however, they are given in the grill-room of some student cafe in New Haven, or at a hotel at some of the near-by shore resorts. The men assemble individually, and never in conspicuous throngs. Every effort is made to avoid publicity. The dinners or banquets begin late at night, and end in the "wee sma'" hours. The men are ranged about the festive board in the order of their criminality—that is, they sit near or far from the head of the table as the crimes for which they were arrested were great or small. Usually, although the rule is often violated, the man who has done the most daring crime, given the cops the greatest battle, or who has incurred the greatest punishment, heads the table and acts as toastmaster. Toasts of the following kind are responded to: "Policemen I Have Met," "How to Steal Signs and Escape, by One Who Didn't," "The Religious Aspect of Criminality," by Y.M.C.A. member; "How I Failed to Distance a Cop in a Handicap," by a member of the track team, and so on, by representatives of the different spheres of activity represented. The menu is usually made out with a black and white stripe effect, while handcuffs, dark-lanterns, and policemen's clubs intermingled adorn the top and bottom of the menu card. Usually a selected number of dirges are rendered by the university glee and banjo club members, who, the other Criminal Club members say, deserve honorary memberships for murdering music the way they do, if for no other reason.

Dooley on Reading.

Readin', me fri'nd, is talked about be all readin' people as though it was th' on'y thing that makes a man betther thin his neighbors. But th' truth is that readin' is th' nex' thing this side iv goin' to bed f'r restin' th' mind. With mos' people it takes th' place iv wurruk. A man doesn't think whin he's readin', or if he has to, th' book is no fun. Did ye iver have something to do that ye ought to do, but didn't want to, an' while ye was wishin' ye was dead, did ye happen to pick up a newspaper? Ye know what occurred. Ye didn't jus' skim through th' spoortin' intillygince an' th' crime news. Whin ye got through with thim, ye read th' other quarther iv th' pa-per. Ye read about people ye niver heerd iv, an' happenin's ye didn't undherstand—th' fashion notes, th' theatrical gossip, th' s'ciety news fr'm Peoria, th' quotations on oats, th' curb market, th' real estate transfers, th' marredge licenses, th' death notices, th' want ads., th' dhry-goods bargains, an' even th' idditoryals. Thin ye r-read thim over again with a faint idea ye'd read thim before. Thin ye yawned, studied th' design iv th' carpet, an' settled down to wurruk. Was ye exercisin' ye-er joynt intelleck while ye was readin'? No more thin if ye'd been whistlin' or writin' ye-er name on a pa-aper. If anny wan else but me come along they might say: "What a mind Hinnisey has! He's always readin'." But I w'u'd kick th' book or paaper out iv ye-er hand, an' grab ye be th' collar, an' cry, "Up, Hinnisey, an' to wurruk!" f'r I'd know ye were loafin'. Believe me, Hinnisey, readin' is not thinkin'. It seems like it, an' whin it comes out in talk sometimes, it sounds like it. It 's a kind iv nearthought that looks ginooyne to th' thoughtless, but ye can't get annything on it. Manny a man I've knowed has so doped himself with books that he'd stumble over a carpet-tack.

Breach of Promise Ethics.

If a man engages himself to marry a woman, and, on the understanding of that engagement, induces her to abandon, for, perhaps, a lengthy term, the chief business of her life—securing a suitable husband—and subsequently breaks his engagement, he inflicts just as real a cash wrong as if he had engaged her as governess and not paid her any wages. For a term of perhaps two years, possibly the best years of her life, he has kept the woman from the quest of a husband, and thus materially injured her matrimonial prospects. It is right, therefore, that he should pay compensation.—"Bulletin," Sydney.

A West Lambton Joke.

Public School Inspector (testing a senior Part I. class in phonics in a school-room where election day brings the children a holiday)—"Now, little folks, who can tell me what this word is?" writing "e-lec-tion" on the blackboard.

Inspector (not satisfied that the boy recognises the word)—"What does it bring you, my boy?"

Small Boy (in a whisper)—"Money."

The Inspector was satisfied, but he declines to name the boy.

The Despot of Vienna.

The citizen of Vienna who does not wish to be out of pocket must keep early hours, for after ten o'clock he is taxed on entering his own house, or, for the matter of that, any house. The "sperrgeld," or door-opening tax, is peculiar to Vienna, as the London "Express" explains. The entire population of that city, numbering nearly two millions, are practically imprisoned in their houses from ten o'clock in the evening until six the next morning. They can go in or out only by paying at least four cents to the janitor or "house-master," as he is called.

Vienna is built on the "flat" or apartment-house plan. Millionaires and working people alike live in houses of this description. The houses are large, having five or six floors, with four flats on a floor, so that it is not unusual to find a hundred persons living under one roof. There is one common entrance from the street, and after ten o'clock at night this door is bolted and barred. From ten until twelve all who go in or out must pay four cents. After twelve the charge is doubled.

The tax must be paid every time one passes through the doorway, without exception. If a man has occasion to go in and out half a dozen times, he must pay every time. One who has dined with a friend must, if he stay late, pay four cents to get out of his friend's house, and four more to get into his own. A telegram in the night necessitates the payment of the tax before the boy can enter.

The house-master also collects and keeps duplicate copies of the forms on which every individual in the house must report to the police his age, birthplace and religion, his exact occupation, and other personal details which the Austrian authorities insist upon knowing. Nor does the power of this important personage end even here. From the little guard-room which he occupies at the foot of the stairs he sees every one who goes in or out. He ascertains with amazing accuracy the amount of each tenant's income, the events of his family life, and the character of his visitors. His far-reaching power enables him to terrorise every servant in the house into entering his intelligence department, and thus he spies on the innermost life of the subjects in his five-storey kingdom.

In some cases the house-master is more powerful than in others. An English resident was obliged to move from an apartment that he particularly liked because he could not venture to speak with any degree of sharpness to the man at the door, even when the man was remiss in his duties. The flat was owned by a railway belonging to the State. This made the house-master a State official, an insult to whom is a very serious offence in Vienna. A reprimand for delaying letters would be construed into an insult, and the Englishman deemed it wise to move to other quarters.

Thousands of people in Vienna live in such terror of the house-master that, it is said, they never make an apple-tart without giving him half.

Buried by a Cougar.

A hunter who was trailing after bear meat in British Columbia reports to the "Western Sportsman" an experience which he calls a "narrow graze." If the incident happened as the hunter tells it, it was indeed a narrow graze; but one cannot help suspecting that some of the invigorating ozone of the North-West has got into the story. Nevertheless, it is worth hearing.

"It was warm and dry, and along in the middle of the afternoon I began to pine for rest and a pipe. It was all quiet and no traces of game, and so when I'd had a comfortable smoke I stretched out for a nap.

"It must have been an hour later that I woke up and found myself covered with two feet of leaves snug as the babes in the wood. I was all tucked in that cosy that nobody else could have done it but a cougar, and most likely a female cougar at that. It occurred to me with some force that I'd been filed away for future reference, and that I hadn't waked up any too soon. It didn't soothe me to figure on that cougar stowing me away as a dog hides a bone.

"It seemed that the best thing for me to do was to countermine that cougar's mine, as it were. So I hunted up a log about my size and covered it with the leaves—a nice fat hump on the ground. Then I shinned a tree close by, assuring myself beyond any doubts or peradventures that nobody had meddled with the working of my repeater.

"The cougar came in such a short time as to show how fortunate it was that I had waked up when I did, and with her, as I had calculated, were a choice lot of young ones. She had left a dinner located and had been off to get her family.

"Well, that cougar circled around the pile of leaves for a matter of minutes, crouching and picking a nice select place to spring from. When she got satisfied and made the leap she went through the air tremendous, throwing the leaves in a whirlwind and scratching and snarling. It was some of a shock when she found the log, but she didn't display any disappointment. She just took the scent and came to the foot of my tree and looked up, real venomous.

"It seemed to her an awkward job to handle, I having my gun ready so, and the cougar had an inspiration. She went to a tree about ten feet away and started to go up. She was after that meal and not to be discouraged by any trifles. It was her idea to climb up above me on the other tree and then bring me down with a flying leap.

"I didn't lose any more time with experiments or speculations, but let her have it the first time she came round the tree. The ball went through her jaw and breast, and the varmint went to the ground. The young ones were running around, and I knocked them over, too, with the gun.

"Since then I haven't gone to sleep in the woods so careless and casual like."

"Have the letters been duly examined by the hand-writing expert?" "Yes, your honor." "Very well, let the hand-writing expert now be examined by the insanity expert."—"Ohio State Journal."

KING TO BE CROWNED WITHIN SIX WEEKS.

King Passes Another Excellent Night.

London July 5. The following bulletin regarding King Edward's condition was posted at Buckingham Palace at 10 o'clock this morning:

His Majesty had another excellent night. He is cheerful and feels much stronger. We are glad to state that we consider the King out of danger. The evening bulletins will, therefore, be discontinued.

(Signed)
Treves.
Laking.
Barlow

The big function, the King's dinner to 500,000 poor, was fittingly celebrated today as a thing of joy for the recovery of the King. His mind was ever with the people during his illness. Before the operation he declared, "I will go to the Abbey if I have to be carried there." and his constant worry was, "What will my people do?"

London, July 5.—A number of coronation rumors are current. The optimists say King Edward will be quietly crowned six weeks hence. However, the court authorities have been consulting the business world, with the view of ascertaining public interests prior to making any definite arrangements.

The proprietor of one of the largest hotels in London urged that the beginning of October would suit the populace best. He pointed out that the King could not possibly be well enough to undertake any ceremony until August, when society will be shooting in Scotland, the working classes will be enjoying their holiday and London will be deserted. This condition prevails up to the end of September.

By October 1 also hundreds of Americans and others who are now visiting the Continent will be passing through the metropolis on their way home.. Already many of the previous disappointed persons have secured options on rooms for the end of September in anticipation of seeing the coronation. It seems likely that the crowning will occur somewhere about that time, but with little or no pageant, however.

Big Buildings.

St. Peter's is the biggest building in the world. St. Paul's could be placed inside the great cathedral at Rome without blocking up the way through. St. Peter's stands on an area of two hundred and forty thousand square feet, with a front four hundred feet broad and a length inside of six hundred feet. The cost of building the cathedral was three and a half millions sterling—exactly the same sum as was spent on the British Houses of Parliament, and five times as much as the cost of St. Paul's. The Vatican, which can hardly be called a single building, has eleven thousand apartments, approached by two hundred staircases; and there is a mystery in Madrid which has twelve thousand windows and doors. But they can hardly be called single buildings, and, bearing this distinction in mind, the biggest building in the world is the Church of the Pope at Rome.

The builders of the Old World were more ambitious than our own. No such theater has ever been built in the modern world as the Coliseum, with its diameter of six hundred and fifteen feet, its height of one hundred and sixty-four feet, and its seats for a hundred thousand people. No wall has ever been built to equal the great wall of China, which runs thirty feet high and twenty-four feet thick for twelve hundred miles; and the Pyramids remain the wonder of the world in the twentieth century as in the first. Ancient Egypt had twelve palaces each with three thousand rooms; and the walls of Nineveh ran for a hundred miles a hundred feet high and wide enough for three chariots to drive abreast along the top.

"Young Never-Grow-Old."

The war has not as yet developed much pathetic poetry. It is not till the clatter and blare of the march is past that the cry of the mourner reaches the ear. Perhaps among the first-fruits of the harvest of poetic sorrow may be counted a short poem in "Longman's" by Mrs. Fleming. It is simply entitled "Spion Kop." Two stanzas may be cited out of five, all of which will go home to many a mother's desolate heart:

Young Never-Grow-Old, with your heart of gold,
And the dear boy's face upon you;
It's hard to tell, though we know it well,
That the grass is growing upon you.
Flowers and grass, and the graveyard mould,
Over the eyes of you, Never-Grow-Old,
Over the heart of you, over each part of you,
All your dear body, our Never-Grow-Old. . . .

Never-Grow-Old, your curly head
Will never streak with gray;
Young Always-Young, your springing tread
Will never pass away,
The morning glory of your eyes
Will light you now and ever;
You keep your boyhood in the skies,
The other side the River:
River that flows by the City of Gold,
River of Healing, dear Never-Grow-Old.

Mrs. Jenkyns—I see Mrs. Hootong is going to have "King Lear" at her next private theatricals. Mrs. Newrich (furious with envy)—Is she? The affected thing. Do you know, I don't believe he's a real king at all.—"Tit-Bits."

REGENCIES IN ENGLISH HISTORY

Illness of the King Suggests Some Interesting Material

London, July 4.—The report that the Prince of Wales will be made regent in the event of a long convalescence of King Edward surprises not one. No monarch of England has ever yet lain dangerously ill without some suggestion of a temporary transfer of power.

When Queen Victoria was dying at Osborne House, a regency with the present King as regent was quite freely discussed. In the present instance however, a regency, while possible, is not today considered as among the immediate probabilities.

To the average student of English history, but two regencies stand out prominently in the records—that of the DDuke of Bedford, which chook the foundations of the House of Lancaster during the long minority of Henry VI., and that of George, Prince of Wales, during the madness of his father; and yet provisions for a regency have been made no less than fiteen times since the iron heel of Norman conquest stamped upon England the seal of genuine national life. The Earl of Pembroke, by and with the consent of the barons, became regent when Henry III. ascended the throne; the eighth Henry appointed his executors regents until the heir to his crown should attain legal age, and the executors, upon the accession of Edward VI., declared their rights and privileges and authority to the man who, by such delegation, became Lord Protector of the Realm and a virtual king; In 1751 the widow of Frederick, Prince of Wales, was named as regent, should the crown pass from her father-in-law, George II., to her then minor son, afterward George III.; in the time of George III. Parliament was asked upon three separate occasions to grant authority for the establishment of a regency.

POWER TO APPOINT.

By the first of these acts the King was invested with power to appoint a regent if it appeared to him that the succession was likely to devolve upon a minor [illegible]; again, in 1778 a second regency bill was introduced, owing to the insanity of the King, and although it was dropped when George recovered, the debate upon its provisions furnished a notable and satisfying denial to the report that the Prince of Wales desired to assume regency powers without the consent of Parliament. A disclaimer of any such intention on the part of his brother was made in the House of Lords by Frederick, Duke of York. In 1810 a recurrence of the King's insanity hastened the passage of the third regency bill, which clearly defined the limits of the regent's authority. He was empowered to rule without a council of regency, he could make war and conclude peace, negotiate treaties, dissolve Parliament, but he was restricted in the matter of conferring peerages, offices and pensions. Being thus deprived of plenary powers the regent complained freely to his friends, and was even represented by a satirist of the day as writing a rhyming epistle to his "dear brother FFred," in which he observed that

With straight waistcoats on Dad and restrictions on me
A more limited monarchy scarcely could be.

ONE REGENCY ACT.

The reign of George IV. included the passage of but one regency act, which merely stated, in accordance with a well known constitutional principle, that the regent, like the sovereign whome he represents, cannot be a member of the Catholic faith. After the accession of William IV. an act was passed to enable the Duchess of Kent to exercise the functions of regent, in the event of her daughter the Princess Victoria, being called to the throne during her minority, and in the reign of Victoria two more, and the last, regency statutes were proposed by the ministry of the day and accepted by Parliament. In the first year of the late Queen's reign a regency council without a regent was named to act if the heir to the throne were absent from the Kingdom the time of the Queen's death; by the second act Prince Albert was accorded the full powers of sovereignty during the possible minority of his wife's successor.

Completely Fagged out

The world is full of sickly, despondent, tired, enervated people, all hoping to be well some day. The surest road to health is along the way of taking Ferrozone after meals. Ferrozone is a great appetiser and enables one to eat plenty of wholesome food without fear of indigestion or dyspepsia. This results in the rapid formation of an abundance of red, vitalizing blood, which will restore the nerves, increase flesh and vigor, and nourish and feed every organ of the body. Ferrozone is an ideal restorative and invigorant. It is a tonic of unequalled merit that anyone can use with benefit. Price, 50 cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50, at druggists, or Ormond & Walsh's.

TO GET RID OF THE PESTS

The Buffalo moth is another name for the carpet beetle (anthrenus schrephulariae) of the family Dermestidae. It is especially liable to attack the edges of carpets. Try tacking the carpets. If the insects still attack then spread a wet sheet over the parts where you have reason to believe the moths have been, and rub over quickly with a hot iron. The steam will destroy both the larvae and any eggs deposited. Before putting the carpet down again, wash the floor with hot water. Strew camphor or shavings of Russian leather under the carpet. If the insects attack something that cannot be treated in this way try saturating with gasoline. Many people when closing rooms for the summer sprinkle gasoline about on the furniture and carpets. But do not do this at night, or near a

ITEMS OF NEWS.

Ottawa, Ont. July 4.—An extraordinary state of things on the Government canal reserve, three miles from the post office is reported today, and is being investigated. A Gang of Roumanian gypsies has camped on the reserve near Dow's Lake close to the road at Hog's Back, which is much used by citizens and a favorite drive. Information is given by well known respectable citizens that the gypsies placed a rope across the road last night, stopped carriages and demanded money in some cases dragging young men and women from carriages and threatening them with violence unless they paid for their liberty. One man on a wheel who refused to pay was pulled off by two of the gypsy women and knocked about. The spot is outside the city limits, but the county police have taken the matter up, and the Dominion police may do so today. Some ladies residing in the locality have left their houses fearing molestation.

Washington, D.C., July 2.—Preparations are being made at the Russian embassy for the reception and entertainment of the Grand Duke Boris, first cousin of the Czar, who is expected to arrive in this country within the next few days. Upon his arrival the Grand Duke will come direct to Washington, where a series of fetes are planned in his honor. He will be presented to the President, but will not expect any public functions in his honor, as he is traveling unofficially, though not incognito. While in the United States he expects to devote considerable time to investigation of the immigration problem, and the condition of American citizens of Russian extraction in the United States.

Monument to a Patriot

Sycamore, Ill, July 8.—The memory of Abner Powers, one of the few soldiers of the Revolutionary wars buried in Illinois, is to be honored by the unveiling of a monument at Lily City tomorrow. Powers enlisted in the colonial army as a drummer boy, in which capacity he served two years. He then enlisted as a soldier and served in General John Stark's regiment, First New Hampshire Continentals. He had seven brothers in the war, and all came out unharmed. The monument to his memory is a tall shaft of Barre granite. It is inscribed with the names of the four engagements in which he participated—[illegible], Saratoga, Valley Forge and Washington.

Gigantic Tunnel Project

Cripple Creek, Colo., July 5.—Early in the coming week active work will be commenced on the gigantic tunnel project of the Cripple Creek & Pueblo railway company. The work is the biggest undertaking of the kind ever attempted in the Cripple Creek district. The tunnel will contain a double track railway, and the total cost is estimated at $5,000,000. It will require upwards of three years to complete the tunnel and its main branches. There will scarcely be a mine of any importance in the entire Cripple Creek district that will not be able to send out its ores through this tunnel.

Big Missionary Gathering

Syracuse, N.Y., July 5.—The State convention of the Christian and Missionary Alliance, which opened to-day at Assembly Park, near Tully, is one of the most notable gatherings of its kind ever held in this part of the State. The Rev. A. B. Simpson is the presiding officer, and among the well-known mission workers taking part are the Rev. Henty Wilson, D.D., of New York; W. E. Blackstone, of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. David P. Ekvall, of West China; Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Hamilton, of India; Miss Kate Knight, of Burmah; the Rev. Robt. M. Glover, of South China, and the Rev. John Robertson, one of Scotland's most famous preachers.

St. Paul's Big Horse Show

St. Paul, Minn., July 7.—Society regards the horse show and race meeting, which opens today under the auspices of the St. Paul Driving Club, as the event of the summer. The golf links, the tennis courts and the yachts will be deserted for the state fair grounds. In the quality and number of exhibits the show is the equal of many of the more important metropolitan exhibitions. The completed list of exhibitors is a long one and includes almost every prominent breeder of the West. The sum of $15,000 will be distributed among the winners.

Iron Molders in Convention

Toronto, Ont., July 7.—Delegates from many parts of Canada and the United States are attending the international convention of iron molders, which will begin a week's session in Toronto to-day. A number of matters of importance to the craft are scheduled for consideration and action.

jealous stare; and her face lighted with a vivid gleam when she heard our mother appraising my possessions, exclaiming that when my six pounds were exhausted I should have something substantial to fall back upon.

Never shall I forget my first night in Easel street. Used to a big, deliciously springy bed, spread with lavender-scented sheets, blankets light and white as thistle-down, and a satin coverlet that matched the coloring of my room, the narrow, prison bunk which had to be shared with Totsey was almost unbearable in its discomfort and squalor.

I had half fearfully expected a letter from Roger Cope in the morning, but there was nothing for me; and after a breakfast of bitter tea and bread (eaten early that Fan might hurry off to the factory) I went out to try my luck at several employment agencies.

At one or two I had to pay a small booking fee in advance, and I was alarmed as I found my money (Swift's money!) dwindling. My requirements and capabilities were written down, and towards noon I left the last establishment which I meant to visit that day, faint with hunger and weary for want of sleep.

As I came out into the street and climbed adventurously to the outside of an omnibus which I had hailed, something made me suddenly turn my head over my shoulder. A man was looking up at me with intent, narrowed eyes, and an expression both sarcastic and threatening. As he met my astonished glance, his face became a blank. He pretended to be hailing another omnibus close behind the one I had taken, but though it was hard to believe that those dull, commonplace features were the same I had seen sparkling with malice an instant ago, I could not forget the shock I had received.

CHAPTER X.

The Spider in the Glass.

Within the next few days I had occasion to notice something strange in connection with the agencies to which I applied for a situation as companion or governess in a school or family. The manageress would be cordial at first, and, when she had heard the list of my accomplishments, hold out high hopes of speedily obtaining me a desirable situation. But the next time that I went to make enquiries all would be changed. She would be stiff, reserved in manner, almost forbidding, telling me that there was a very little chance of my finding anything of the sort I wanted.

If this had been so only in one case, I should have thought little of it; but, acting upon my mother's advice that it was well to have numerous "strings to one's bow," I had laid my claims before several agencies. And it certainly was remarkable, I thought, that in every instance it should be the same.

My half-sister Fan was now sixteen, and yet, as she informed me one day in a moment of confidence, she had an over. But one evening she came home from the factory looking mysterious, with eyes that advertised a secret. The next night she did not appear till bedtime. We had been sitting up for her, and she swaggered in, ostentatiously showing a ring on the third finger of her left hand. This was a present, she excitedly announced, from a young man, a "real swell," who had been trying to make her acquaintance for some time, and who had taken her to the theater. He wanted to "know her family," and she was going to bring him home to the noon dinner next day, which would be Sunday.

I did not wish to meet my future brother-in-law, and besides, I thought that the family gathering would be happier without me, so I dined at a particularly early hour on a piece of bread and disappeared before Mr. Tom Stephens was expected. I would take a long walk, I thought, and not return until he was certain to have escorted the lady of his choice to some Sunday afternoon entertainment.

Hardly had I reached the end of the street, turning into another which led towards Commercial road, when I almost ran into the arms of the man who had stared after me one day as I left an employment agency. He gave me a queer look, and passed on, while I hurried away, fearing that he might follow. Presently, I glanced back, and was relieved to find that he was not in sight; but sauntering after me, with his hands in the pockets of his Sunday coat, was a young man who lived in the "upper flat" of the house opposite my mother's in Easel street.

His name, I also knew from Totsey, was Welcome, his business was a mystery, his money plentiful; and my own experience on the two Sundays I had spent in Peckham had proved him of a friendly disposition.

In our street, when a young man wished to make the acquaintance of a young woman, he helped himself to it, so to speak; no introduction was necessary. And Mr. Welcome—inaptly named—had twice attempted to force his claims upon my notice. Both times I had eluded him by hurrying home, and raising a shout of laughter from Totsey, who had observed the manoeuvres from the window. But to-day I could not bear to go back. I was vexed that I had glanced over my shoulder, lest the man should think I intended to encourage him, and I hastened on, as if I did not know of his existence.

He could walk faster than I could, however, and in two or three minutes he was at my side.

"Look 'ere," said he, breathing fast, and suggesting lately imbibed spirit, "you needn't be in such a dashed 'urry."

"I don't know you, sir," I said, with dignity. "Be good enough——"

"Then it's your own fault," Mr. Welcome broke in with a cackle. "I want to know you bad enough," he went on, keeping pace with me. "And I'm in earnest this time. Anybody in the street can tell you you've made a dead mash of me. In two weeks you've done what your sister's bin trying to do for twelve months. Sye, don't look as if I was dirt under your feet, y'know! I mean business. Honest, I do!"

"You can have no business with me," I said, icily. "Please leave me. If you

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by the Times.

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is 'phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—ED. TIMES.]

—This is circus day, and the small boy will be greatly in evidence.

—Lindsay proposes to borrow $36,000 to provide pavements and other permanent improvements.

—Invitations are being issued to the fifth annual professional and business men's excursion to Rice Lake on Monday next.

—Work on the Cereal Company's buildings is being rushed. Night gangs have been put to work so that good progress is being made.

—The Cornwall Toronto electric railway people have been looking after the Trenton water power. They say they have completed arrangements with the municipalities from Cornwall to Trenton, and find some hostility from towns west of Port Hope.

—The question has often been asked what deposit is needed in having a recount after an election, and also what deposit is needed in demanding a protest? The answers to these questions are: There is no deposit demanded in a recount but $1,000 is needed for a protest.

—The annual Sunday School picnic of the Park street Baptist church will take place on Thursday, July 17. It will be held to Jubilee Point. The City of Peterborough will leave the wharf at 8.15 a.m. The charge will be 25 cents for adults and 15 cents for children.

—Cobourg Post: Reginald Hooper, who has just been pardoned from the Kingston penitentiary, will not talk about the crime for which he was punished. He says he wants to banish it all from his mind. He will go to Port Hope shortly where he will be able to remain in quietude and avoid meeting many people.

—St. Catharines Journal: Citizens who love shade trees will bear in mind that the City council offers a reward of $10 "for information that will lead to the conviction of any lineman or other person found climbing shade trees in the city with spurs, or found trimming any tree without written authority." If is different in Peterborough. Trees are butchered right and left, whenever it suits anyone to do so.

—While Mr. J. H. McClellan and one or two friends were sitting in the office of the McClelland Coal Co., on Sunday afternoon, enjoying a smoke, a wall gave away, and several tons of coal came crashing against the side of the office. For a moment there was wild excitement For a moment there was wild excitement as the party all tried to get through the door into the street at the same moment. There was no serious damage done.

—Those of our readers who have found their lemons dried up and hard when they wanted to use them, need not be troubled that way again if they keep their lemons under glass. They will keep for a long time, even months under glass. If you are not going to use them immediately, lay them on a flat surface and invert a goblet over each one of them, or put them in a glass jar. After several weeks' imprisonment in this way they have been taken out as fresh and juicy as ever.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to furnish the paper with items of a personal and social nature, either by 'phone or in writing.—ED. TIMES.]

—Mrs. M. L. Henry is home from her summer cottage at Chemong Park.

—Mr. and Mrs. Arthus Lang and child, of Galt, are in town for the summer holidays.

—Mr. George Gowland, of Toronto, spent Sunday in town, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McClellan.

—Mr. John Waddington, of Gore's Landing, is in town to attend the circus. The Cap's many friends will be pleased to meet him.

—Miss Agnes Dickson of the Y.W.C.A. and Miss Annie Paterson, left yesterday morning to attend the Y.W.C.A. conference at Lake George, New York.

—Mr. Burton Brooks of Cleveland, son of the late Mr. Thos. Brooks, of Peterborough, is in town on his holidays.

The genial proprietor of Lakefield's bat livery was in town today and stated that Lakefield would send a large quota to the circus. Mr. Manning brought in several Americans from Lakefield bound for home.

A Conference

A Sabbath School Conference of the Presbytery of Peterborough was held last night in St. Paul's church. Addresses were divered by Rev. J. Neil, of Toronto, and Rev. Mr. Thompson of Hastings. On account of the rain there was not a large attendance.

A Painful Accident

Miss Maggie Record, an employee of the Auburn Woollen Mills, who resides on Stewart street, Ashburnham, met with a painful accident yesterday morning. Miss Record is engaged as a corder, and her hand caught in the machinery with rather serious consequences. It was badly lacerated and she may lose one or more of her fingers.

Mr. Lindsay's Appointment

Mr. H. P. Lindsay, after twelve years with the Temperance Life, and the Amalgamated Company goes this week to the office of the Imperial Life Assurance Company to which he has been appointed Manager for the Peterborough district. His many friends wish him the same success in the future as he has had in the past.

Death of Mr. Best

Mr. John Best, of town, received word of the death of his brother, Mr. Wm. Best, who lives a few miles North of Millbrook, which occurred on Monday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Best left for Millbrook at once. The funeral will take place this morning at 10 o'clock to the Presbyterian cemetery near Millbrook.

Three Men Arrested

Yesterday morning Chief Roszel was informed that three men had been arrested in Hamilton township, who had stolen a quantity of butter from a farmer living about 14 miles from Port Hope. One of them was Wm. Sidy, of Peterborough of Copper Wire Fame and the other two were George and William Lacheur, two well known characters. A liveryman in Port Hope identified Wm. Lacheur as the man who hired a horse from him some time ago and drove to Peterborough and never returned the outfit. It will be remembered that Chief Douglas of Port Hope, sent word to the local authorities who arrested a man who answered the description of Lacheur but who proved to be the wrong individual.

Fishing at Buckhorn

Mr. Holmes, the Superintendent of the Cordage Works, accompanied by Mrs Holmes and family, drove out to Buckhorn on Saturday last, to enjoy the pleasures of fishing at this popular resort. When they arrived they were met by Mr. Martin McFadden, the well known furniture man, who is a veteran nimrod "Mart" took canoe while Mr. and Mrs. Holmes followed in another, and in a short time Mrs. Holmes felt a tug on her line and proceeded to pull in a speckled beauty. In the excitement of landing the fish Mr. Holmes lost his paddle and had to call to Mr. McFadden to come to the rescue, as they had no means of propulsion. A second and even a third fish were the result of Mr. Holmes' first effort in the trawling line while his companions in the other canoe did not even get a "nibble." It is surmised that "Mart" did not chew the right quality of blackstrap tobacco, and did not spit on his bait. While Mrs. Holmes with the sureness of an old-timer drew in fish after fish. Mart was only able to draw his breath, and soon after they landed he drew a bee line for home. He says it wasn't a good day for fishing.

A syndicate of New York capitalists is reported to have been formed for the purpose of furnishing power from this and other sources for use in Peterborough, Cobourg, Port Hope and other places in Ontario.

General - Sports

LACROSSE.

The T.A.S. and Athletics will play tomorrow night on the Oval. This will be the first time this season that these respective teams have come together. Both teams will fight hard for supremacy.

BASEBALL.

The Young Victors will soon have to change their name. They did not live up to it on Saturday, when a combination team from the Independents and Crescents defeated them in a 13 innings game by a score of 9 to 7. The match was pulled off on the Central Park, and was witnessed by an enthusiastic crowd. The umpires were Ned Fitzpatrick and Hague Sawers, and the teams were as follows:

St. John's S. S. Picnic

The annual picnic in connection with the Sunday School of St. John's church took place yesterday to Jubilee Point and was fairly well attended. The rainfall greatly marred the pleasure of the day, but the staunch steamer City of Peterborough brought the party home as dry as when they left.

Ask your druggist for Lactated Food; take no other.

The G. T. R. and Orangemen

Lindsay Post: Our representative was informed today by a leading local True Blue member that Orillia and other lodges in that district have decided not to celebrate the glorious 12th in Lindsay this year on account of the high rate the G.T.R. was demanding. In other years, when the celebration was held here, the company gave a rate of 80c. per person from Orillia, but this year the company demanded $1.25, which the Orangemen think is altogether too high. We understand that other lodges in the district are meeting with similar treatment from the company. If this is so the G.T.R. Company should reconsider the rates, and thus enable every Orangeman in the district to come out and celebrate the 12th in Lindsay.

A DARING LOOPER

Some of the Many Great Features with Forepaugh-Sells Circus

It is an indisputable fact that Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers combined circuses have more entirely new and thrilling features than any show ever traveling in this country.

Among these may be mentioned the wonderful feat by Diavolo, who loops the loop on a bicycle, at once the most death-defying and daring act ever presented before the public. Just as a child swings in a circle a bucketful full of water without spilling, so does dare-devil Diavolo sweep the circle at a frightful speed without falling. This feature alone created a profound sensation in New York city and all other cities where seen.

Then there are the Aurora Zouaves, the official interstate drill champions of the United States, who have just returned from a triumphant conquest of all continental Europe, where they were pronounced by nobility and royalty to be the best drilled soldiers in the world; Minting, the Marvel, the only man on earth who can and does ride a unicycle or single wheel of a bicycle up and down a narrow spiral tower; the Four La Montes, the Five St. Leons and the Five De Lucons, the three troupes of all Europe's greatest acrobats; the Ten Peerless Potters, the Greatest Aerial Act on Earth; the Jackson Family Cycling Septette; Starr, the Shooting Star, who dashes down a ladder on an ordinary bicycle; the quartette of cakewalking horses who made the biggest hit of anything ever seen in the horse line at Madison Square Garden; an army of all-star clowns who divide the time between laughter and applause. All kinds of races are run in the great double hippodromes, and throughout the programme there is superb music by Merrick's magnificent military band.

It is indeed a wonderful consolidation, and there will not be very many living in this community who will not want to see it when it exhibits here to-morrow, July 9th.

Lindsay Has Her Troubles

Some people are easily frightened. During the past few days several enquiries have been made at this office by people who contemplate visiting Lindsay with the Orangemen on the 12th, as to the number of cases of scarlet fever which exist in that town. The idea seems to prevail that the whole town is down with the disease and that it would be courting death to go within a mile of the place. We can assure all who are thus alarmed, that there is no such danger to be met with. Lindsay has no scarlet fever to speak of, and never had—and these few cases are nearly if not quite recovered. We venture to say that Peterborough had more scarlet fever this spring than Lindsay, and there was not a word about it. This great family journal therefore takes pleasure in assuring those who propose to take in the celebration on the 12th, that the only danger they will be in the least exposed to, is the fire water which is sold under the name of whiskey. Don't touch it with a ten foot pole, if you can't get Calcutt's lager, fall back, as a last resort, on the muddy water of the raging Scugog.

OLD, OLD SCENES RECALLED

Next Saturday will be the 12th of July The Peterborough brethren will go to Lindsay. Havelock is also having a big celebration.

THE TOWN COUNCIL

date from May 1st, 1902, and that it be part of his duties to act as Engineer of the Road Roller, flush sewers, etc.

3. We recommend that tenders be asked for a gravel walk on the River Road north of Smith street, subject to specifications to be drawn up by the Engineer.

4. We cannot recommend that the request of Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald for permission to construct a railway siding on Bethune street, as it would obstruct the street too much.

5. We recommend that the request of Rev. W. J. McCall for a granolithic side-walk at St. Peter's Presbytery be granted on the petition being presented in proper form and properly signed.

6. We have examined the petition for a granolithic sidewalk on the east side of Stewart street, from Dalhousie to King street and find that it is not sufficiently signed.

7. We recommend that the Stevenson Coal Company's tender for steam coal at $4.85 per ton be accepted, providing the Company deliver it where and as it is required by the Town Engineer, and that such load be weighed on the Market scales and the market weigh ticket be given to the Town Engineer, the Town to pay for the weighing.

8. We recommend that the application of the Peterborough Light and Power Company for permission to place a pole line of Dublin street, from George to Aylmer, be granted, the poles to be placed subject to the approval of the Town Engineer.

9 We recommend that the Town Engineer be instructed to order the removal of any unused poles from the streets and if they are not removed the Engineer be instructed to remove them.

10. We recommend that the Chairman of this Board be authorized to arrange with the Water Commissioners for a constant flow of water into the dead ends of the sewers. All of which is respectfully submitted.

The report was adopted as read.

COLLECTOR OF TAXES.

A bylaw appointing W. J. Green, Collector of taxes for the year, 1902 at a salary of $700 passed its several readings

Ald. Batten moved, seconded by Ald. Corkery,—That tenders be asked for a new furnace for the town building.—Carried.

Council then adjourned.

Bad Weather for Haying

The present wet spell is hindering the farmers greatly in their haying operations. Thousands of acres of clover and timothy have been cut in the last few days, and owing to the falling of rain every day, it has lain on the ground uncured, and in danger of being spoiled unless there comes a period of bright sunshine and dry weather.

RECIPE FOR WHITEWASH

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir,—Will somebody kindly give the recipe for making whitewash?

Ans.—Slake half a bushel of unslaked lime with boiling water, keeping it covered during the process; strain it and add a peck of salt, dissolved in warm water; three pounds of ground rice put in boiling water, and boiled to a thin paste, half a pound of powdered Spanish whiting, and a pound of clear glue, dissolved in warm water; mix these well together, and let the mixture stand for several days. Keep the wash thus prepared in a kettle or portable furnace, and when used put it on as hot as possible, with painters' or whitewashers' brushes.

A COALITION GOVERNMENT

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir,—The despatch which appeared in The Times a few days ago, regarding a coalition Government, to take the place of the present Ross Ministry, created a good deal of talk and considerable excitement.

Although the matter has not been referred to in the Toronto press, it is nevertheless, I believe, a fact that such a deal is being attempted. I know for a fact that at least one Liberal member was asked to give his support to such a combination as was outlined in the Times I also believe that the press of Toronto has been instructed not to say anything about it. I learned this from a newspaper man in the city, whose veracity is undoubted.

If the coalition is accomplished, as seems probable, I think The Times deserves to be complimented on being the first newspaper in the country to announce the fact.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am, etc.,
A KNIGHT OG THE GRIP.

ENGLAND AND THE BOERS

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir,—Some English friends of mine tell me that England was fighting not only the Boers, but the whole world, as the whole world as secretly or openly assisting the Boers from motives of jealousy or prejudice. Is this so?
A READER.

Ans.—It is not so. The whole world sympathized with the Boers, doubtless; but open governmental aid was forbidden by the laws of neutrality, whose breach would have meant war with England. Private assistance was given, but it was individual, not governmental.

NOT JOHN BROUGHAM'S TE DEUM

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir,—A few days ago I noticed an enquiry for John Brougham's "Te Deum" —I do not know it by that title, but perhaps, the following stanza may help to answer it:

By the help of God, my dear Augusta,
We've had another awful buster:
Ten thousand Frenchmen sent below!
Praise God, from Whom all blessings [flow.

This was in Punch during the Franco-German War of 1870-71, and was written in imitation of Emperor Williams well-known despatches to the Empress Augusta after every Prussian victory.

Ans.—The above is not the poem asked for though it is similar in spirit, satirizing the Prussian monarch's literary.

PERSISTENT AND GLARING ATTEMPTS MADE TO DEFRAUD THE PUBLIC

Several Vile Imitations of Paine's Celery Compound Now Sold in Some Drug Stores

Recognizing the virtues, fame and wondrous sales of Paine's Celery Compound, nature's health restorer, unscrupulous and dishonest men are making persistent and glaring attempts to defraud the public by putting up vile imitations. These imitations by adopting the name Celery Compound, the style of bottle, etc. (marks peculiar to the genuine Paine's Celery Compound), have just brought themselves within the meshes of the law, and this nefarious work will be forcibly brought to the attention of the guilty parties in due time.

For the present, it is deemed advisable to warn the public and put them on their guard. The sick and suffering, and friends of such, are notified that the following imitations are deceptions and frauds:

Gibson, Howell & Co's, Celery Compound.

Robertson & Co's, Celery Compound.

Andrew's Celery Compound.

The only genuine Celery Compound is PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND; it is the kind that "makes sick people well."

An Experiment That Didn't Work

Just now when the ministers of the town are so rudely condemning gambling the following story will be interesting: A Simcoe wife feared her husband would go to ruin because he occasionally played poker. She read a story in a magazine which told of a woman who broke her husband of going out at nights and playing poker by playing with him herself. She decided to try the experiment, and borrowed $50 from a woman in the neighborhood, and got her husband in a game. He won her money in half an hour, and went out to hunt up a real game.

Trooper Ingammels Writes a Interesting Letter

IN DEFENSE OF SERVICE

He Says that Men are well Treated in Spite of Reports to the Contrary

How Canadians Won Mounts for Themselves and Incidentally a Place in the Esteem of the Regulars—Native Ponies are Better than the Imported Mounts.

Trooper Ingamells, of the South African Constabulary, who is well known here, writes very entertainingly regarding the experiences of the Canadians with the Constabulary.

S. A. C. Post.
May 21st, 1902.

Dear Sir,—Not very long ago a copy, or rather a clipping from a copy of the Winnipeg Free Press, was received by one of the members of this troop, giving an account of the experiences of two ex-members of this force, in which they made public their impressions of life in the South African Constabulary. One of these men had been invalided as unfit for service, and the other discharged for other reasons. A third, who unable to work his ticket, had sent a communication by one of the former, and the three combined, under big headlines, seemed to prove this service a gigantic fraud.

Now I do not wish to find fault with any man's ideas, but when he makes statements on behalf on nine-tenths of the twelve hundred men who were enlisted in Canada nearly fifteen months ago for this service, charging officers with *being incompetent, saying that the dis*satisfaction was rife in the ranks, that agreements of enlistment were broken, etc. he places himself before his former companions (whom he fancies to be in misery) as a vindicator of their rights or an exposer of their unjust treatment, and he does not consider the effect of his sweeping assertions on the minds of his former companions to have our corps so misrepresented before the people at home.

I am well aware that numerous communications from men in the S. A. C., have found their way into the hands of the publisher, and by some of these letters it would appear that dissatisfaction existed, but nobody has yet seen the recruit who was not disappointed in his first few months of enlistment, especially on active service. But in most of these cases the letters were never intended by the writers for publication, and in the majority of instances the writers are thoroughly disgusted with the publication of their hastily formed and erroneous opinions of a few months ago. Very few readers take notice of these little cases of grumblings, but when an item is given the prominence that was accorded to the statements of Kennedy and Crawford, and the letter they carried so far, in the Winnipeg Free Press, some people may think that there are grounds for the complaints.

The number and variegated nature of the charges brought up makes it impossible for anybody to answer them in detail, but for comparison I will quote some of my own experiences.

I enlisted in the Constabulary on March 4th, 1901, and was despatched with a number of other recruits to Ottawa, and quartered at the exhibition buildings, where we were temporarily organized for transportation to South Africa. Here we were issued with a sea-going kit, consisting of 1 grey cavalry cloak, 1 pair of blue jeans, 1 pair of boots, a knitted wool toque and sweater; also underclothing, socks, etc. For some inconceivable reason orders were issued that this was to be the regulation dress of the contingent while we remained in Ottawa. No wonder the good people of our Capital city called us "bums" and hoodlums and the interpretation of the meaning of the little white band worn on the left sleeve of the coat, and bearing the three letters, S. A. C., were numerous and variegated. We were evidently a puzzle unsolved by many from the time we took up our quarters there till we were given a hearty send-off to the strains of that rousing old tune. "I don't care if you never come back; get a move on nigger, do," etc., rendered by all the brass bands available for the occasion, with an enthusiasm that was unmistakable.

*On our train journey to Halifax we re*ceived every consideration at the hands of the railway company, and arrived at the seaport well satisfied with our trip. We found the S. S. Montfort complete for our reception, as fine a troop transport as was ever put into commission. Unfortunately the extreme cold had prevented a proper cleaning of her decks before the wood fittings had been put in, causing the vessel to become very unsanitary when arriving in tropical waters. Sickness broke out in consequence and some deaths occurred. Only prompt action prevented further casualties.

We arrived in Cape Town on the 28th of April, 1901, were landed, armed and equipped, and started on our way up country the same day, provision being made for our distribution among the four divisions of the Constabulary, five troops being alloted to the E division, comprising the Orange River Colony. With one of these five troops my lot happened to be cast. This portion of the contingent were detrained at Bloemfontein, and took up quarters at Sydenham, six miles from town. Here we lay in quarantine for about ten days and were organized on the S. A. C. lines, which, however, did not interfere materially with the personnel of the former units.

IN REVOLT AGAINST TYRANNY

Business Men of Indiana Form a Union to Protect Themselves

THE RESULT OF A DISPUTE

Has Caused Untold Trouble and Injured the the Business in Half a Dozen Counties

Indianapolis, July 8.—Labor troubles have brought about a curious condition of affairs in Vermillion, Parke, Clinton Vigo, Clay and Sullivan Counties. Friends of long standing have been estranged, business relations broken up and many quarrels started in a dozen different communities.

One man has been murdered, another dangerously wounded, eight others beaten forty or more business firms placed under bycott and the life of a minister who criticised the acts of organized labor has been threatened and a bycott declared against his church.

Cause of the Trouble.

The cause of all this was a strike resulting from a trivial dispute between the Terre Haute Street Railway and its employes. The Central Labor Union of Terre Haute took a hand in the trouble and declared a bycott against the street car company.

Next the bycott was extended to every person who rode on the cars. It was soon extended to any man's business and groceries, dry goods houses, mills and factories were one after another placed on the list.

Notices were sent out from time to time to all the mining towns in Clay Vermillion, Parke, Sullivan and other counties giving the names of the firms on the list, and asking the organized miners and others not to purchase goods from local merchants who bought at the Terre Haute jobbing houses. Some of the merchants ignored the threats, and the bycott was thus extended to a dozen or more towns which were thus brought into the controversy.

If a man went to Terre Haute from another town, and rode on a street car, his name was secured and placed on the list and his customers at home were asked not to deal with him. A merchant who lived at Brazil missed his train at Terre Haute one afternoon and went home on the interurban. His customers were mainly miners and they at once ceased to trade with him. The milkman who delivered milk in his store was notified by the local union to cease doing so, and when he refused the miners' families in the town refused to buy of him.

The matter even extended to his children in the Public school and one miner took his children out of school because one of them was seated next to the merchant's little daughter. The teacher refused to make any change in the seating of the children and a bycott was proposed against the school, but the plan was not approved when submitted to the union.

Traveler's Hard Luck.

A New York drummer who knew nothing of the state of affairs in Terre Haute, rode from the railway station to Main street on an electric car. Two union men followed him into every store he entered and told the proprietors that they would suffer if they place without making a sale.

The Rev. Dr. Whiterman declared in a sermon that the conditions existing in Terre Haute wer a disgrace to the city and that the laws should be enforced. bought any goods from him. He left the and he was threatened with bodily harm and a bycott was established against him and his church.

Business Men Under the Ban.

The Commercial Club took some 100 people out to see a new manufacturing concern, using the electric cars for the trip, and the Central Labor Union declared that this was done to weaken the effect of the bycott against the company and the club was placed on the list also. This had the effect of putting many persons on the bycotted list who had not ridden on the cars, and nearly every business man in the city was now under the ban.

This state of affairs brought about a very natural result in the organization of the business men of the city for self-protection. They thought that the unions were carrying the matter too far, especially as all the men who had engaged in the strike had either returned to work or had found some other employment

But when they went to the Central Labor Union and asked that the boycotts be lifted they received the reply that they could not be lifted. even if the central body was willing, for the street car company was on the unfair list, and everyone who patronized it must be placed on the same list with it.

The business men then formed an organization, which is known as the Citizens' Protective League. Its object is to protect the members against the unreasonable aggressions of the labor organizations.

No sooner was this league formed than the Central Labor Union placed all of its members on the unfair list and sent agents into all the surrounding towns with notices to the local merchants not to patronize any of the business men who had joined it. The membership of the league is now about 1200, and includes nearly every prominent business man in the city.

Cars Running Regularly.

In the meantime the original cause of the trouble has been lost sight of and the street car company is running its cars regularly and without hindrance

"The American idea that is referred to much these days, means among other things equality of all men. It means in such cases as the street railway affair that the workingman shall have his rights, but it means liberty at the same time, and is utterly opposed to force and intimidation.

"When the unions undertake to say to friends of labor that they must do certain things, under penalty of some sort, public sentiment will not uphold the unions. And we have organized to protect ourselves and uphold the liberty of the community."

FRENCH SHORE QUESTION TROUBLESOME

Great Britain Must Take Action and Have It Settled

INTENSE CAUSE FOR IRRITATION

Little Danger of War, However, Unless France Is Obstinate and Refuses to Sell

London, July 9.—The French Shore question, which is always coming up, one of those open international sores which should be closed at any reasonable cost. There are often matters in dispute between nations which can safely be permitted to await a convenient time for settlement. They are not likely to become suddenly acute from any accident; and time has a healing rather than an irritating efect upon them. But the French Shore difficulty does not belong to this class. It is a raw edge contact between two peoples, constantly in a state of inflammation; and any morning may bring us news of a serious affray, which must lead to grave international complications.

Neither Britain nor France can afford to keep a perpetual storm-breeder of this character on the premises. It is not good neighbourliness; it is not good politics; it is anything but good Imperialism It is not even good "jingoism"; For the most militant jingo does not want war to be forced upon him at any moment. He would much prefer to choose his occasion. and, having chosen it, he is never in want for a pretext.

However we may read the treaty, it is plain that France now possesses a right to land for certain purposes on the shore of a British colony; and that this right leads to constant disputes and even bloody quarrels between British subjects and the French fishermen. Obviously, the way to prevent this is to buy from France whatever right she may be found to have. It is a state of affairs which should not be allowed to continue, if for no other reason, because of its constant menace to the cordial relations so desirable between the British Empire and the French Republic. It is out of the question for Britain to sell Newfoundland or any part of it to France; so we are shut up to the course of bargaining with France for her treaty rights to use the Newfoundland shore.

Where there are so many less inflammable points of contact between the colonial empires of the two nations, it ought not to be difficult to find a "quid pro quo" somewhere else. A concession in Africa might liberate us from this dangerous perplexity, just as Germany thought it wise to buy Heligoland with a slice of the Dark Continent. But the British Foreign Office will know best what sort of bargain should be made. It is important only that it should realize the high desirability of putting an end to the present state of affairs without unnecessary delay.

It is important, too, that France should realize this. France has probably more to lose from a war over so trivial a matter than has Britain. It would be a colcolonial war; and hence a naval war; and every statistician knows which power has the heaviest fleet. But, as a matter of fact, both nations would lose immensely more than the French Shore is worth; while Germany and the United States would very likely secure during its progress the commercial and trade leadership of the world. In this age of purely commercial competition between nations, for Britain and France to deliberately retire from the struggle at its most critical point in order to damage each other's fleets, would be an act of sublime insanity. It would carry a gift to Germany greater than Alsace and Lorraine; and would threaten Britain's commercial supremacy with a ten-times worse menace that the Morgan combine.

Asthma Can be Cured

Thousands of testimonials conclusively prove that asthma can be permanently cured by inhaling Catarrhozone, a vegetable antiseptic that destroys at once the germs causing the diseases. Catarrhozone gives immediate relief to the distressing cough and suffocating sensations, makes breathing easy and regular, and insures undisturbed sleep. Catarrhozone cures asthma that doctors are unable even to relieve, and can cure you. The Catarrhozone inhaler is made of hard rubber, fits into the vest pocket, can be used at work, in the street, in church, in bed—any place—at any time. Nearly Drowned

Hastings Star: When the steamer Rainbow was leaving Harwood for Jubilee with an excursion on Thursday last, one of the excursionists, J. Mooney, fell overboard, and if it had not been for the prompt action of the mate of the boat, Mr. Albert Young, would likely have drowned. Mr. Young deserves a great deal of credit for his timely action as he launched the lifeboat, and with only a pikepole reached the drowning man, and then, by his presence of mind, regardless of the rough sea, restored him to consciousness by his promptness in putting him through the regular rules of restoration, doing so over the seat of the skiff.

THE BIG SHOW HAS COME AND GONE

The Three Circus Trains Arrived Early Yesterday Morning

VERY FINE STREET PARADE.

There were 72 Cars in the Three Trains—Hundreds Watched the Animals Being Loaded.

Forepaugh and Sells Bros. circus arrived in Peterborough and the small boys and the many who have been on the qui vive for days were on hand and had a day of it yesterday. At quite an early hour yesterday morning the train came in It was in three sections, comprising seventy-two large cars. As usual, hundreds of juveniles were in evidence to see all that transpired and it was indeed little that escaped their eyes. Hundreds of boys volunteered thier services to do any work required in return for the eagerly desired "paste board" that would admit them to the big tent.

The show took up its location at the fair grounds and the work of unloading from the cars and transferring to the grounds was done with amazing speed. The labours of a large staff of men and of over threee hundred draught horses were needed. The main tent is one of the largest ever seen here. It is capable of seating 12,000 persons.

The parade started about 10 o'clock and went through the principal streets of the town, thousands of sightseers being in evidence on walks, in windows, in balconies, and in stores and hotels.

First came a drum and bugle corps followed by a mounted escort of the soldiers of all the armies of the U.S. since the revolution. The old continentals with their knee breeches and three cornered hats followed. Then came the Boys of 1812, the more familiar uniforms of the Boys of 1861, some Mexican soldiers, and a large band of Rough Riders. Then could be seen a long line of menagerie cages, the numerous bands, the open cages with wild beasts in plain view, the shrill steam calliope with its variety of the latest popular airs, and an amusing hay cart party of clowns and acrobats, who gave a varied performance The costumes worn were rich and varied and the horses were splendidly groomed The parade was considered a good one and gave general satisfaction.

In the afternoon the doors of the main tent opened at one o'clock and a steady stream of people kept pouring in for over an hour. The programme was full of sensational features such as Diavolo, the dare-devil looping the loop—a performance lasting six seconds, performed twelve times weekly and costing $1,000 for that time. The equestrian performances the acrobatic turns, the trick bicycle riding, and the high wire artists' work, are all exceptionally good and contain an unusually large element of the dangerous. The herd of trained elephants, the quartette of cake walking horses and the clever antics of the omnipresent clown appealed specially to the hundreds of children.

CIRCUS NOTES.

The horses were greatly admired. There were draught animals, horses for the ring, and racers. All were sleek and fat, and gave evidence of great care being bestowed upon them.

Hundreds of excursionists and farmers from all parts of the district were in yesterday.

The immense troop of elephants and camels seen in the procession were in charge of dusky riders.

In some cases ten horses were used to draw the heavy carriages and chariots.

A Peterborough baker supplied two hundred and fifty loaves of bread for those belonging to the circus.

Shetland ponies were the motive power for Cinderella and the various other representations of nursery rhymes.

Mr. J. B. Stowe was in town on Monday and made arrangements for the purchase of large quantities of meat, vegetables, groceries, etc., to be used by those connected with the big show.

Thousands watched the operation of loading the cars after the evening performance.

PERSIA'S RULER A QUEER CUSTOMER

His Court Officials Are Always Uncertain as to What Notion He Will Next Take

Does Just as He Likes and Will Not Stand For Any Interference With His Plans

London, July 9.—Persia's ruler is giving no end of trouble to the crowned heads and court officials of Europe just at present, and they are one and all anxious for him to complete his tour and return to his dominions. He utterly declines to be bound by any program arranged for his entertainment or to keep any appointment, and shows a truly imperial disdain for the laws of court etiquette. When traveling by train he causes it to halt, no matter where it may be, if he feels sleepy and desires to take a nap, without the slightest consideration for the fact that traffic may be thrown out of gear, and that guards of honor, great dignitaries, princes of the blood, and crowned heads are waiting to receive him at the end of his journey.

The illness of King Edward will probably serve as an excuse for keeping him away from England, where his advent has been a subject for apprehension for some time past. It may be recalled that when in Europe some years ago his projected stay in England was likewise put off at the last moment, partly because of the mourning into which Queen Victoria was plunged by the death of her second son, the Duke of Saxe Coburg and Gotha, and partly, too, owing to the roughness of the channel when the Shah arrived at Ostend to cross over to England. The Shah has a terror of seasickness and would only trust himself upon the sea for the trip across the English channel in the event of the water being quite smooth

With all that, the Shah has shown himself an enlightened ruler, as oriental potentates go. Since he ascended the throne six years ago, he has brought about many reforms, and has fostered a Persian adaption to western ideas equaled only by Japan among eastern people. He has established free education in his dominions, he encourages the nobles to send their sons to Europe to be educated, and has himself entrusted the bringing up of his sons to European professors. Formerly the Government farmed out the taxes, a system which led to frightful abuses, but since his accession they are under the direct control of the Government, the change bringing about a large increase in the revenue

The Shah rides a swift automobile, has granted to his subjects the blessing of a free and unfettered press, and, unlike most oriental potentates, is singularly averse to taking human life. Indeed, it is with much difficulty that he can be brought to sign a death warrant, a trait of character for which credit is seldom given to eastern monarchs, who are popularly supposed to slice off heads with the same unconcern as they would peel an orange.

A SERIOUS SITUATION EXISTS IN RUSSIA

The Whole Country is Permeated with a Spirit of Rebellion

The Country Practically in a State of Intense Unrest—No One Knows How Soon an Explosion May Occur

Special to The Times.

London, July 8.—It is hard to tell what is going on in Russia, but an indication of the situation there is found in the report of M. de Plehve, Russian Minister of the Interior, which induced the Czar to suspend the collection of statistics in a number of provinces. What he says, in effect, is that the zemstvos, or village councils, which are held responsible for certain statistical work, have been innocently employing revolutionary agents, who have taken advantage of the opportunities afforded them by their semi-official position to sow the seeds of revolt broadcast among the peasantry. Mr. Sipiaguine, who was assassinated a short time ago, had discovered this dangerous state of affairs and had recommended that the statistical work be taken out of the hands of the local and entrusted to the central administration, but he was killed before any decisive action was taken. M. de Plehve, upon his accession to power, found the situation so desperate that he resolved to suspend the collection of statistics altogether in twelve provinces for twelve months at least, and to authorize the governors of the remaining provinces to adopt similar measures if they should deem such a step advisable. This suspension applies only to the rural districts. In the cities the statistical work will proceed as usual, as the regular official organization is equal to all requirements.

No one knows how soon the explosion may come, and when it does it may be of such magnitude as to sweep the throne away, and give the country a free and popular government.

BRITISH TRADE DRIVEN FROM SOUTH PERSIA

Great Britain's Important Concessions with Respect to a Germran Railway

From Monday's Times.

London, July 8.—The article in Novoe Vremya discussing the recent debate in the House of Commons on the Foreign Office estimates is quoted by the St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times. Novoe Vremya says that no doubt the South African war was the reason why Great Britain made such great concessions to the Germans in regard to Samoa, China and the Bagdad Railway. The British-German agreement in regard to China is an extraordinary example of the treaty in which all advantages are on the side of one of the contracting parties, namely Germany. By constructing the Anatolian Railway Germany settles herself in Asia Minor, and obtains control of all the markets there. By constructing the Bagdad Railway Germany becomes mistress of Asiatic Turkey, from the Bosphorus to the Persian Gulf. British trade will be completely driven out of South Persian markets by German goods.

FAVOR HOME RULE IN IRELAND.

"A great demonstration in favor of Home Rule in Ireland," says the Sydney correspondent of The Times, "took place yesterday in the Town Hall. Speeches strongly advocating Home Rule were delivered by several members of both Houses of Parliament. It was resolved that funds be established to enable the Irish Parliamentary party to continue the struggle for self-government. and also that John E. Redmond be requested to send a deputation to Australia. Arrangements were made to hold a representative Irish—Australian convention at Sydney."

LIMIT FRENCH OFFICIALS.

The Paris correspondent of The Times says the decree abolishing the post of Government Commissioner of Lake Chad and making that territory a province of the French Congo colonies indicates intention of the new Ministry to limit the independence of French officials in the region in question. This, says the correspondent, marks the policy of peace in West Africa which is sure to be attacked by the military party. Hereafter no officer, hoping to win laurels, will be allowed to undertake operations without direct orders from the Colonial Office in Paris.

BULGARIAN INDEPENDENCE.

"The statement made at Sofia by the Bulgarian Premier, Dr. Daneff, to a representative of the Politische Correspondenz," says the Vienna correspondent of The Times, "finally disposes of the rumors of an impending declaration of Bulgarian independence. Dr. Daneff denied that any mention of Royal dignity or independence of principality was made in the course of Prince Ferdinand's visit to St. Petersburg. Dr. Daneff said maintenance of good relations with the Porte was of special importance to Bulgarian interests."

London, July 8.—Sir Redvers Buller is condemned out of his own mouth. He has posed for many months as an injured person, declaring that the publication of the full text of his historic heliogram to Sir George White at Ladysmith would clear his military reputation. He has now forwarded copies of the despatch to the press.

His attitude had for a long time led many persons of weak judgment to imagine that he must be cruelly maligned, since it was almost incredible that he should have had the impudence to act thus unless the full and authentic text was incapable of the construction which had been placed upon it.

As a matter of fact, the text of the message despatched was even worse than the nation had been led to suppose. It is a craven message, merely directing General White to hold out till he Gen. General White to hold out till he (General Buller) can take up a defensive position, when "suggest you firing away as much ammunition as you can and making best terms you can. I can remain here if you have alternative suggestion, but unaided I can't break in. I find my infantry can't fight more than ten miles from camp, and then only if water can be got."

The last passage in this extraordinary message, remarks the Daily Mail, is calculated to cover the noble reputation of the British soldier with undeserved ridicule.

Previously General Buller had cabled to the War Office as follows:

"My view is that I ought to let Ladysmith go and occupy a good position for the defence of South Natal and let time help us. The best thing I can suggest is that I should occupy defensive position and fight it out in a country better suited to our tactics."

To the foregoing message the Government replied that the surrender of Ladysmith would be regarded by the Government as a national disaster of the greatest magnitude, and it urged Gen Buller to make another attempt."

Permanent Cure for Neuralgia

Experienced sufferers state that no remedy relieves neuralgia so quickly as a hot application of Polson's Nerviline. Nerviline is certainly very penetrating, and has a powerful influence over neuralgic pain, which it destroys almost at once. Nerviline is highly recommended for rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, and toothache. Better try a 25c. bottle. It's all right.

No Pills like Dr. Hamilton's.

NEW SCHOOL BUILDING

For Collegiate Institute Purposes and the Teaching of Domestic Science and Manual Training

At the meeting of the Board of Education on Monday night, Mr. James Stevenson, referring to the question of introducing the teaching of Domestic Science and Manual Training into our schools, remarked that he had misunderstood a resolution dealing with this question, which had been moved at the last regular meeting of the Board.

The chairman, Mr. W. H. Hill, asked Mr. Stevenson to take the chair while he introduced a motion. He said he believed the time was opportune for the consideration of a new Collegiate Institute. He pointed to other cities and towns where they had new and fine Collegiate Institutes. He said we were a progressive town, and why should we be behind these other towns which were not our equal in other respects. Peterborough must not get into a second place from an educational standpoint. He pointed out that the George street school could be done away with, and the new classes in Manual Training and Domestic Science would necessitate the securing of separate rooms. An institute building at $40,000 would only mean $1,600 a year extra expense, and with the other rents cut off, the actual extra cost would be only about $450. They would be face to face with the necessity of erecting a new school soon. He proposed to move cautiously. They could deal with his motion at the September meeting of the Board, then discuss the resolution with the Council; let the people vote on a by-law, and the new building could be undertaken September 1st, 1903, when the lease of the George street school expired. He thought the people should be given an opportunity to say whether they wanted a new Institute or not. He did not think the Board was keeping pace with the educational progress that the Province was making. He then gave notice of the following resolution: explaining that he proposed that the building should be erected in 1904:

"That the Property Committee be instructed to inquire as to the cost of the erection of a suitable building for a Collegiate Institute, Domestic Science and Manual Training School, with a view to asking the Town Council to submit a by-law to the ratepayers to provide the money for the erection of such building." Carried.

GOVERNMENT GRANT.

A communication was read from Hon. Mr. Harcourt, Minister of Education, in regard to the introduction of Manual Training and Domestic Science in the schools. He said he could promise a grant of $1,000 a year for a few years.

Valuable Advice to Rheumatics

Eat meat sparingly, and take very little sugar. Avoid intoxicants, keep away from dampness, drink water abundantly, and always rely on Nerviline as a quick reliever of rheumatic pains. Being five times stronger than ordinary remedies, Nerviline's power over pain is simply beyond belief. It cures also sciatica, lumbago, neuralgia, and all pain, whether internal or external. Large bottles, price, 25 cents.

WITH S. A. CONSTABULARY.

Clothing of any uniform variety was very scarce, so we had to be contented with what we could get, which was barely sufficient at the time, but was supplemented to a fair scale some time afterward.

About the middle of May we got orders to trek for Petrusburg, on foot, horses being then too valuable to waste on recruits, especially the S. A. C., which was not considered of much account at that time.

It took us a long wearisome week to march to our destination, a little veldt village about sixty miles west of Bloemfontein, and there were lots of men complaining about sore feet. Hard tack and bully beef was a sore come down from a fairly good pot of mutton, skilly and bread, but before we were two days on the march we could hold double rations and look for more.

When we arrived in Petrusburg we were immediately started to do fatigues, building fortifications, etc., also taking our turns at outpost, which seemed pretty frequent. Our men were all crazy to get horses and be mounted, but now no saddles were available. This, however, was not a serious drawback. A few rawhide reins could be made into a bridle, and any old thing for a saddle, and our fellows turned their attention to breaking native ponies. I think we must have revolutionized horse-breaking among the Imperial troops. The Tommies as we called them would drive a herd of young horses into a corral, then get a native to snare a horse with rope, having a nooze placed on a bamboo pole. This can easily be done in crowded corral, especially by the natives. As soon as an animal is snared half a dozen men grab the end of the rope, haul the little fellow out, and with the help of the native and a long whip chase him in a circle till he is tired out and about scared to death, then they stick a saddle on his back and continue the circular motion till the animal is too weak to resist, then a man climbs on his back to finish the job. As these ponies were very seldom little more than two-year-olds, the Boers having all the aged horses with themselves, it was only the very hardiest that survived to be of use.

We roped our horses with a lasso, the same as used in the west. As soon as rope was passed around a pony's neck two men caught the free end, a third stuck a bridle on the animal's head and blindfolded him with a handkerchief, after which saddling was easy. These colts are very good tempered, and after the first few minutes will, as a rule, handle easily and their superiority over the imported horses is very evident, from the number of these colts that are with us at present, having survived hundreds of miles of hard treking on very inferior and sometimes no rations, except what they could pick up from the veldt. It seems to me that a great mistake was made by the Imperial remount department in not endeavoring to preserve the native horses by giving them the same consideration as the over-sea animals. Thousands of these ponies have been slaughtered as useless, when, with a very small portion of the care and ration lavished on the imported article, would have turned out useful remounts. However, they are now trying to rectify their mistake with the remnant that has just arrived.

The Canadians fell into disrepute with one or two of the field commanders of the S.A.C. because of their independent manner, but when their resource for self-adjustment was noted, the opinion changed, and saddles for our horses were soon forthcoming, being taken from an Imperial troop that could not secure remounts as we did. Since then part, and frequently all of us, have been put on a field column continuously. We helped clear the south western portion of the Orange River Colony and established a line from Bloemfontein to Kimberley via Petrusburg and Koffyfontein. The latter place was our headquarters for about two months when we were moved north to the Vet river in October last, when the thirty combined troops of this division succeeded in establishing a line of posts through the enemy's country, from the Vet River station, on the Pretoria & Johannesburg Railroad line, along the valley of the Vet River to its junction with the Vaal on the border of Cape Colony. We have had our share of hard fighting and are quite willing to continue. At present an armistice is on, and we are all lying idle awaiting developments. A few days ago our scouts captured five Boers, wounding one, but as the armistice was on we had to return the prisoners to their commando, together with their arms and horses. The wounded man is now in camp with us, preferring to stay here to going into a hospital. He is, however, very anxious to join his own people.

We have found the Boer a good game fighter, and it is the general opinion that they will never give in as a body, but will have to be captured.

The men composing the troops of this division all seem well satisfied with their position, which is improving every day, and the beginning of the next financial year for this force on the 1st of July next will see things in a very satisfactory shape.

A great deal could be written about our year's experience in this country, but I only wish to convey to my friends at home the fact that "not" all Canadians are dissatisfied with the S.A.C.

Hoping my opinions will cause no offence to anyone who think they have a grievance,

I remain, yours sincerely,

July 1.—My cousin from Toronto, and two children, arrived on a visit. Two more men came to look at gas stove. Glad it was all right. Put up the curtain fixtures in three rooms. Drapery pole too short for the arch, of course.

P. M.—Got a telegram from my brother. Just arrived from Vancouver, and would get in at 9.30. "What on earth shall we do?" I thought. "The parlor alcove is occupied." "Put him out on the porch." "Nonsense. He'd catch his death of cold." "That's so. Well, put him in the kitchen." "But what will he sleep on?" "On the ironing board. That's better than he got in the West."

11 P. M.—Brother arrived. Said he'd be blowed if he'd sleep on an ironing board. Went to a hotel.

COPPER AT THREE AND HALF CENTS A POUND

George A. Treadwell Mining Company

27 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK. JEROME, ARIZONA.

Capital - - - - $3,000,000.

VALUE OF SHARES $10.

In a suit recently tried in the New York courts it was proved from the books of the United Verde Copper Company and the sworn testimony of the bookkeepers that the cost to that company of producing copper was only three and a half cents a pound, not counting the gold and silver values, which—allowed for—reduced the cost to a still lower figure.

Nowhere outside the Verde Copper Belt in Yavapai County, Arizona, is copper produced in quantities for less than twice this cost.

The United Verde has about two hundred acres on the north end of the Belt and the George A. Treadwell Company has several times as much in the central and southern parts of the Belt. The conditions along the whole Belt are entirely similar. We already have three mines developed—the Cliff, Brookshire and Iron Queen—one of which, the Cliff, seems to be larger and better than the United Verde, and the other two at least approach it in magnitude and value, while we have several others, including Badger, Pastime, Green Monster and Spoke and Stonewall, which, though less developed, are equally promising.

Professor Treadwell believes we have at least half a dozen United Verdes within the broad and extensive limits of our holdings.

As soon as our smelter plant which is now in process of erection, is completed, we can certainly produce copper as cheap as our rich neighbor on the north.

The United Verde for several years has produced one-tenth the copper of the world. When our plants are fully installed we expect the Verde Belt to produce one-half the copper of the world, and the George A. Treadwell Mining Company will be prepared to do more than its full share.

Before investing in copper in unproved localities, consider the stock of the George A Treadwell Mining Company, named after the great pioneer and explorer of the Verde Belt and owning the largest and best aggregation of properties on it.

The price of the stock is $11 a share. Make checks payable to The order of the company and send them to 27 William Street New York

Mainly About People.

Dr. Parr, on meeting Lord Chancellor Erskine, with whom he was friendly, once said: "Erskine, I mean to write your epitaph when you die." "Doctor," answered the great lawyer, "it is almost a temptation to commit suicide."

At a ball in the country a gentleman undertook to introduce a companion to a young but somewhat stout lady, who seemed to be pining for a dance. "No, thanks, old fellow; I don't care to waltz with a cart." A few evenings later the same young lady, who had overheard the conversation, beheld the young man seeking an introduction and asking if he might have the honor, etc. "No, thank you," she replied; "I may be a cart, but I am not a donkey cart."

A rich Irish-American, who frequently visits England and dearly loves a lord, loses no opportunity of talking of his great acquaintances. At a recent dinner party in New York, where there were several Roman Catholics, during a conversation on the subject of fasting, this gentleman said: "It is very strange how little Catholics in the higher ranks mind the fast days. I was dining at the Duke of Norfolk's on a fast day, three weeks ago, and there wasn't a bit of fish at dinner." "I suppose," said another Irishman, "they had eaten it all in the dining-room."

John D. Rockefeller recently told the following story: "I don't question the veracity of that story, but I am going to tell you one that I know to be true. It happened down in Washington. A negro was driving a wagon and in going through a street ran against a funeral. With the superstition of his race he thought it would be bad luck to cross behind the funeral, so he tried to cross ahead of it, but the driver of the hearse whipped up his horse, and the two went neck and neck for a time until finally the darkey sang out: 'Say, dah, pull up youah boss! Mah boss is in a hurry an' yuah'n isn't!'"

Judge Pennypacker of Philadelphia tells a story which shows the readiness of the Pennsylvania Dutchman to obey those in authority: In 1864 Sheridan, under orders, burned every barn from a valley above Staunton to a certain point below Winchester. A band of angry rebels followed this raid, watching for a chance to pick up any stragglers. Among others who fell into their hands was a little Pennsylvania Dutchman, who quietly turned to his captors and enquired: "Vat you fellows going to do mit me?" The reply came short and sharp: "Hang you." "Vell," he said, meekly, "vatever is de rule." His good-natured reply threw the Confederates into a roar of laughter and saved his life.

One day last autumn Bennet Burleigh, the noted English special war correspondent, was encountered a few miles outside Pretoria by that volcanic rhetorician, General Tucker. "What the —— —— are you doing out here with that —— thing?" asked the general, pointing to a kodak which was slung round his shoulders. "Well, sir," promptly replied Mr. Burleigh, "I was intending to take some photographs; but had I known that I was to have the pleasure of meeting you I should have brought out a phonograph." At this audacity, it is said that even General Tucker's stock of sulphurous adjectives ran low.

Gilbert Parker, to illustrate the gullibility of some Englishmen in the colonies, recently told the following story: "Once in Australia on my way through the bush, with my friend Cabbage Tree Bill, we were accompanied by a burly and intelligent young gentleman from Devonshire, and as we came along we saw along the road, if it might be called a road, a young kangaroo. Bill said: 'Now wait a minute; you will see him take the letters.' The kangaroo was sitting up as if waiting for something, and Bill said, 'He has his pouch and everything ready to carry them,' but as we came along Bill snapped his whip and said, 'Nothing to-day,' and the kangaroo trotted off, the young gentleman believing for a great part of the rest of the journey that the object of the kangaroo's presence was as Bill had said."

John Philip Sousa, the bandmaster, usually wears his uniform at all times and seasons, and prefers that his men do the same. The practice has led to some very amusing experiences. For example, one night Mr. Sousa was standing in a railway station, on the platform, waiting for a train. A belated traveler ran up to him and asked, excitedly, "Has the nine-three train pulled out?" "I really don't know," responded Mr. Sousa. "Well, why don't you know?" shouted the traveler. "What are you standing here for like a stick of wood? Aren't you a conductor?" "Yes," said Mr. Sousa, pleasantly, "I am a conductor." "A nice sort of conductor, indeed!" exclaimed the man. "Well, you see," smilingly responded the musician, "I am not the conductor of a train, but of a brass band."

JAPAN'S WONDERFUL MARINE EXPANSION

BRITAIN HELPING HER

The Treaty Recently Made with England Gives Japan a Good Start—Is Now a Great Naval Power

Special to The Times.

London, July 8.—Japan is rapidly becoming a great factor in the maritime world. In alliance with Great Britain its dominance in the Pacific ocean is already assured. It was long ago predicted by a great Englishman that the head office of the P. & O. Company would one day be at Tokio. This may or may not come to pass. But Japan's recent development of its mercantile marine bids fair to outdistance anything the world has yet seen. It has increased in three and a half years by 315 steamers and by 3,242 sailing vessels, the increase in tonnage in each class being respectively 127,392 and 294,662 tons. This is a striking rate of progress, and one rarely met with in the case of other countries, especially if the increase in the number of large steamers is taken into account. In fact, in 1896 Japan possessed only one merchant steamer of a tonnage exceeding 5,000 tons, but at this moment it possesses twenty-one steamers whose individual tonnage is above 5,000 tons. In proportion as the volume of shipping has grown, so there has been an increase in the number of seamen available for manning the ships, and it is to be remarked that Japan can provide its own skippers and naval engineers. At the end of last June the number of ship's officers with a captain's certificate, and of engineers, was 15,412, of whom 15,108 were Japanese, and only 304 were foreigners. The number of engineers serving in the mercantile marine of Japan was 2,791.

THE ALASKAN BOUNDARY

Special to The Times.

Washington, July 7.—A report from St. Petersburg to the effect that two agents of the United States Government have been at work in that capital, seeking information from the Russian archives respecting the Alaskan-Canadian boundary, has led the State Department at Washington to make an investigation, for it has not sent any agents on that errand to Russia. It is now learned that Philadelphians have been in St. Petersburg looking into the boundary matter, but acting in a purely private capacity. They are said to be very much concerned over the prospect of trouble in connection with this matter.

LIVE MAN IN EXPRESS BOX

Went From Boston to Marshall, Mich., and Then Found Out

Special to The Times.

Miles, Mich., July 7.—When the American express on the Michigan Central reached Marshall to-night, Messenger George Hall was sorting express matter for transfer. He turned over a box which struck his experienced touch as being suspicious. The box was shipped as merchandise from Boston and was addressed to persons in Cheney, Wash.

Messenger Hall tore the cover off the box and found a live man inside. At Kalamazoo the man was arrested.

He had provisions in the box. He said some friends had shipped him as merchandise because he had no money and desired to get to Washington. He is a foreigner.

St. Paul's Big Horse Show

St. Paul, Minn., July 7.—Society regards the horse show and race meeting, which opens today under the auspices of the St. Paul Driving Club, as the event of the summer. The golf links, the tennis courts and the yachts will be deserted for the state fair grounds. In the quality and number of exhibits the show is the equal of many of the more important metropolitan exhibitions. The completed list of exhibitors is a long one and includes almost every prominent breeder of the West. The sum of $15,000 will be distributed among the winners.

TO GET RID OF THE PESTS

The Buffalo moth is another name for the carpet beetle (anthrenus schrophulariae) of the family Dermestidae. It is especially liable to attack the edges of carpets. Try tacking the carpets. If the insects still attack then spread a wet sheet over the parts where you have reason to believe the moths have been, and rub over quickly with a hot iron. The steam will destroy both the larvae and any eggs deposited. Before putting the carpet down again, wash the floor with hot water. Strew camphor or shavings of Russian leather under the carpet. If the insects attack something that cannot be treated in this way try saturating with gasoline. Many people when closing rooms for the summer sprinkly gasoline about on the furniture and carpets. But do not do this at night, or near a

General Manager, Toronto, Ont

Seventy-Five St. Louisan Eats Dirt.

Newest and most singular of St. Louis sects are the dirt-eaters, a community of seventy-five men and women whose Moses is William Windsor. The dirt-eaters take every day a spoonful of dirt. Their leader believes that grit is necessary to every animal, and that because mankind will have no dirt in his food he is subject to many stomach troubles that no other animal has. So the dirt-eater goes every day to his little sack of soil. He plunges a teaspoon in and brings it forth heaped with good old earth. He washes it down with a glass of water, smacking his lips and blinking his eyes as though no morsel e'er tickled the palate of man so deliciously as dirt.

Dirt-eating is easy—when one is a child or an experienced dirt-eater. At all other times it is hard, and it must be learned. It is not easy to forget that it is dirt. It is not reassuring to think that the particles of dirt in the stomach might cause a thousand diseases now unknown because dirt has been kept out of the stomach for hundreds and hundreds of years. But after a while the dirt-eater develops his appetite. He comes to relish his dirt as a girl loves her fudge. He carries a sack of it with him, and whenever he is seized by a feeling that he is getting away from the animal plan upon which he was created, he steps into a corner and regales himself with a loam lunch. The dirt-eater is particular, though, what sort of dirt he eats. He would be no true epicurean if he were not. This article of his singular diet is technically a sand. It comes from the river bottoms, and is made up of many little particles of granite, marble, quartz, and flint well rounded with age. The chief dirt-eater has the sand collected and sterilized, and he distributes it among his followers at 25 cents a sack. The sack is small, but it holds a good deal of sand. So that daily dirt-eating after the St. Louis fashion costs about 10 cents a week.

Dirt-eating in St. Louis is six months old, and flourishes like a green bay tree. The chief dirt-eater looks happy and prosperous. The lesser dirt-eaters have every day a keen hunger for their dirt, and they bring in their friends. The dirt-eaters have pretentious quarters. They are up at Eighteenth and Olive streets, in what was until recently the home of the Merchants' League Club. Here the chief apostle of dirt-eating, Mr. Windsor, has offices and a lecture-hall. He receives visitors during the day, and every night he lectures to his class. He has now seventy-five men and women who attend his lectures and eat dirt.

This is an amusing sect, and amuses no one more than its founder. Kris Kringle himself is not a more rotund nor more rollicking character than Dirt-Eater Windsor. He is fifty. He is bald. He has the Senator Bill Mason build. He can sit in a chair and tweedle his thumbs on his stomach, which they say is the piece de resistance in happiness.

"Are you the chief dirt-eater?"

"Yes, sir, I'm the chap. I've eaten my peck a hundred times over. Dirt is good."

Then he laughs as fat men can laugh, and brings out a sack of the sacred soil.

"Have a dirt sandwich with me?"

"No, thanks."

"What are you afraid of—sandbar in the stomach?"

Then he takes a heaping spoonful and swallows it with that sly wink with which a Kentucky colonel takes his whiskey. He sends a glass of water to chase it, and heaves a huge sigh of content.

The Courtship of the Future.

He—Do you love me as much as ever?

She—Oh, more. Since I received your thought registering machine I have been so close to you!

"And I to you. By the way, where are you?"

"I'm in Naples. And you?"

"In Harlem. I came here from London. Did you hear me call you up at midnight last night?"

"Yes, dear; but I could not answer. I had just eaten a broiled lobster, and the psychic current wouldn't respond."

"Sometimes I wish I could see you—hold you in my arms."

"What nonsense! That's so unnecessary."

"But an actual kiss!"

"There! Feel that? Wasn't that nice?"

"For a vibration, yes. But I can't help feeling——"

"Nonsense! You're such an old fogy. By the way, when shall we be married?"

"The sooner the better."

"Well, I will arrange it all. We can have the ceremony performed, if you like, by the Graboni system."

"All right. And the wedding trip?"

"Oh, we can take every morning, say from eight to ten—that is, if you can get away from business."

"But wouldn't it be nice to take it together? I should like—nay, I long, actually to hold you in my arms."

"Why, you goose, don't you see that would spoil the whole romance?"—N. Y. "Life."

Why Jason Was Late For School.

Schoolteachers get some curious written excuses for absence. Here is one: "Mister sir, my Jason had to be late to-day. It is his bizness to milk our cow. She kicked Jase in the back to-day when he wasn't looking or thinking of her actin' so; he thot his back was broke, but it ain't. But it is black and blue, and the pane kept him late. We would get rid of that cow if we could. This is the fourth time she kicked Jase, but never kicked him late before. So excuse him for me."

A Georgia man, who has gone to Washington in search of a Government job, gives as his qualifications: "I can not only write poetry and novels, but there ain't a Government mule that can throw me!"—Atlanta "Constitution."

In describing a certain variety of hymn, Mark Twain said it reminded him of the sound made by a cow in dragging her hind foot out of a swamp.

Mrs. Toonyce (as Willie backs away from the dinner table)—Now, what do you say, dear? Willie (after a hard think)—My! It's so long since we had company before, I've clean forgot.

The Toreador's Rose.

Whenever I hear the "Toreador's March" from "Carmen"—that gay, devil-may-care melody, with its undertone of tragic sorrow, recalling a picture I once saw of a rose in a skull—I think of Jose Silverio. It was in old Madrid, the romantic city of guitars, dark eyes, love, and bull-fights, where the statue of the Virgin stands in the public square with the late King Alfonso's fatal sapphire burning blue on her carven finger. To the light lilt of merry music Jose Silverio, the handsome toreador, idol of all the young bloods and beloved by half the fair women of Madrid, rode into the ring. A murmur of admiration greeted him—he was splendid in spangles and mounted on a magnificent white horse. After him came his scarlet-cloaked matadors on foot, armed with light lances fluttering with streamers of many-colored ribbons. The bull's hoarse bellow struck into the music like the deep, mellow note of a bass viol. He was already in the ring pawing up the sawdust defiantly, a superb animal of the best breed of Andalusia, with delicate hoofs, curving horns, and a skin like black satin, under which the fierce muscles constantly rippled. The toreador lifted his dark, passionate eyes to a box above, where eyes equally dark, equally passionate, answered his mute, adoring message. The senorita was in black, the usual dress affected in public by Spanish women of high degree. A diamond star sparkled on her full bosom, and a crimson rose caressed like the lips of a lover the black, silken masses of her hair, over which a fold of the lace mantilla was coquettishly thrown.

An hour before he had passed the flower between her window bars, and he thrilled with exquisite joy to see it glowing in her dusky braids. The perfume of the rose, already wilting in the hot amphitheater was wafted to his nostrils with the woody smell of fresh sawdust and musky odors from hundreds of constantly moving fans. Its fragrance led him back in sweet retrospection to a walled garden, dim paths, checkered black and silver in the moonlight, the pressure of a soft breast, braceleted arms, and red lips yielding kiss for kiss, while his blue-ribboned guitar lay silent in the dew at his feet. Then the bull, goaded to splendid ferocity by the torturing banderillos, made his mad charge. The ring became an inferno of hoofs and horns, out of which flashed the keen lightning of the toreador's sword in a cloud of dust. No one could tell afterward exactly how it happened, though every eye was riveted on the arena, but the white horse rolled over in his death agony, disemboweled by one swift stroke from those terrible twin sabres fixed in the bull's powerful forehead. By the fraction of a second Jose failed to slip his feet from the stirrups in time to escape the second charge. His body described a glittering arc in the air, and fell lifeless in the sawdust. The sword, sent spinning from his hand, was caught by a matador, who delivered the coup de grace to the bull by a feat of nimble cunning that elicited a thunder of applause. Even the senorita clapped her little jeweled hands. She leaned over the edge of her box to look down at the limp, inert figure so full of proud courage and virile grace a moment ago.

"Dios! poor fellow," she said. Then, turning to a young man leaning over her chair, "Don Felipe, you may have the rose, though it is wilted now."—Minna Irving, in "Leslie's."

The Fable of Matsukata.

Count Matsukata, former Prime Minister of Japan, who is known in America as "the father of the gold standard," was asked during his recent visit to New York whether "Captains of Industry" in the Mikado's Empire were getting control of the country's trade and resources.

"Not to the same extent as in—more advanced lands," answered Count Matsukata with a smile. "Perhaps we are influenced by the old 'Myth of the Gold Man,' handed down from the ancient days of Sin Mu."

The count was requested to tell the legend, and he said:

"In the dim historic dawn a merchant eager for great wealth heard of a strange grove of wild lemon trees whose fabulous fruit, when eaten, would convert the hand that plucked it into gold.

"So the merchant journeyed to the grove, where the God of Riches, with a great sack on his shoulders, bade him help himself. He did so, and his arm was converted into gleaming gold. This he had amputated, and, though bereft of an arm, became a man of wealth.

"A banker, hearing of the strange case, determined to secure the total produce of the miraculous lemon trees. To that end he bought out the right of the guardian deity; but that shrewd being exacted so great a price that the covetous banker found his fortune depleted. To secure ready money he determined to eat of the fruit and sacrifice an arm.

"Raw lemon, however, was too astringent for his pampered palate, and so he sweetened the juice of several lemons, and, adding thereto wine of rare vintage, drank greedily of the potent and tempting beverage.

"In a few minutes he had turned into a pillar of gold.

"Then his heirs melted him down, coined him into convenient cobangs, and, turning their backs bravely on the grove of golden lemons, proceeded with free hands to spend and enjoy their bountiful inheritance."

"What became of that lemon grove?" enquired a vigilant New Yorker who had listened eagerly to the story.

"There is no record," replied Count Matsukata, smiling, "of its having been destroyed, but happily our fortune-hunters have not been able to locate it.

"Do you think he would be a success in politics?" "Yes, indeed. Why, he has thoroughly mastered the knack of looking interested when he is being bored."—Chicago "Post."

"I left my husband's death notice here this morning," said the widow. "Yes," said the bright clerk in the publishing office of the "Daily Squib." "Now, I want to add 'Gone to Rest' in an appropriate place." "Yes, madam," replied the bright clerk, and the next morning she read: "Gone to rest in an appropriate place."—Philadelphia "Press."

GRAHAM DEFENDS CAPE COLONY

Whole Scheme of Suspension Unnecessary for Supremacy.

FEW WHITES WERE REBELS.

Only Two Per Cent.—Would Make the Dutch Sullen and Resentful of the British

Cape Town, July 5.—Mr. Graham, the Acting-Premier of Cape Colony, addressed a large and enthusiastic meeting in the Wynberg Town Hall He said all he wanted was to do right to the interests of the future of the country. Four years ago he stood before the electorate an imperialist to the finger tips and he remained so to-day. The colony was in a most flourishing condition. The recent successful flotation of a loan had proved that. Sir J. Gordon Sprigg's optimism was justifiable, and it was this flourishing country that the suspensionists wished to reduce to an ignominious vassalage. The fraternization of Briton and Boer since the peace had disproved the continual calumnies on the noble conduct of the troops. They had now gained what they had fought for—the liberty and freedom of South Africa. The power of Krugerism had been destroyed, the Afrikander Bond had been crushed, and they were now asked to suspend the Constitution, which meant to capitulate to the Bond without firing a shot, and to reduce the people's position to that of political helots. If they thought suspension necessary for British supremacy, and that measures would not be passed by Parliament, ensuring that supremacy, he would not hesitate for a moment to concur in suspension; but the whole scheme was unnecessary. Suspension would reduce the colony to the level of a little dependency such as Turk's Island—a step unprecedented in the history of the Empire. He sketched the history of the suspension movement stating that at Mr. Rhodes' meeting of twenty Progressives, when a petition was first signed, the idea of the members was that the Constitution should be suspended only for a few days. He was quite sure that Mr. Rhodes was under the impression. Later, the members met the Government, on which occasion it was stated that the Constitution could be suspended by Act of Parliament, first, by a clause in virtue of which they could suspend the Constitution, and, lastly, by a clause in which they could re-enact it. The Government said that was impossible. There is very little possibility, he continued, of the Act necessary for suspension being introduced in the Imperial Parliament before September.

REBELS ARE THE SCUM.

It is said that 2 per cent. of the whites of the colony are rebels, and because a handful of the scum hav gone into rebellion is the colony to be branded with the stigma of rebellion! If every Dutchman in the colony were branded as a rebel we would store for ourselves a heritage of woe, and if the Constitution were suspended Dutchmen would certainly think they were branded. If we thought that Mr. Chamberlain would govern here for twenty years, or Lord Milner, good and well, but what if Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman were in power? I am told that suspension is necessary to gain a progressive majority, but I am certain that with the new registration return there will be a good progressive majority. Mr. Chamberlain will have petitions and counter-petitions, and before November there will be an opportunity of the Cape Parliament meeting. Then Mr. Chamberlain will see how member support the measures necessary to ensure British supremacy. Would suspension allay radical feeling? What would the Dutch farmer think, who would be deprived of practically everything, if his vote were also taken? The Dutch would return to their farms sullen and resentful, and bide their time. The Constitution, if suspended, would not be given back until Federation was an accomplished fact. The Cape would have no voice in the matter, and Natal, with responsible institutions, would dominate the position. If Federation were forced upon the Cape during the suspension we should lose control of the Customs, railways, and defence, and lose the possibility of protecting the colony from dismemberment. Nothing would prevent the Orange River being made the boundary of the Cape or Bechuanaland being added to the Transvaal or Griqualand East being annexed to Natal. He wanted to warn England. The voice of the provinces was inarticulate owing to martial law, therefore signatories to the petitions were not representative of the Colony. He wished English statesmen to pause before taking a step in the question.

Lindsay Has Her Troubles

Some people are easily frightened. During the past few days several enquiries have been made at this office by people who contemplate visiting Lindsay with the Orangemen on the 12th, as to the number of cases of scarlet fever which exist in that town. The idea seems to prevail that the whole town is down with the disease and that it would be courting death to go within a mile of the place. We can assure all who are thus alarmed that there is no such danger to be met with. Lindsay has no scarlet fever to speak of, and never had—and these few cases are nearly if not quite recovered. We venture to say that Peterborough had more scarlet fever this spring than Lindsay, and there was not a word about it. This great family journal therefore takes pleasure in assuring those who propose to take in the celebration on the 12th, that the only danger they will be in the least exposed to, is the fire water which is sold under the name of whiskey. Don't touch it with a ten foot pole, if you can't get Calcutt's lager, fall back, as a last resort, on the muddy water of the raging Scugog.

I. O. O. F. NOTES

The officers of Pontypool Lodge, No. 296, I.O.O.F., were publicly installed on July 4, by Bro. M. W. Matchett, D.D.G.M., assisted by Past Grands Hooper, Stewart, Eaton, Brownlee, Fanning and Wallis.

Besides a good attendance of lodge members, there was a large turnout of the general public to witness the beautiful and impressive ceremony of installation of officers.

After installation, there were short speeches by Bros. Matchett, Stewart, and others, before adjournment to the dining room, where refreshments were served to all present. A short but excellent program was then presented, Rev. E. P. Oswald acting as chairman. Besides local talent, Bro. J. Halpany, of Peterborough, delighted the company. In his singing he was ably accompanied by Bro. W. Staples.

Pontypool Lodge is making excellent progress, and has now 72 members.

The officers are as follows:

J.P.G.	W. Corbett
N.G.	J. J. Clarke
V.G.	A. Fallis

Property Committee—G. Lapp, T. Hill, G. Douglas.

Finance Committee—J. W. Anderson, Dr. Lapp, W. G. Morrow.

The officers of Norwood Lodge, No. 242, I.O.O.F., were installed on Wednesday, July 2, by the District Deputy Grand Master, Bro. M. W. Matchett, of Peterborough, assisted by Past Grand, Bro. T. H. Hooper, of Peterborough, Past Grand Johnston, of Hastings, and Past Grands Ackerman, Eaton, and Stewart, of Norwood.

At the close of the installation there were addresses by Bros. Matchett, Hooper, Stewart, and others, after which an adjournment was made to Bro. Tucker's restaurant, where a very tempting lunch was served, and a pleasant social hour spent.

Bro. W. A. Eaton will represent Norwood Lodge at the Grand Lodge session in Toronto in August.

The officers and committees elected and appointed are as follows:

J.P.G.	John Finlay

Property Committee—Dr. Pettigrew, W. A. Eaton, James Cumming.

Representative to Grand Lodge—W. A. Eaton.

Finance Committee—W. A. Eaton, J. F. Anderson, I. N. Ackerman.

There will be a public installation at Havelock, next Friday evening, July 11, conducted by Bro. M. W. Matchett, D.D.G.M., assisted by other members of the District Committee.

The officers of Peterborough and Otonabee Lodges, I.O.O.F., will be jointly installed on Monday, July 14.

The District Committee will hold their closing meeting for the year on Monday, July 14, at Peterborough, at half-past seven, to close up the season's business, pass accounts, nominate a D.D.G.M., etc. It is hoped every member of the Committee will be present.

A general invitation is extended to the Oddfellows of Peterborough to attend the public installation at Pontypool on Friday evening, July 11. The Peterboro brethren will go by the C.P.R. train, leaving here at 7.20 p.m. As the return fare is only 75c, no doubt many will go.

A joint committee of the two local lodges will arrange for serving refreshments at the close of the joint installation at Peterborough on Monday evening next, July 14. A very pleasant time is expected.

A Girl of the People

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

don't you will force me to go home."

"I wouldn't stand much of that kind o' rottin' from any other gell I know," returned my companion. "But you're different. You can chaff me all you like. It makes me see you're worth 'avin'. I sye, it's just the dye for Richmond. Was you ever there? Wouldn't you like t' go?"

I turned round abruptly and began walking back towards Easel street. "I would not like to go to Richmond, thank you," I said. "Perhaps you mean well; but if you wish me to think so, you will leave me at once."

"That ain't my idea of making a gell think well o' me—to leave 'er alone," chuckled Mr. Welcome. "And what's more, things 'ave gone too far with me fur that, I can tell you. W'ere you go, I go—and that sort o' thing. It's Scripture, ain't it?" and he laughed again.

I thought that he would leave me on the threshold; but, availing himself, no doubt, of his acquaintance with my family, he strode into the passage, knocking loudly on the door of the front room before I could disappear into my own. The knock was instantly answered, the door thrown open, and the face of the man I had passed on leaving the house appeared in the aperture.

It seemed an odd coincidence, but the man who had stared at me with such a meaning, sinister gaze, and the man who posed as Fan's lover, were one and the same.

Mr. Tom Stephens and Mr. Welcome looked hard at each other, but I did not wait to see or hear what should follow. After the first moment of indecision, I darted into the room which I shared with Totsey, and locked the door.

Somehow—I could scarcely have defined why—after this Sunday, things began to be different with me, and even less pleasant, if possible, than before. Though Fan no longer coveted the eligible Mr. Welcome for herself, she resented the fact that he chose to advertise himself as a conquest of mine. She was sarcastic, often insulting, taunting me because, with all my boasted accomplishments and my fine lady airs, I could find no work, while she was "earning good money." Then, worse than all, Mr. Stephens, who now came to the house every evening to take Fan for a walk, or to some entertainment, expressed a desire for me to turn the duet into a trio.

Meanwhile, poor Swift's money was fast disappearing. I paid my mother twelve shillings each week for board and lodging, which sum Fan sharply hinted was insufficient, as my wants were so much more extravagant than those of the others. Pennies for omnibuses and trams soon mounted into shillings; I was considered by the family to be criminally reckless in the matter of washing bills, and my purchase of a cheap bath-tub was almost the reason of a quarrel. Several times Fan and Totsey asked for a trifling loan, and I could not bear to refuse, but at last came a day when, with work as far off as ever, I found myself penniless.

My heart sank at the thought of parting with the simple jewelry given me in happier days, each ornament a memory; but there was no other way. I could not be a burden on my relatives or on society at large. So I went to the box where my most valuable possessions were stored.

I had not unlocked it since the night of my wretched home-coming, when, after the family inspection, I had returned my possessions to their place; but I remembered well in which tray the jewel-case had been laid. I lifted the pretty dresses, still folded with sachets of orris-root and violets, but—the case was not to be seen. With my heart beating quickly, I took out the tray, and searched through another and another, then going over all again for the second time. The jewel-case was gone!

Still I would not believe in my loss. It was impossible that anyone should have stolen it, I told myself. I must, after all, have put it away in one of the other boxes. Trembling, my hands growing cold, I ransacked each trunk, but in the end I had to acknowledge defeat. I had been robbed; and I dared not let my mind dwell on the hateful solution of the mystery which would come up before it.

Fan had indulged in a great deal of new finery of late, and, when questioned by her mother, had flushed, saying it was nobody's business how she had saved up the money. She had, and that was enough. It was a pity if a girl who worked as hard as she did shouldn't have something a little decent, especially now that she had a "young man" of her own. She had bought two new dresses and as many hats, to say nothing of a huge feather boa like a variegated snake; and she had even a little gaudy jewelry which might have been bestowed by Mr. Stephens or might not.

Sometimes I had left my keys where Fan might have taken them for her own purposes. I could not help remembering this, but I tried not to think of it, and I would not for all the world have accused her. I spoke hesitatingly to my mother of what had happened, suggesting no explanation, but she, poor woman, always nervous, worn and weary, flew into a passion, demanding to know at once whether I suspected her or one of my sisters as the thief. Afterwards, she was sorry for her anger, and for some harsh words she had uttered in haste, even offering to call in the police, though it would be sure to give great offence "in the street." But I refused. I was certain that I should never again see my jewels unless a thing should happen which I would give more than their value to prevent.

The only hope I had left lay in selling or pawning some of my pretty clothes and books, for—I presently discovered—all the silver toilet things not in use had vanished with the jewel-case.

That evening my mother and I went out with large parcels under our arms. I was hot and tingling with self-consciousness, feeling as if everyone we met must know that we were going to the pawnbroker's. It was easy enough to say to one's self: "What does it matter? Who thinks anything about you? or, if anyone should, of what importance is that in your life?" But it did matter; and it was of importance just the same.

The pawnbroker would not have my things. If they had been men's clothing it would have been different, or if I had any old jewelry or silver, he would take that. But he had no call for ladies' dresses, and could give so little advance that it would not be worth while to part with my possessions.

I went home and cried bitterly, with my face turned to the wall in the little hard bed where Totsey and I lay (I can hardly say slept) together.

Next morning, for the first time since my arrival in Easel street, there was a letter for me. Fan had gone to the factory when it came, but my mother and Totsey, who was not yet strong enough to go back to work, watched me excitedly as I broke the envelope. What they expected, I did not know. Perhaps they could scarcely have told themselves, but the envelope was of thick, creamy paper, sealed with a crest, and it must have been evident to them that my correspondent was not of their world, but of that remote and dazzling one which I had left.

I knew the instant my eyes fell upon the clear, precise handwriting, with the affected Greek "e's," that the letter was from Roger; and I felt my color rise as I broke it open.

Often I had thought it strange, since he had professed such a passionate regard for me, that he had never come or written. But, as I read on, I began to fancy I understood the reason. For the letter renewed the old offer.

He had waited, it said, controlling his great longing for a sight of me or a word from me, until I should have plenty of time to be sure whether or not I could make up my mind to reconsider my decision. Every moment he had thought of me. Nothing that was now his was of the slightest value to him, since I was not there to share it. Would I not give him something to live for by scrawling one word; that word only of four letters, "C-o-m-e"? In a few hours after he would be with me. I need commit myself to nothing; I need make no decision. He would come if I would let him, and we would talk together. What a talk it would be! And then, if I were tired of the new life I had chosen for the sake of avoiding the one who loved me best, I had but to put my hand in his. He would be my servant until I was ready to call him "lover." But we would be married, and we would see many lands together, if I wished. In a week it might all be arranged, and I could choose where I would travel. Should it be Switzerland, the Engadine, or the Black Forest? Or should we dream away the days on a yacht? He would hardly exist until my answer; but I must at least give him credit for patience in the past.

I gave him credit for policy; and I thought that I could read his thoughts between the lines, almost as if I had seen a skeleton through flesh by aid of the Roentgen rays.

He had waited until he imagined that I must be sick to death of my intolerable environment. For years he had kept my mother always in sight, and had finally given me her address with exactly this contingency in his mind. Everything had worked out according to his plans, except that the bribe of food he offered to me when I was starving was not, after all, tempting enough. He was very clever, but he was not sufficiently clever to understand that all the money and all the luxuries and pleasures which might be mine through him would lose their value because they could not be separated from him. It would be like offering to a thirsty man a glass of exquisite champagne with the black, crumpled body of a great spider at the bottom. I could not conceive being thirsty enough to drink that champagne; and my heart was bitter against Roger.

I would have liked not to answer the letter; but fearing lest, in that case, he might come to Easel street, I sent a few words written on the common, blue-lined paper with which I wrote almost daily, offering my services to various advertisers in the newspapers.

When the envelope was addressed to Arrish Mell Court, where it seemed that Roger was living now, I remembered that I had no more stamps, and not a penny to buy one. I must go out and try to sell the things refused by the pawnbroker, to a second-hand clothes dealer.

I had expected to obtain at least twenty pounds for what I had taken, for I knew that the things must originally have cost fully three times that sum, and they had been scarcely worn before I went into mourning. But I escaped at last, brow-beaten, tongue-tied, and thankful to have wrested four pounds from the second-hand clothes dealer. Her husband had been called in to her assistance, and I was assured by both that I had been cheated by my dressmakers, that fashions had suddenly changed, the season was almost over, and it was a favor to take my things at all.

Still, I had something to show for my journey: I was at least able to post my letter, and to go back in a tram which would take me three-quarters of the way to Easel street. I rested after the battle, and shut my eyes, only to open them again with a start when the conductor came to demand the fare. I slipped my hand into my pocket for the purse lately replenished. But the purse was gone.

CHAPTER XI.

Which Tells of Roger's Allies.

My face told the story of my misfortune. In an instant everyone in the tram seemed to know what had happened

Obituary

The death occurred at Roseneath on Saturday last of Mr. George Turner, father of Mr. M. A. Turner, of the Peterborough Music Store, town. The deceased was 68 years of age and had lived all his life in the same locality. He leaves to mourn his demise a wife and the following sons and daughters: Messrs. M. A., Peterborough; Walter and Bert, of California; E. H. Rochester; Lester, Uxbridge, and Frank at home, and Misses Flo, Uxbridge; Ida, Campbellford, Eva, and Hattie at home. The funeral which took place Monday, was largely attended.

Cause of Splitting Headaches

Poisons accumulate in the blood and spread every moment to all parts of the body. The brain becomes congested, nerves irritated, and the result is that awful headache.

Ferrozone is nature's own remedy for headaches; it is a blood strengthener and purifier of uncommon merit, a lasting potent tonic, and the greatest invigorant and health maker ever known. Headaches never bother people that take Ferrozone after each meal. Buy a box from your druggist for 60 cents.

Jack McDonough Injured

Mr. Jack McDonough, who is employed at the Cereal Company's works, met with a painful accident yesterday morning. It appears that a boom stick broke and came down with such force on the bin on which McDonough and two other workmen were working that it broke the planking and caused them to fall to the bottom of the pit. A quantity of material fell on top of McDonough who was extricated after some little difficulty. He was badly cut about the head and was bruised about the body. Dr. McGrath was promptly in attendance and McDonough was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital. The other two men, Fowler and Byers were only slightly injured.

St. Luke's Anniversary

The anniversary service will be held this evening at 8 o'clock. The church is handsomely decorated, and special music has been prepared for the occasion. The choir will be augmented by All Saint's choir, Rev. Dr. Symonds, J. C. Davidson, W. L. Armitage, and G. Warren will assist in the service, and Prof. Cody, of Toronto will be the special preacher. Members and friends of St. Luke's are requested to contribute flowers and lend plants and palms for the decoration of the church, and send them this morning.

SUMMER BABIES

Summer babies should be brought up on Health-giving Lactated Food which is strongly recommended by our best physicians. Lactated Food is the only safe and pure food for the little ones in the hot weather. It is a preventive of cholera infantum, dysentery and diarrhoea. Makes puny and weak babies strong and happy. Ask your druggist for Lactated Food; take no other.

NON-UNION BANDS

Will Members of Unions be Allowed to Play on 12th July?

There is trouble looming up in regard to music for the Orangemen on 12th July. It appears that the 57th Regimental Band wanted a larger sum than the Orangemen were willing to pay for music for the 12th. It is claimed that the band is larger than ever before, and therefore entitled to a larger fee.

The Orangemen, however, did not see it in this light, and gave the contract to Mr. F. W. Miller, who is organizing one or more "scratch" bands for the day.

As the 57th is a regular "union" band, its members all belonging to the Musicians' Union, and Mr. Miller's impromptu organization is not, it is claimed that orders are to be issued forbidding any member of any labor union from playing in that band. This will probably mean that the Orangemen will be left without music on the 12th.

In this connection the following from the Ottawa Citizen will be of interest:

"The Ottawa Typographical union will take a hand in the trouble which has been going on among the local musical organizations for some time. Some time ago an effort was made by the headers of organized labor in the Capital to bring the various city bands into union membership. It appears that the Guards' band and that of the Garde Champlain would not affiliate. The Forty-third band and some others were willing to co-operate. Now the International Musical Association, which is the parent body under which musicians operate, has issued a circular to the Ottawa Typographical, calling attention to the fact that members of that union are playing in some of the bands that are opposed to musical unionism.

"At its meeting Saturday night the Typographical union decided that any of its members playing in either of the bands opposed to unionism must either drop the band or forfeit their membership in the Typographical union. This decision of course does not hold good in cases where the Guards' band is called out in its military functions, but only where the band plays purely as a commercial transaction for private parties who may engage it. It is said that 12 members of the Typographical union are affected by the decision, and interesting developments are looked for."

Revolution in Newfoundland

Since the introduction into Newfoundland of the new Inhaler Remedy "Catarrhozone," the treatment of catarrhal diseases has been entirely revolutionised. The old-time snuff and internal medicine has been cast aside, and everyone is inhaling Catarrhozone; it clears the head and throat in two minutes, and is very agreeable and pleasant to use. Catarrhozone is a wonderful cure for coughs, colds, catarrh, asthma, lung troubles and deafness. It relieves quickly and cures permanently. We advise our readers to try Catarrhozone. CROSS-APPEALS DISMISSED

Mr. Justice Maclennan dismissed the Liberal cross-appeal in Lennox County at Osgoode Hall to-day and Mr. Carscallen, the Conservative candidate, holds the seat by a majority of 3 over Mr. Madole.

Mr. Geo. E. Watson, K.C., who appeared for Mr. Madole, stated that there were two ballots only upon which they could hope to succeed, and he, therefore, abandoned the appeal. Mr. S. H. Blake, K.C. and Mr. Eric Armour appeared for Mr. Carscallen. Mr. Blake asked that the costs be assessed against Mr. Madole, but this matter was not settled.

North Grey Cross-Appeal.

In court today the Liberal cross-appeal in North Grey was mentioned by Mr. Watson. Mr. Justice Mclennan intimated that it would hardly be worth while to go on, in consideration of the fact that Mr. McKay, the Liberal, had a majority of 2 on the Conservative appeal. The Liberals believe they can increase the majority materially and may go on with the case.

Kribs holds South Waterloo.

The customary $100 deposit has not been made at Osgoode Hall in South Waterloo in the required time, and the protest against Mr. Kribs—thereby falls to the ground. This is the last day in South Wellington, and the deposit was not received in the petition against James Downey, Conservative.

Petitions Against Doctors.

Notice of the following petitions was received at Osgoode Hall today.—

Lincoln—Against Dr. Jessop, Liberal

North Waterloo—Against Dr. Lackner, Conservative.

Want to Disqualify Mr. Cameron.

Bristol, Cawthra and Armour filed a petition at Goderich yesterday on behalf of James Mitchell, of the Goderich Star, against M. G. Cameron, the Liberal member-elect. The petition also asks that Mr. Cameron be disqualified on the ground that he is a member of the commission to revise the Dominion statutes. Mr. Cameron thought was not appointed on the commission until after the election.

New Rule for Lawyers.

The Court of Appeal has passed another new rule in regard to Ontario election petitions.

In cases arising in provisional judicial districts presentation of a petition shall be made by delivering it to the local registrar of the High Court for the provisional judicial district in which the electoral district or any part thereof is situated.

It is further ordered that a local registrar or deputy clerk of the Crown receiving a petition in pursuance of this shall proceed in the same manner as a local registrar of the High Court is required to proceed in the case of a petition received by him.

In cases not otherwise prescribed for presentation of a petition shall be made by delivering it to the registrar of the court, who shall thereupon proceed in the same manner as in the case of other petitions.

FRENCH CANADA'S FUTURE

Manifestations at the Recent Festival of St. Jean Baptiste

Special to The Times.

Quebec, July 9.—The national celebration of the French-Canadian festival of St. Jean Baptiste, which was participated in recently by French-Canadians from many New England points as well as from all parts of Canada, furnished several illustrations of the hopes and aims and aspira- tions of the representatives of the French race in America.

It is a remarkable fact that scarcely a British flag was seen in the procession of the St. Jean Baptiste Society. The majority of the flags were French and American, and these are the very flags under which the French of Canada declare that they are least anxious to live.

French-Canadians love and honor the tri-color as emblematic of the land of their forefathers, and of the race whence they sprang. They employ it at all their national fetes in preference to the Union Jack, because they desire to emphasize the fact that, though acknowledging the political sovereignty of Britain, they are of the British nation, but are French, alike in spirit and in sentiment in aims and traditions, in religon and in language.

All their orators at the recent fetes declared that it was part of their role to be the counterpart of France in the New World. Yet they all protested that there was no desire on the part of French-Canadians to see the French flag wave again over the Province of Quebec.

The generous display of the Stars and Stripes was largely in honor of the visiting French-Canadians from the New England States.

The real objections of the French-Canadians to the annexation of Canada to the United States arise from no love of Britain. They are the same as oppose themselves to a re-union of Canada and France.

French-Canadians know that annexation would mean the absorption of their distinctive language and nationality. These they are determined to maintain at all hazards. For their maintenance they took up arms in the rebellion of 1837-1838 against the British authority in Canada, and now they are secured to them by the Constitution under which they live.

The future destiny of the French race in America was referred to by many of the speakers at the celebration. Not one of them ventured to prophesy what it really was, but all of them warned their hearers against the dangers of both annexation and imperialism, and evidently desired for some time to come, at least, the maintenance of present conditions.

Then, when the time arrives that the French population of Canada shall have obtained that ascendancy in population and influence for which it is now striving, there will be no objection to a gradual loosening of the ties which bind this country to Great Britain, in order that it may become in reality the France of America, a republic whose language and ideals shall both be French.

The present anxiety of the French-Canadian people as to their future was voiced by the president of the St. Jean Baptiste Society, Thos. Chapais, who in the course of his speech at the society's banquet, and in the presence of the Lieutenant-Governor and his cabinet ministers, of Mgr. Falconio, the Papal delegate, and half a dozen archbishops and bishops, expressed himself as follows:

"But what of the future? What will to-morrow bring forth? This is a grave and worrying question. Many far-seeing minds are convinced that we are approaching a turning point in our history. New problems present themselves; the formidable words imperialism, annexation are floating in the air. What may be its precise form and moment nobody knows, but there is a something that warns us that we are very near to a crisis."

After saying that nobody can yet answer these questions, he went on to warn the French-Canadian people of the duty which devolves upon them of so preparing and strengthening themselves that the decisive hour may not find them taken by surprise.

One of the saddest awakenings of the French-Canadians at the recent fetes was to observe that some of their fellow-countrymen from the United States could speak nothing but the English language. The perpetuation by French-Canadians of the French tongue is one of the objects of the St. Jean Baptiste Society, and was urged as a solemn duty by Mgr. Paquet, the preacher of the sermon before the society, and by almost all the speakers at the celebration.

Meanwhile, the work of colonization goes bravely on, and while the Church and State are both offering encouragement for large families of children, the various St. Jean Baptiste societies are interesting themselves in bringing back as many French-Canadians as possible from the United States and settling them upon farms.

LAURIER IS A LONDON LION.

Overwhelmed With Callers at Hotel Cecil and a Much Sought for Guest by British Hostesses

Special to The Times.

London, July 9.—Mr. Chamberlain's illness is delaying the conference, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the other Premiers are conferring among themselves with a view to adopting a united position in discussing the trouble of defence and other questions with the British Ministers.

Sir Wilfrid was overwhelmed today with visitors at the Hotel Cecil. He dines with Lady Wimborne, and attends a reception afterwards.

The Canadian Ministers are delighted with the kindly, genial reception by the Prince and Princess of Wales at the Royal dinner at St. James Palace last night. The Prince and Princess recalled incidents during their Canadian tour with manifest delight.

The Canadian arch is being devasted of its grain today to make way for the flags design for Kitchener's reception on Saturday. There were amusing scenes as the crowd begged and obtained souvenirs of Canadian wheat and corn. Two wagon loads were thus eagerly snatched away, the policemen watching smilingly. The crowd even appropriated shrubs intended for the Kitchener design. Illuminated portraits of the King and Queen, Lord Roberts, and Lord Kitchener, form part of the new design, with a Canadian message of greeting to Kitchener and the troops upon a red background.

THE CHEESE BOARD.

1307 BOXES BOARDED AT YESTERDAY'S MEETING

The Board will Meet Again in Two Weeks—The Factory and The Buyers

A meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board was held Wednesday morning, when 1307 boxes of cheese were boarded nearly all of which sold at 9 3-8c.

The following buyers were in attendance, Messrs. Bailey, Wrighton, Rollins, Whitton, Cook, Fitzgerald and Kerr.

Keene	115
Warminster	80
Shearer	70
Central Smith	120
North Smith	80
Villiers	65
Warsaw	65
Westwood	120
Oakdale	84
Missing Link	65

South Burleigh	50
Brickley	56
Shamrock	65
Norwood	130
Dartford	75
Apsley	84
Percy	100
	1307

The bidding opened at 9 cents by Mr. Rollins and closed at 9 3-8c. by Mr. Whitton who carried off Ormonde, Melrose Abbey, Westwood, Villiers, Shearer and Brickley.

Mr. Wrighton at the same price picked up Warsaw, Fraserville, Otonabee Union, Bensfort, Mount Pleasant, Central Smith and Peterborough.

At 9 3-8 c., which was still the favorite, Mr. Kerr took as his selections Lakefield, Trewern, Myrtle, East Emily, Fleetwood, Cavanville North Smith and Missing Link.

A peculiar circumstance then occurred in which Messrs. Cook, Bailey and Rollins cmplained to have shouted out 9 3-8c. first. A cmpromise was effected by the three buyers being allowed to bid in turns.

Mr. Bailey took as his factories, Norwood, Percy, Dartford, Shamrock, Oak Leaf and Maple Leaf.

Mr. Rollins took Oakdale, Pine Grove Warminster, Daisy D., Young's Point North Dummer, Apsley, South Burleigh and Stony Lake.

Mr. Cook took Keene, Cedardale, Lang and Indian River.

The Bard then adjourned for two weeks.

SEA MONSTER LAUNCHED

Largest Schooner Ever Built Successfully Floated

Boston, Mass., July 10.—At the Fore River shipyard, on the south shore of Boston harbor, there was launched today the first seven-masted schooner ever built. The initial plunge of the big vessel was witnessed by a crowd that numbered thousands.

The ship is named the Thomas W. Lawson in honor of the Boston copper man, whose family owns a considerable share in her. She was built by Captain John G. Crowley, pioneer builder of large schooners, from designs by Bowdoin B. Crowninshield, who planned Mr. Lawson's Independence a year ago.

The Lawson has benefitted from all the lessons taught by experience with her big predecessors. The keelson has been made unnecessary by constructing her hill of steel. Thus her earning capacity has been increased very considerably. The crew expense has been cut practically in half by the introduction of engines to manage all the sails, to handle the enormous anchors, and do stevedore work. She is provided with a double bottom, which can be filled with water ballast if she sails light laden. She is lighted by electricity and steered by steam.

The heads of the seven masts are 105 feet above the wood-covered steel deck, the topmasts being Oregon pine spars 58 feet long, the lower masts steel cylinders 32 inches in diameter at the bottom, which is 30 feet below the wooden decking. Each mast weighs 17 tons bare, and will weigh nearly 20 when fully rigged. The seven-master has two decks of steel covered with wood. Altogether her carrying capacity is 8,100 tons. Her displacement is 10,000 tons, and she spreads 43,000 square feet of sail; yet, by the use of the engines, she need have but 16 men in her crew, including her master and her engineers. She will cost when completed an even $250,000.

THE VENEZUELA REVOLUTION

Entire Force of Revolutionists is Estimated at 10,000

Special to The Times.

Washington, July 9.—Commander McLean of the cruiser Cincinnati cabled the Navy Department today from La Guayra a report on the revolution in Venezuela, which is derived from information secured by the Topeka. Commander McLean says:

"Topeka reports forty revolutionists attacked Custom House at Guanta yesterday, secured four Mausers and some ammunition. They fled to the hills upon the appearance of troops. Captain of Topeka visited Barcelona, secured information that Gen. Matos with 3,000 men is at Urica, well armed but inactive, and 3,000 more in State of Bermudez. Estimates entire force revolutionists in country 10,000. Small bands revolutionists in this vicinity. Some firing at night. Foreigners not molested by either side. Yesterday 230 more troops came here from Caracas but were recalled today in haste. Steamer Ossun goes to Puerto Cabello with 300 troops."

TO TEST THE DESTROYERS

British Admiralty Seeks an Explanation of the Cobra's Destruction

Special to The Times.

London July 9.—In order to test the strength of the torpedo boat destroyers, the Admiralty has ordered a remarkable experiment to be made at the Portsmouth dockyard. One of the dry docks is being especially prepared for the destroyer Wolf, where she will be subjected to a series of tests which will include hogging and sagging strains.

At first she will be sagged by being hung by the head and stern from two platforms having no support beneath. The middle will then be hogged; that is she will be balanced across a pile of timber so that the full strain of the unsupported fore and aft parts will be thrown on the centre of the vessel.

The experiment will prove whether a destroyer's hull is so weak, as was suggested in the case of the Cobra, that the back breaks when a wave lifts her amidships or a sea lifts her in such manner that the wave is hollow beneath her middle.

People With Bad Breath

Generally suffer from catarrh and should use Catarrhozone Inhaler four times daily and be cured. The pleasant scented Catarrhozone vapor spreads through every passage of the breathing organs and reaches the very root of the disease at once, it kills the germ, purifies and cleanses the mucous surfaces, and eradicates every vestige of catarrh in a short time.

Pure, sweet breath, free from headache, sneezing and discharge are quickly derived from the use of Catarrhozone Inhaler. Complete outfit, guaranteed to cure, costs $1.00, trial size 25 cents. Druggists, or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Tacoma, Wash., July 9.—The ship Florence, arriving last night from Dutch Harbor, sailed for 200 miles through a sea of pumice stone in pieces two or three inches across. This was about 500 miles southeast of Akutan Pass.

MARCONI STATION READY

Waiting for His Arrival to Send a Message Across the Atlantic

Special to The Times.

Glace Bay, July 9.—The Marconi station is ready and equipped for handling transatlantic messages. The operators are waiting for Marconi to arrive with the new instrument to send the first message. The staff say they can send or receive now, but want Marconi to reap the glory of opening the the system. He is expected before the middle of July.

FEAR AMERICAN CONTROL

English Retail Provision Dealers Start a Home Industry Movement

Special to The Times.

Liverpool, July 9.—There is great alarm in the retail provision trade over the possibility of the absorption of Fowler Bros, the big wholesalers, by Swift & Co., of Chicago. The retailers are trying to start a movement on a large scale to deal only with English wholesalers.

BLOODHOUNDS ON TRAIL

But Tracey, the Outlaw, Uses Cayenne Pepper to Defeat Them

Settle, Wash. July 9 — Harry Tracy the fugitive convict outlaw, has, for the fourth time since his arrival at Meadow Point, escaped from the officers. Tracy was definitely located in the home of Charles Gerrals, one mile north of the town of Renton at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. At 4.45 o'clock Deputy Sheriff Cook arrived with a fraction of the posse and advanced up the track toward the Gerrel's home. The convict, however, plunged into the brush and was soon lost to view. When Tracy disappeared from the Gerrel's home the bloodhounds were hastily brought up from the rear and turned loose on the hot scent. Both dogs struck the trail down the stream, following it for a quarter of a mile, and crossing the track only to double back and swim the river.

Half way between Cedar River and Burrough's boathouse, both dogs ran into Cayenne pepper, sprinkled in the outlaw's retreating footsteps. Their nostrils were filled with the fiery substance, and fully ten minutes were lost in relieving the dogs, so that they could again exercise their powers of smell. Pressed to desperation, Tracy here made a circuit, headed due north, and plunged into the outskirts of the lake, where he finally succeeded in casting the scent. It was then dark and the guard returned to Renton with the dogs.

AWFUL TRAGEDY AT COLBORNE

Husband is Accused of Foully Murdering His Wife

Colborne, ont., July 8.—As the result of an investigation by Detective Inspector Greer, Isaac Lambert is under arrest here, charged with murdering his wife. Inspector Greer has been in the vicinity for the past week working on the case. Lambert lived with his wife and three children at Hilton, in Northumberland County, about twelve miles from here. His wife died some time ago under circumstances that led the neighbors to believe that she had been foully dealt with. The provincial authorities were communicated with, and Detective Greer was sent here to investigate the case.

The body was exhumed and an autopsy held. The stomach was sent to Toronto and an analysis of the contents showed that death resulted from Paris green poisoning.

A CHILD'S STORY.

Up to this time it has been impossible to learn anything from the children, but when the cause of death had been made known, they were induced to tell what they knew. According to their statements, their mother was the victim of their father's brutality. The eldest child states that the day previous to her mother's death the father quarrled with his wife, and threatened to kill her. A relative was present at the time, and, according to the child's statement, this man pried open with a knife her mother's mouth, while her father poured Paris green down her throat.

The agonized cries of the unfortunate woman, attracted the attention of passers-by, and they ran to the house, but were not allowed admittance, as the door had been securely barred.

A sufficient quantity of the poison to cause death was poured down the woman's throat, and of course her agony was indescribable as was shown by the face of the victim when exhumed for the autopsy.

The prisoner refuses to give any accurate account of the deed, and maintains a stolid indifference.

It is said that at the time the murder was committed the unfortunate woman had but a few rags of clothing and there was not a morsel of food in the house for her family of three little children

REPATRIATED BOERS COME BACK TO VELDT

They are Being Supplied with Tents, Equipments and Rations for a Month.

London, July 9.—"A steady stream of repatriated burghers" says The Times correspondent at Johannesburg, "has recently been returning home. The Boers are supplied with tents, equipments, and rations for a month. This week the general return begins by Government transport of those not possessing horses and carts of their own. A local commission in each district will assist in restoring the people to their homes, supplying food, shelter, seeds and stock when necessary. Each commission will be under the presidency of the resident magistrate and will exercise a broad discretion in making grants with regard to present needs, and not with regard to the position of the families before the war. The correspondent points out that the National Scouts (Boers who fought on the British side) deserve preferential treatment and are as anxious as the others to return to their normal life, more than 400 of them will return to their own farms, and many of them may take advantage of Government land settlement schemes. This week a group of settlers possessing some capital will be established in the Ermelo district. These include more than fifty New Zealanders; $15,000,000 will be put at the disposal of the local commissioners for the settlement of claims for war losses. When the successful complainant has received no supplies his share will be paid in cash. In other cases the value of the supplies granted will be deducted.

GERMANY'S COARSE INSULTS.

The Paris correspondent of The Times says the French press has not failed to note the effect caused in Germany by the charges made in the House of Commons regarding the conduct of German troops in China. French journals do not discuss the merits of the question, but show no sympathy for Germany, considering that after the coarse insults to Great Britain in connection with the South African war, uttered in the Reichstag, the language used in the House of Commons was almost a natural retort. LeJournal des Debats says that Great Britain's complaisance towards Germany is in marked contrast with the small sympathy felt in Germany towards Great Britain.

CHAMBERLAIN'S ACCIDNT.

In spite of Chamberlain's unpopularity in Belguim, says the Brussels correspondent of The Times, the accident to him has evoked a certain amount of sympathy in the comment of moderate papers. Le Journal de Brulles thinks Chamberlain will gain in the long run from his narrow escape, which will naturally tend to make him an object of popular sympathy and strengthen his hold on his countrymen.

CROWN PRINCE OF SIAM COMING

The King is Also Desirous of Visiting the United States

Washington, July 9.—Phya Akharaj Varadhara, Minister of Siam, called on Secretary Hay at the State Department this morning and discussed plans for the coming visit to the United States of Siam's Crown Prince. It is now proposed to have the Crown Prince reach this country some time next September. The details of the visit have not yet been arranged, but will be within a few weeks. There is continued probability of a visit from the King of Siam as well, but nothing has yet been definitely settled beyond the fact that he is much interested in the United States and is desirous of coming either with the Crown Prince or later. There is a belief that the King will be discouraged in this desire by representatives of foreign Powers in Siam who do not view with pleasure the advancement of American ideas in Siam.

Items of News

London, July 9.—Speaking at different banquets in London last night the colonial Premiers now assembled here congratulated the Empire and Sir John Gordon Sprigg, Prime Minister of Cape Colony on the victory for constitutional government gained in that colony by the decision of the Imperial Government against the proposal to suspend the Cape constitution. The Premiers also referred with great regret to the accident to Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the Colonial Secretary.

Mr. Edmund Barton, Prime Minister of the Australian Federation, said he felt sure that every self-governing portion of the Empire had been in sympathy with Sir John Gordon Sprigg who had fought so strenuously against the suspension of the Cape constitution as otherwise the colonies could not have been enthusiastic in helping the empire in the South African war.

Mr. Barton advised his hearers not to expect too much, especially in the way of written bonds, from the colonial conference. Nevertheless, he said, the outcome of the conference will be the strengthening of the Empire.

Sir John Gordon Sprigg, speaking at the same banquet, thanked the other Colonial Premiers for having helped him to fight the battle of constitutionalism. He expressed the greatest satisfaction with the manner in which the rebels are laying down their arms in Cape Colony, and the progress towards peace and pacification.

London, July 9.—In the House of Commons to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Admiralty, H. C. Arnold-Forster, replying to William Redmond, the Irish leader, confirmed the report that J. Pierpont Morgan had offered to place all the British ships in the new combine at the disposal of the Admiralty for the next 50 years, on certain terms. Mr. Arnold-Forster added that the offer had not yet been accepted, because it could only be dealt with in relation to British shipping generally, and the Atlantic trade position, which was being very carefully considered by the Government.

Brassey's Criticism.

Lord Brassey (Liberal) initiated a discussion on naval matters in the House of Lords yesterday, during the course of which he deplored the fact that Great Britain had lost the place she once held with her mercantile marine. The question of subsidies, he thought, must depend on the action of the other powers. All the naval powers of Europe, the speaker asserted, gave liberal subsidies, while President Roosevelt and ex-Secretary Gage had recommended the policy. It was contrary to British policy to foster industries by bounties or protection, but to pay for a reserve of auxiliary vessels would certainly be to the public advantage.

Lord Shelborne, the first Lord of the Admiralty, in the course of a reply referred to the Atlantic shipping combine. He said it seemed to him that the balance was one of disadvantage to the combination, because it necessarily placed very large powers in the hands of a few men. The Government disclaimed any sort of jealousy of the intention of the Americans here They had an American marine of their own, and they had a perfect right to a full share of the Atlantic trade. It corporation should and must be confined to a limited number, and for a special and definite purpose. While merchant cruisers had their proper place in time of war they could never be substituted for naval cruisers, nor would the possession of merchant cruiser never diminish the shipbuilding vote for the navy.

London, July 9.—The Russian Government has announced its intention to contribute over £100,000 towards the installation of a line of cold storage steamships which will run between Libau, a seaport town on the Baltic, and England, to carry meat produce of various kinds.

Experts in the meat trade who have been questioned regarding the latest developments in the American invasion of that trade say that the Smithfield control of American houses. Its capture has been secret and gradual, and prices are being raised. The English representatives of the American trust meet daily and agree upon prices, to their mutual advantages. As regard refrigerator beef, which comprises 77 per cent. of the beef consumed in England within the next six months prices have been raised three cents a pound.

The British side of the Smithfield market declares that the only thing that will prevent this will be the reopening of the Argentine supply now that Argentine is said to be free from the foot and mouth disease.

THE MILLIONS OF A PREACHER

He was a great man, a good man, and a church man.

He died worth about $15,000,000.

He left a few charity legacies and handed down the bulk of his great fortune to his family intact.

His will was a mixture of devoutness assertions of faith and financial acumen closing with a recommendation to reinvest the money in first mortgage bonds of railroads which have never defaulted in interest.

There are people who will assert that the preacher who can preach charity in the pulpit while holding down the lid of a strong box literally bursting with gold has never known even the first principles of religion.

It isn't possible to pile up $15,000,000 and not be selfish. It isn't possible to lay away a hoard that represents the life earnings of thousands of men without missing opportunities to do good.

One wonders if there were no worthy poor in New York; no children burned by the blazing summer heat and who died because there was no money to buy relief for them. One thinks of despairing men and discouraged women, of human beings who lacked the necessaries of life, of children with humps and crooked limbs who might have been cured if the lock had been taken from the strong box.

One thinks of all the human misery and that great pile of gold, and wonders if the words, "Am I my brother's keeper?" were idly said or meant to convey a great lesson.

Dr. Blodgett, can a minister of the Gospel amass $15,000,000 without impairing his usefulness? Dr. Goss, can a preacher die rich and still have lived a useful life? Dr. Nelson, do you see good or evil in the will of Dean Eugene Augustus Hoffman, rich man and minister of the Gospel?

UNITED EUROPE

In this day of progressive consolidation this portion of the London Spectator deserves passing consideration:

"The death of the King of Saxony and the deep impact which it has made on German feeling, call attention to a German fact, too often forgotten in this country—namely, the remarkable and unexpected success which has attended their system of federation. That system is absolutely unique in the history of the world, and like many another system, seems to have succeeded because it's success was a priori impossible.

"Some day, not tomorrow, but still, it may be, within our children's lifetimes, Europe may have occasion to study the German Confederation very closely. There is a hint in it for that federation of the continent which seems so far off, but which may be closer than diplomatists now dream. If the Triple Alliance fought the Dual Alliance to the death, it might be very near, Europe finding in it the only road of escape from an otherwise endless vista of misery, bloodshed and loss; and so also it might be near if any events should sharpen the distrust already expressed by Continental statesmen of Anglo-Saxon ambition and designs."

A United Europe! A United States of Europe! While the details of confederation are undergoing perfection we hail the idea as an ornament to the Twentieth century.

Her Right to Search Her Husbands Pockets

Judge Sidener of the First District Police Court rendered a decision yesterday morning to the effect that a wife has a right to go through her husbands pockets. The decision was rendered in the case of Henry Shauer, who gave as an excuse for abusing his wife, Clara, that she had searched his pockets. They lived at 801 Ann avenue.

Mrs. Shauer said her husband sometimes drank too much, and then spent all his money. In order to keep the larder supplied, she said, it sometimes was necessary to go through his pockets, and extract the money. Shauer said his wife had no business in his pockets, and that caused the trouble.

Judge Sidener said Mrs. Shauer was perfectly justified in doing as she did, and assessed a fine of $5 against her husband on the charge of disturbing his wife's peace.

George A. Treadwell Mining Company

27 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK. JEROME, ARIZONA.

Capital - - - - $3,000,000.

VALUE OF SHARES $10.

In a suit recently tried in the New York courts it was proved from the books of the United Verde Copper Company and the sworn testimony of the bookkeepers that the cost to that company of producing copper was only three and a half cents a pound, not counting the gold and silver values, which—allowed for—reduced the cost to a still lower figure.

Nowhere outside the Verde Copper Belt in Yavapai County, Arizona, is copper produced in quantities for less than twice this cost.

The United Verde has about two hundred acres on the north end of the Belt and the George A. Treadwell Company has several times as much in the central and southern parts of the Belt. The conditions along the whole Belt are entirely similar. We already have three mines developed—the Cliff, Brookshire and Iron Queen—one of which, the Cliff, seems to be larger and better than the United Verde, and the other two at least approach it in magnitude and value, while we have several others, including Badger, Pastime, Green Monster and Spoke and Stonewall, which, though less developed, are equally promising.

Professor Treadwell believes we have at least half a dozen United Verdes within the broad and extensive limits of our holdings.

As soon as our smelter plant which is now in process of erection, is completed, we can certainly produce copper as cheap as our rich neighbor on the north.

The United Verde for several years has produced one-tenth the copper of the world. When our plants are fully installed we expect the Verde Belt to produce one-half the copper of the world, and the George A. Treadwell Mining Company will be prepared to do more than its full share.

Before investing in copper in unproved localities, consider the stock of the George A Treadwell Mining Company, named after the great pioneer and explorer of the Verde Belt and owning the largest and best aggregation of properties on it.

The price of the stock is $11 a share. Make checks payable to The order of the company and send them to 27 William Street New York

Armed and Invincible.

WHEN the little woman opened the door the burly fellow promptly pushed his way in. In alarm she hastily backed away, and he closed the door after him.

"What do you mean?" she demanded, trying to appear brave and determined. "Leave this house immediately."

"Oh, I guess not," he answered, impudently.

"I'll call my husband," she threatened.

"He ain't home," retorted the intruder; "there ain't nobody home but you. That's why I come in. See?"

She was badly frightened, but she tried not to show it. Furthermore, she was handicapped by the fact that she was in house-cleaning attire, with apron and cap, and a feather duster in her right hand. A woman cannot be as dignified and haughtily imperious as she would wish under these circumstances.

"What do you want?" she demanded.

"Money an' jew'lry," he answered. "I ain't partic'ler wot it is, only so it's small an' val'able. I ain't lookin' for no piano."

"Well, I should think not," she returned indignantly, "and you can't have anything at all. If you don't get right out of here I'll scream."

"Turn 'er loose!" retorted the intruder, carelessly. "There ain't nobody to hear you, but you better be quick about it, 'cause I ain't got no time to waste. I'm all business, I am, an' we been foolin' long enough. Reach for the high note!"

"You're the most insulting man I ever saw!" she cried, angrily.

"Sure," he acquiesced—and then, with a slight show of impatience, "Better hand out that watch you're wearin' or I'll have to reach for it, an' that wouldn't be wot you'd like."

"Don't you dare touch me!" she exclaimed, retreating to the parlor as he advanced. "You're a great big coward! You wouldn't dare do this if I had a pistol!"

"Sure I wouldn't," he admitted; "but I got to have that there ticker for a start-off."

Her anger had been getting the better of her fear, and now her housewifely instincts added to her indignation.

"Don't you come into this room with these muddy boots!" she cried. "I've just swept and dusted. You go right back there and wipe your feet on the mat."

She pointed with the duster, and as that useful household utensil came in proximity to his face he hastily dodged back.

"Don't be sassy, little woman," he said with offensive familiarity, and that was the last straw. She was so angry that she could cry, and she would have done so if there had been any sort of a reasonable opportunity.

"Oh, if I only had a weapon!" she said, hotly. "I'd teach you manners, you big, burly brute—you coward! You knew I was defenceless, or you wouldn't have dared come in! Oh, why is a woman so helpless!" Then, as he advanced again, she suddenly pushed the duster into his face, with the peremptory command: "Go back there, you clumsy thing! Don't you dare traipse mud into this room!"

Now, a feather duster is about as disagreeable a thing as a man can have thrust in his face, and as the intruder jumped back his feet became entangled in the hall rug, and he was flat on his back before he knew what had happened. As he tried to raise himself he got the duster in the face again. He grabbed for it, but she was too quick for him. He needed his hands to get himself up and he needed them to protect his face, and then she made matters worse by suddenly throwing the loose end of the rug over him.

"Oh, if I only had a weapon!" she cried.

"Wot do you call that thing?" he growled, as he tried to disentangle himself, with the result that every time he took his hands away from his face he got a feather in his eye or a bunch of them in his mouth. Once he closed his teeth on them and thus tried to hold the duster until he could grab it, but she jerked it away, leaving a varied assortment of feathers and parts of feathers in his mouth.

"Oh, my eye!" he suddenly cried, as well as he could with his mouth full of things that made him sputter and choke. "Oo! oo! ouch! you've put it out!"

"If I only had a weapon," was her retort, "I believe I could manage you all right. I'll never be unarmed again when I'm alone in the house."

"You ain't now," he wailed, holding both hands to his eye. "Let me up an' I'll go—sure I will."

"Am I sassy?" she demanded, the light of victory shining in her indignant eyes.

"Sure not," he answered.

"Are you ever going to say 'little woman' to a lady again?"

"No, ma'am; never!" with great earnestness—for she was still plying the duster whenever he attempted to move.

"Aren't you ashamed of yourself to impose on a defenceless woman?"

"'Shamed ain't no name for it," he asserted with feeling.

She hastily threw open the outer door.

"Get up," she said.

He struggled to his feet, while she watched him closely. His back was to the open door when he stood up, the eye that had met the duster blinking distressingly. For an instant he hesitated, but only for an instant.

"Out!" she cried, and the duster went straight to his face again. He went out backward in such a hurry that he nearly fell down the steps, and the door was promptly closed. His defeat, which up to the very last minute he had hoped to turn into victory, was complete.

"Wot's the matter?" asked the man who was waiting for him at the corner. "Was she armed?"

"Bill," was the solemn and impressive reply, "'cordin' to a man's idea she wasn't, but you can't never tell when a woman's armed."—Elliott Flower in "Leslie's Weekly."

The Insane Philosophy of Tolstoi.

Tolstoi's book on the sex question, in which he advocates absolute chastity, even at the cost of the gradual disappearance of the human race, continues to arouse spirited discussion. "La Revue Blanche" (Paris) recently asked the opinion of several prominent Europeans regarding Tolstoi's views. Some of the replies are appended. Madame Judith Gauthier, a retired opera singer who is now a literary woman, was the only one to endorse Tolstoi's position.

Max Nordau—"Count Leo Tolstoi preaches absolute chastity. I wonder if he can convince Madame Tolstoi and the fine family she has raised! At all events, we should congratulate ourselves that his parents did not share his opinion. Otherwise we should have had no 'War and Peace' or 'Anna Karenina.' . . . Speaking seriously, it seems to me that the ideas of Count Tolstoi on the marriage question are absolutely delirious, and delirium can be diagnosed, but not discussed. It is useless to defend woman against the absurd lucubrations of a sick brain."

Enrico Ferri of Rome—"The affirmations of Tolstoi on the sexual question only confirm Lombroso's theory of the degeneracy of genius. The fundamental needs of humanity are bread to preserve life and love to preserve the species. To preach absolute chastity is as absurd as preaching absolute fasting. Marriage, whatever Tolstoi may say, is the ideal state of human life."

Emile Zola—"The idea of Tolstoi is not new. Marriage is legalized by society, but it exists in nature without laws. Christ did not get married, because he was too busy to think about it. I confess that I do not understand Tolstoi. . . . It is insane."

Madame Judith Gauthier — "I will limit my consideration of the problem to the question of birth. It seems to me an act of truest wisdom to prevent the unhappiness of existence, and many wise men, including Christ, have indicated the path which we have failed to follow. To give life and then inflict death would constitute the greatest of crimes, did not nature, in her search for victims, strike with blindness and unconsciousness those whom she allures into her snares."

Albert Reville—"Pascal said, 'Man is neither angel nor beast, and the man who wants to be an angel plays the part of a beast.' If the hope of a future life is reasonable, and I believe it is, we may be able one day to rise above the organic conditions of this mysterious life. But as long as we live on earth, we are bound to admit the legitimacy of the acts and functions without which our own life and the life of humanity would be impossible. To state that marriage is unchristian, because Christ was not married, is absurd. It is like reasoning that we could not go to heaven because we travel by rail and wear trousers, whereas Christ did neither. Christ himself said that marriage was a holy and divine institution (Mark x. 2-9).

New and Aggressive.

Much knowledge of human nature is gathered up in the expression, "A new broom sweeps clean." The new bank, the Sovereign, which opened in Toronto last week in new premises, with a new staff, new officers, new issue of bills—everything new—is one of the financial brooms that is evidently going to make a clean sweep. The popularity of the new bank and of its management has been demonstrated daily since it opened its doors, by the large number of business men and people in all the walks of life who have transacted business over its counters. Centrally situated on the north side of King street, but a short distance from Yonge, and commodiously appointed to the smallest detail, the premises of the Sovereign Bank are amongst the most convenient and the most suitable for their purpose of any in Toronto. The financial status of the Bank is high; it starts on its career with an authorized capital of $2,000,000 and a subscribed capital of $1,300,000. The Board of Directors, upon which appear the names of Messrs. H. S. Holt, Montreal; Randolph Macdonald, Toronto; James Carruthers, Montreal; A. A. Allan, Toronto; Arch. Campbell, M.P., Toronto Junction; Hon. Peter McLaren, Perth; John Pugsley, Toronto; Hon. D. McMillan, Alexandria, Ont.; Henry R. Wilson, New York, is a list of gentlemen of recognized standing and proven capability as financiers. In Mr. D. M. Stewart, Canada has her youngest and undoubtedly one of her very ablest general bank managers. In addition to all the ordinary features of a banking business, the Sovereign will issue Travelers' Letters of Credit on J. S. Morgan & Co., London, and Morgan, Harjes Company, Paris. These credits are available in all parts of the world, and just the thing for persons contemplating a visit to Europe or to the coronation this summer.

All About Men.

One of the greatest advantages of the silent man is that he cannot be misquoted.

Men who ride hobbies would not be nearly so objectionable if they did not want all the road to themselves.

A man will often make small faults conspicuous in order to insinuate that he has no great ones.

Often the pleasantest memories men have are of events that never happened.

The things that come to the man who waits are generally the cast-offs of somebody else.

It is not always what a man does that goes against him, but what he happens to get caught in.

There are men who do not care to be judged by what they really are, but what they want others to think they are.

Nothing makes a man quite so angry as to realize that he has no just cause for anger and to realize that others realize it.

Some men's idea of a friend is someone who will stick to them through adversity, take their part against uncharitable neighbors, lend them his last shilling without security, and when Fortune smiles will take a back seat.

A wise man can find plenty of suggestions where fools have dropped them.

I. O. O. F. NOTES

The officers of Pontypool Lodge, No. 296, I.O.O.F., were publicly installed on July 4, by Bro. M. W. Matchett, D.D.G.M., assisted by Past Grands Hooper, Stewart, Eaton, Brownlee, Fanning and Wallis.

Besides a good attendance of lodge members, there was a large turnout of the general public to witness the beautiful and impressive ceremony of installation of officers.

After installation, there were short speeches by Bros. Matchett, Stewart, and others, before adjournment to the dining room, where refreshments were served to all present. A short but excellent program was then presented, Rev. E. P. Oswald acting as chairman. Besides local talent, Bro. J. Halpany, of Peterborough, delighted the company. In his singing he was ably accompanied by Bro. W. Staples.

Pontypool Lodge is making excellent progress, and has now 72 members.

The officers are as follows:

J.P.G.	W. Corbett
N.G.	J. J. Clarke
V.G.	A. Fallis
R.S.	E. Benson

Property Committee—G. Lapp, T. Hill, G. Douglas.

Finance Committee—J. W. Anderson, Dr. Lapp, W. G. Morrow.

The officers of Norwood Lodge, No. 242, I.O.O.F., were installed on Wednesday, July 2, by the District Deputy Grand Master, Bro. M. W. Matchett, of Peterborough, assisted by Past Grand, Bro. T. H. Hooper, of Peterborough, Past Grand Johnston, of Hastings, and Past Grands Ackerman, Eaton, and Stewart, of Norwood.

At the close of the installation there were addresses by Bros. Matchett, Hooper, Stewart, and others, after which an adjournment was made to Bro. Tucker's restaurant, where a very tempting lunch was served, and a pleasant social hour spent.

Bro. W. A. Eaton will represent Norwood Lodge at the Grand Lodge session in Toronto in August.

The officers and committees elected and appointed are as follows:

J.P.G.	John Finlay
N.G.	A. S. Harrison
V.G.	J. F. Anderson
R.S.	W. J. Webster
F.S.	W. E. Roxburgh

Membership Committee—James Cumming, W. J. Webster, W. E. Roxburgh, W. A. Eaton, R. T. Scott.

Property Committee—Dr. Pettigrew, W. A. Eaton, James Cumming.

Representative to Grand Lodge—W. A. Eaton

Finance Committee—W. A. Eaton, J. F. Anderson, I. N. Ackerman.

There will be a public installation at Havelock, next Friday evening, July 11, conducted by Bro. M. W. Matchett, D.D.G.M., assisted by other members of the District Committee.

The officers of Peterborough and Otonabee Lodges, I.O.O.F., will be jointly installed on Monday, July 14.

The District Committee will hold their closing meeting for the year on Monday, July 14, at Peterborough, at half-past seven, to close up the season's business, pass accounts, nominate a D.D.G.M., etc. It is hoped every member of the Committee will be present.

A general invitation is extended to the Oddfellows of Peterborough to attend the public installation at Pontypool on Friday evening, July 11. The Peterboro brethren will go by the C.P.R. train, leaving here at 7:30 p.m. As the return fare is only 75c, no doubt many will go.

A joint committee of the two local lodges will arrange for serving refreshments at the close of the joint installation at Peterborough on Monday evening next, July 14. A very pleasant time is expected.

"A farmer ought to read a great deal, just the same as any other business man."

Husband's Face.

Benedicts who are in the habit of trying to palm themselves off as spring hatched roosters will learn, not without alarm, that the physiognomist is on their track. He has, in fact, evolved a new terror called the "husband's face." Every married man is said to possess it, and it marks him out a Benedict just as surely as if he had a label to that effect hung round his neck. Don't imagine, says "Pick-Me-Up," that we are going to give the secret away—the ladies know too much already—but any duly certified married man who sends along sufficient cheques and stamps to cover the postage, cost of packing, and registration, can have it by return, or later. It is just as well to be on your guard, boys. There is small comfort in being told by a casual confection that you are not what you pretend to be, even supposing you aren't, and if a little wrinkle from "one who knows" can avert trouble, I'm sure you're heartily welcome.

A Ghostly Game of Chess.

"The International Hall of the Cafe Monico is a truly palatial chamber, ever so many feet broad by even so many more feet long. On the evenings of Friday and Saturday of last week," says London "Outlook," "it was divided by a barrier into two unequal parts. In the smaller sat, each at his board, the British chess-players competing against the American chess-players—who were not there. Through the larger roamed a selection of the chess public. . . . Inside the barrier, and next it, sat Mr. James Mason at a chess-board, facing us. We seem to have known Mr. Mason as a fine player these—well, say twenty years. On this occasion he is opposing Mr. J. R. Barry of America—who is not here; Mr. Barry is sitting in a room in Brooklyn three thousand miles away, under the eyes of American spectators. It is easy to say that the two men are connected by electric telegraph; but it is not wise to dispose of the mystery and romance of space in so rude a way. . . . But Mr. Mason, in this grand International Hall, seated opposite nothing better than a man with a book of telegraph forms who waits unconcernedly for the move, can he play thus dumbly and in absence against Mr. Barry in Brooklyn and think it chess? It is a very ghostly business, and we wonder Mr. Mason can get through with it at all. But he does. He is as solemn, as rapt in thought, as oblivious of all but the game as if Mr. Barry were opposite to him in the flesh, and not opposed to him only by electric telegraph. Clearly to him the play is everything, whether the opponent's move comes to him by actual touch, by telegraph, or by psychic suggestion. But for our part we cannot throw off a dread of the uncanny nature of the business. We feel inclined to look about for some manifestation of Mr. American Barry's spirit. What better evidence of it could we have than the arrangement of these wooden pieces on that wooden board? There is Mr. Barry—most effectually Mr. Barry, for he is causing Mr. Mason to think, and think, and think; to purse his lips in the old familiar way, to fall into immovable silences, wherein you would think he was revolving schemes of a new order of creation or puzzling out the mystery of man's origin and destiny; and Mr. Mason is doing the like to him in far Brooklyn. A strange and fascinating pursuit is chess, strange and unprofitable. Not politics, nor fame, nor wealth, nor love can so engross a man. These objects are usually compassed by flashes of passion, insight, and daring; but this slow, prolonged struggle of brain against brain, through the medium of pieces of fantastically carved wood, is pure devotion to an abstraction. The man who wins, who so hems in the piece of wood called a king that he may not move, gains nothing, proves nothing, establishes nothing but—"checkmate." Yet when he accomplishes that he tastes of a satisfaction deeper and more permanent than is accorded to statesman or lover, merchant or gambler. To accomplish it he deliberately, and for very love of the doing of it, undertakes an enormous mental effort, a thing which mankind in general shuns as if it were Satan himself. Truly a most mystical business this chess. In Paradise you will find politicians reading poetry, and poets studying morals; merchants will be cultivating the arts, and critics weeping on other people's necks; but the chess-players will be playing chess.

Dispensing With Early Rising.

Some genius has, according to his own advertisement, invented an apparatus to dispense with getting up so early in winter time to set the kettle boiling. As far as we understand it, you fix the new invention on your clock, and at the hour required it starts a fire under a kettle of water. As soon as the water boils a bell rings, and you wake up. This is not the sort of thing that takes the cake; it simply grabs it.

We once saw a remarkable invention of this nature in Sheffield. It consisted of a small, but powerfully built bedstead which had an ingenious clockwork arrangement attached, as you would expect, to the ticking of the mattress. In the morning a phonograph got up from under the bed, walked round to your side, and announced it was seven o'clock. After giving you two minutes to reply, one of the hands of the clock reached up and pulled your ear playfully. These were just preliminaries so to speak. If you didn't move then, the patent bed began business. It got up on its hind legs and ran downstairs with you inside it till it got to the garden, where you were shot into a modest little heap under the pump. By a clever arrangement of the process of suction you were drawn up to the mouth and a refreshing stream of cold water crawled down your back. If this didn't wake you, you had to wait for Gabriel's trumpet.

As a matter of fact, the inventor explained, it did wake most people. But in case you were too sleepy to collect your thoughts into fitting shape, by pressing a little knob in one of the blankets, a second phonograph would grind out a little appropriate profanity to ease your feelings. The invention is patented; and when it is put on the market it will beat all the spring mattresses going, as it does for summer, autumn and winter as well.—"Pick-Me-Up."

An "Infernal" Dinner.

A tiny girl of seven gave a dinner-party the other day, for which twelve covers were laid, and that number of small maidens sat down to dine. It was a real little girls' dinner, and the little hostess herself presided, sitting at the head of the table. She had been very anxious, in looking forward to it, to do everything as it should be done. "Mamma," she asked, "shall we say grace?" "No," said mamma; "it will be a very informal dinner, and I think you need not do that." That meant one ceremony the less to be gone through, and was a relief. But the little lady was anxious to have all her guests understand it. So, as they gathered about the table, she explained: "Mamma says that this is such an infernal dinner that we need not have grace to-day!"

NEW SCHOOL BUILDING

For Collegiate Institute Purposes and the Teaching of Domestic Science and Manual Training

At the meeting of the Board of Education on Monday night, Mr. James Stevenson, referring to the question of introducing the teaching of Domestic Science and Manual Training into our schools, remarked that he had misunderstood a resolution dealing with this question, which had been moved at the last regular meeting of the Board.

The chairman, Mr. W. H. Hill, asked Mr. Stevenson to take the chair while he introduced a motion. He said he believed the time was opportune for the consideration of a new Collegiate Institute. He pointed to other cities and towns where they had new and fine Collegiate Institutes. He said we were a progressive town, and why should we be behind these other towns which were not our equal in other respects. Peterborough must not get into a second place from an educational standpoint. He pointed out that the George street school could be done away with, and the new classes in Manual Training and Domestic Science would necessitate the securing of separate rooms. An Institute building at $40,000 would only mean $1,000 a year extra expense, and with the other rents cut off, the actual extra cost would be only about $450. They would be face to face with the necessity of erecting a new school soon. He proposed to move cautiously. They could deal with his motion at the September meeting of the Board, then discuss the resolution with the Council; let the people vote on a by-law, and the new building could be undertaken September 1st, 1903, when the lease of the George street school expired. He thought the people should be given an opportunity to say whether they wanted a new Institute or not. He did not think the Board was keeping pace with the educational progress that the Province was making. He then gave notice of the following resolution: explaining that he proposed that the building should be erected in 1904:

"That the Property Committee be instructed to inquire as to the cost of the erection of a suitable building for a Collegiate Institute, Domestic Science and Manual Training School, with a view to asking the Town Council to submit a by-law to the ratepayers to provide the money for the erection of such building." Carried.

GOVERNMENT GRANT.

A communication was read from Hon. Mr. Harcourt, Minister of Education, in regard to the introduction of Manual Training and Domestic Science in the schools. He said he could promise a grant of $1,000 a year for a few years.

He Knew His Own.

Carlyle, speaking of America, once said that the North cursed the negro and bade him be free, and the South blessed him and bade him be a slave. His theory gives point to a story told in the Arkansas "Thomas Cat."

One of the old-time Southern negroes went to Boston to make his fortune. After a week of walking up and down, he found himself penniless and no work in sight. Then he went from house to house.

"Ef yo' please, sah," he began, when his ring at the front door was answered, "can't you gib a p'or culled man wuk ter do, or sompin ter eat?"

And the polite answer invariably was, "No, mister; very sorry, but have nothing for you."

All who answered his ring addressed him as "Mr.," but shut their doors and hearts against him. Finally he rang the bell at a brown-stone front. A gentleman appeared, and the old man began, "Boss, I is starvin'. Can't yo' gimme some victuals?"

"You black, kinky-headed rascal!" exclaimed the gentleman. "How dare you ring the bell at my front door? Go round the back-yard way to the kitchen and the cook'll give you something, you black —"

But just there the old man fell on his knees, exclaiming, "Thank de Lawd, I foun' mah own white folks at las'! Thank de Lawd, I foun' 'em—I foun' 'em!"

Didn't Like Officers' Fare.

Anybody with any knowledge of nautical matters at all knows what an habitual growler "Jack" is. Never was he known to be satisfied with any possible condition of affairs, no matter what efforts might have been spent in pleasing him.

A good example of this is shown in a story told by the skipper of a large American sailing vessel now in port. On his last trip from San Francisco to this port he had with him some passengers; so, to prevent friction, he humored the seamen more than he otherwise would have done. On the second day out the crew all came aft and demanded to see the skipper.

Breaking the Ice.

Some society people, remarks Hal Berte in "Pick-Me-Up," are greatly perturbed over a problem that presents itself when two persons, of opposite sexes, who are strangers to each other, are introduced for the purpose of going in to dinner together. The vital question is which, under the circumstances, should speak first? Without posing as an authority on etiquette, I venture to suggest that the onus of speaking first naturally devolves upon the gentleman, because the lady is bound to ultimately get even by having the last word. Of course, if the gentleman really wants the lady to lead off, the best thing he can do is to accidentally tread on her dress. In which case she will probably say something commencing with the fourth letter of the alphabet. With this cue, profuse apologies can be tendered, and the rest is easy.

Wife—You haven't used any of those cigars I bought for you. Husband—No; I am keeping them for Tommy when he wants to learn to smoke.—Los Angeles "Times."

Mr. D. Speptic—My dear, I wish you would prepare something occasionally to tempt my appetite. His Wife—The idea! Why, you have not any appetite to tempt.—"Waverley Magazine."

The Times Letter Box

Letters from the People on Interesting and Timely Topics.

To the Editor of The Times:

Dear Sir,—It may be interesting to some of your readers—especially old sportsmen—to hear that wild pigeons, which for many years have been a thing of the past, have again made their appearance, several having been seen in this locality, and a fine specimen (a cock bird) was shot on Dominion Day by Mr. Jas Henley, caretaker of Mr. Robbins' farm, at Jack's Lake. I am, yours, etc.,

ALEX. BELL, M.D.

Apsley, July 2nd, 1902.

The Increasing Taxes

Sir,—Please explain through the columns of your widely read paper why taxes are so steadily increasing in town. Only a few years ago my taxes were $33, and now they are 160, and this without any increase in assessment. Surely, Mr. Editor, there must be a screw loose somewhere.

Our Council should see to it that a more rigid policy of economy is practised in future.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am, yours etc.,

A RATEPAER.

ABOUT VOLCANOES

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir,—1. How far is Mont Pelee from St. Pierre? From New Orleans? 2. Are the ashes vomited by volcanoes good for producing lye? 3. Is it probable that the Gulf Stream (if it is not a myth) is fed by a great stream of boiling water issuing somewhere from the internal regions of the earth? 4. Is the gas emitted by volcanoes anything like common gas, or will it be used for lighting purposes? 5. Is it probable that the whole firmament in which the solar system is located may become one mass of fiery flame? 6. How many volcanoes are there within the borders of the United States? Were the Falls of Niagara once at the mouth of the St. Lawrence?

S. R.

Ans.—1. About four miles; from New Orleans it is about 2,050 miles. 2. No. 3. No. 4. It is not illuminating gas. 5. We do not know. 6. We do not know of any complete list; there are many extinct volcanoes in the northwestern corner of the United States, and in Alaska; the last eruption was probably about twenty years ago, when Bogoslov was in eruption, and "New Bogoslov" was thrown up. These volcanoes are in the Aleutian Islands. 7. No; but they were at the head of Lake Ontario.

UNREQUITED

(A song asked for.)

When the stars are softly gleaming
Through the curtains of the night,
And the world lies sweetly dreaming
Neath the flood of silver light,
I, alone, dread night's returning—
Night that brings no rest to me—
Tortured by a heart that's burning
With a hopeless love for thee.

Chorus—
Then why do I love you, I wonder,
Why do I long for you so?
And why does fate keep us asunder,
Shall I, dear heart, ever know?
Ah, come to me love, whil I'm sleeping
Answer me then in a dream,
And tell me your heart's in my keeping,
Ah, tell me you're all that you seem.

Day and night has each its glory,
Neither is alone complete,
Dawn and evening tell the story
Of their union pure and sweet,
So should we thus be united,
Never more to grow apart,
If the love that once you plighted
Hath not died within your heart.

Review the Philippine War

Washington, July 9.—By proclamation the President declares the Philippine war ended. He proclaims a general pardon and amnesty to the Filipinos. He terminates military control of the islands, and declares them now under civil control.

The insurrection was begun in June, 1898.

Up to May 1st, 1902, the American loss in killed was:

Officers	134
Enlisted men...	3910
Total killed......	4044
Philippine dead (estimated)........	500,000
Cost of army to date, about	$170,000,000
Total cost of war, estimated	$520,000,000

Hearts That Are Diseased

will never be cured by the false, unnatural stimulation of liquor. First increase your vitality, build up the system, strengthen and purify the blood—then the heart will respond and grow strong.

Ferrozone is precisely what to take, it gives you an appetite and a digestion that will look after everything that is eaten. Ferrozone improves nutrition, makes rich, vitalising blood, and is positively the most powerful restorative and strengthener known to science; it improves the nerve tone, regulates the heart's action, makes the feeble strong and the sick well. Ferrozone will do you untold good, and costs only 50 cents, at druggists, or Ormond & Walsh's.

THE ASTONISHING ADMISSIONS OF GENERAL SIR REDVERS BULLER

Sir Redvers Now Confesses That He Did Advise Sir George White to Surrender at Ladysmith, and So Justifies All the Criticisms of His Conduct

New York, July 9.—The London correspondent of the New York Tribune cables:

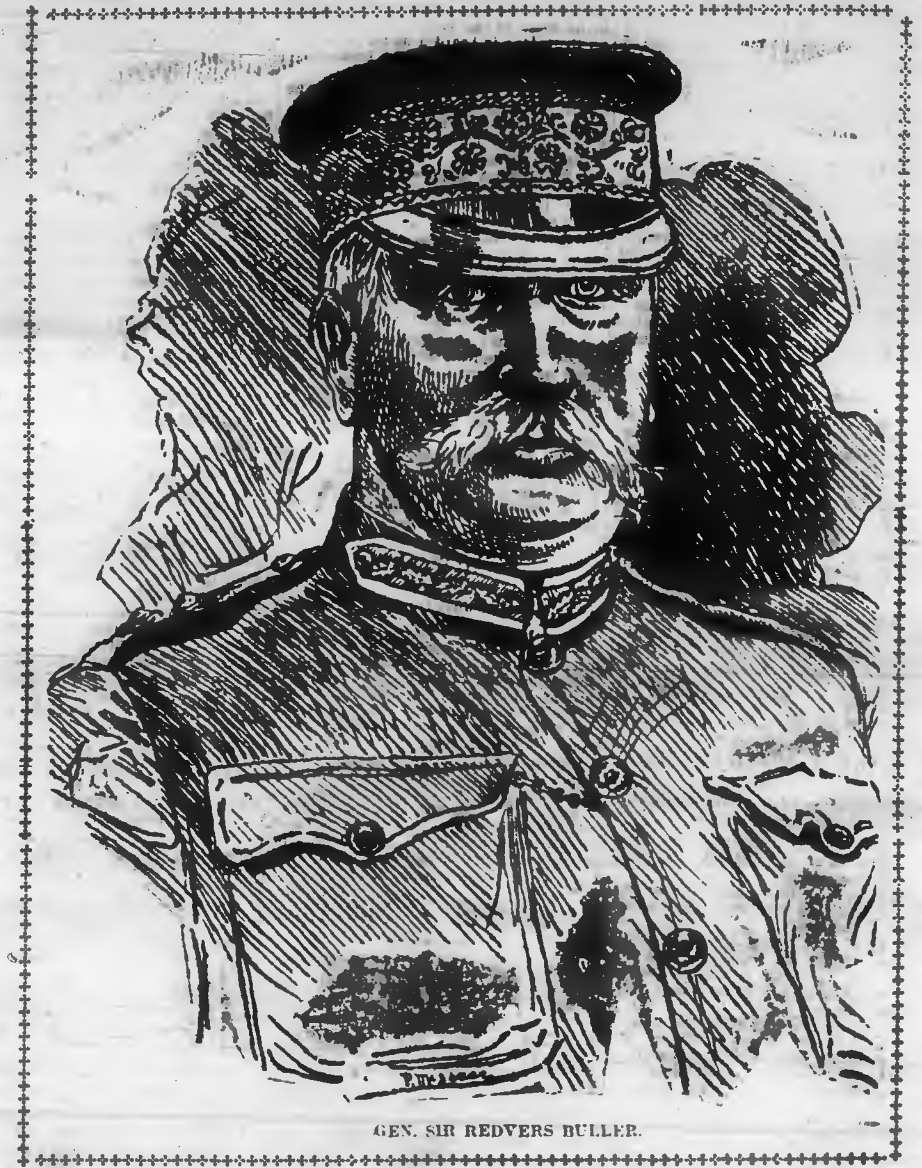
Sir Redvers Buller is condemned out of his own mouth. He has posed for many months as an injured person, declaring that the publication of the full text of his historic heliograph to Sir George White at Ladysmith would clear his military reputation. He has now forwarded copies of the despatch to the press. His attitude had for a long time led many persons of weak judgment to imagine that he must be cruelly maligned, since it was almost incredible that he should have had the impudence to act thus unless the full authentic text was incapable of the construction which had been placed upon it.

As a matter of fact the text of the message despatched was even worse than the nation had been led to suppose. It is a craven missive, merely directing Gen. White to hold out till he (Gen. Buller) "can take up a defensive position: then suggest you firing away as much ammunition as you can, and making best terms you can. I can remain here if you have alternative suggestion, but, unaided, I can't break in. I find my infantry can't fight more than ten miles from camp, and then only if water can be got."

The last passage in this extraordinary message, remarks the Daily Mail, is calculated to cover the noble reputation of the British soldier with undeserved ridicule.

WHAT "THE TIMES" SAID.

It is interesting now to recall what is said in the London Time's History of the war in South Africa" concerning this incident:



GEN. SIR REDVERS BULLER.

To know when to acknowledge defeat * * * is sometimes part of wise generalship. But there can be no such justification for the abandonment of the guns at Colenso. * * * Even supposing that the retention of the guns had doubled the casualties of the day, that loss should have been faced—not for the sake of mere prestige, but because at that moment guns were far more important than men. They were nearly half of Buller's field artillery; without them there could be no question of relieving Ladysmith. Weeks would elapse before new guns could reach Natal from England.

Yet the abandonment of the guns was not the worst:

Just as in the hour of battle he (General Buller) had failed the men whom he led, so now in the hour of trial he was to fail his country, which had entrusted the fortune of war into his hands. * * He utterly lost heart. Not only did he despair of doing anything himself, but he despaired for others. * * * On the morning of the 16th he telegraphed to Lord Lansdowne that the relief of Ladysmith was impossible, that Sir G. White would be compelled to lay down his arms, and that he proposed to entrench himself in a defensive position near Chieveley. Then on the same morning, without waiting to get the fullest information from Sir G. White as to the resources at his disposal, without consulting his senior officers he sent a heliographic message to White suggesting the surrender of Ladysmith.

GENERAL BULLER'S HELIOGRAM

The exact terms of that message are unknown, but the following, which differs considerably from previous versions, is given as its real purport. This is how it stands, but it will be seen that there is a break in it:

"As it appears certain that I cannot relieve Ladysmith for another month, and even then only by means of protracted siege operations * * * you will burn your ciphers, destroy your guns, fire away your ammunition, and make the best terms possible with the general of the besieging forces, after giving me time to fortify myself on the Tugela."

This terrible missive was at first taken by Sir G. White for a Boer forgery, it being supposed that the enemy had discovered our cipher.

HOW BALFOUR STOOD FIRM

At home General Buller's telegrams caused consternation, the more so as he had shortly before refused strong reinforcements:

The War Office overwhelmed by the successive tidings of disaster, seemed almost inclined to acquiesce in his conclusions. For once the much abused politicians showed themselves stronger men than the soldiers. Most of the Ministers had left town for Christmas. But Lord Lansdowne had stayed on at the War Office, and fortunately he had at his side, in Mr. Balfour, a colleague on whose firm support and courageous counsel he could rely at this critical moment. A message was immediately cabled to Sir R. Buller, directing him to persevere, or, if unwilling to do so, to hand over the Natal command to one of his subordinates and return home. * * * The contradictory messages sent home by Buller from before Colenso increased the uneasiness of the Government, an uneasiness quickened to instant decision by the news of his defeat and the clear evidence of his demoralization.

To fill to the brim the cup of mismanagement, General Buller is stated in the History to have informed Sir G. White that his attack on Colenso would not be made till the 17th, whereas it was actually delivered on the 15th, thus rendering co-operation on the part of the Ladysmith garrison impossible.

"Lost you money, miss?" enquired the conductor.

I could hardly answer. It might have been worse, for I might have been suspected of trying to "steal a ride" on false pretenses; but I did not think of that at the time, and my cup of despair seemed full to overflowing.

"My purse has been stolen," I said. "It was in my pocket when I came into the tram, I know."

Two or three people had got out since then. I had not noticed their departure, but I remembered, when my opposite neighbor reminded me of the fact, that among the persons lately gone was a woman who had sat next me. She had come in as I did, and, after sitting down, crowded against my side so that I attempted to move further away; had asked of the tram in general how soon we would reach a certain street—a street whose name I had not heard before. A man had informed her that, to pass the street in question, she must take another tram, whereupon, muttering something, she had risen and gone out.

Already the tram was half a mile away. All agreed that it was useless for me to try to do anything, except to report the affair at the police station. A nice old lady with a market basket paid my fare and called me "my dear," saying she hoped that there had not been much money in the purse; and my fellow-passengers soon forgot me in an animated discussion of other experiences with pickpockets, which seemed at once to make them all friends.

I arrived at Easel street at last, very miserable. Everything was now to be done over again, and I had parted from my possessions without having anything to show for them. I knew that when I told my story I should be reproached for carelessness, and I opened the door of the front room with reluctance.

"Sheila!" exclaimed a well-known voice, and Roger Cope sprang from a chair as I entered.

I started back with a faint cry of dismay; but, before I could carry out my quickly-formed design of running away, he had taken two strides across the room and caught me by both hands. My mother, busy with the preparations for our frugal noontide meal, looked on at the greeting with a knowing smile, and I was suddenly pricked with the conviction that Roger had been enlisting her as an ally.

"Do say you are glad to see me," he pleaded, in his charming voice.

Well groomed, perfectly dressed, with an orchid in his buttonhole, and, if anything, handsomer than ever, he was like a bird of Paradise alighting in a barnyard.

"I can't say it," I answered. "I am not glad. You said in your letter, which I only got this morning, that you would wait for word from me. I have written since to beg that you would not come."

"That's what I was afraid of," laughed Roger, quite boyishly. "I have a prophetic soul; you see, I really couldn't stay away any longer."

"Jenny, I'm surprised at you, bein' so rude as to tell the gentleman you don't want him," scolded my mother. "If 'twas one of the others, now; but you, brought up as you've been! Why, Fan and Totsey would know better."

My mother brought forward a hideous vase freshly filled with exquisite flowers.

"See what the gentleman's brought you," she reproachfully remarked. "Well, you might at least have the grace to thank him."

"That's not necessary from her to me, Mrs. Newlyn," said Roger. "She knows very well that everything I have is hers, if only she will take it." He turned to me with an imploring look. "Sheila, Mrs. Newlyn has been exceedingly kind while I have been waiting and hoping for you to come in. But I am interrupting her, I know. Won't you come out and walk for a little while, so that we may quietly talk over past and future?"

"I would rather not," I said. "For—your letter made me think you had the same things to say that I have already answered. There's nothing more to add."

"Then I must speak to you here!" exclaimed Roger. "Your mother knows. It was right that I should tell her. And—she's just given me reason to hope that she'll stand my friend. O Sheila, do be good to me! I swear you shall never regret it."

"I don't love you, Roger. I never shall love you," I said, firmly. "And so we could not be happy together. I meant what I told you before, and I mean it just as much—even more, if possible—now. If my life lay near yours we might be agreeable acquaintances at most. As it is, we can only be—strangers."

His handsome face hardened, and pressing his lips together he took up the immaculate hat which stood among the cracked dishes and cooking utensils on the table. My mother moved between him and the door.

"Oh, don't go, sir! Don't take her at her word!" she ejaculated. "Girls will be girls. She'll be sorry enough by and by, I promise you."

"I wish I could think so," sighed Roger, looking like a persecuted angel. "But I must go. Sheila doesn't want me here."

"It's my house, not hers!" cried my mother, sharply.

"You are good to me. But I didn't come to make her unhappy. I wish for her happiness more than anything else in the world. I'll go now, though I leave my heart behind, as she knows well. Yet I can't give up hope—not quite—till she is the wife of another man."

With this for an "exit" speech he was gone, dramatic to the end—the sympathetic hero of the scene in which I played the female villain.

As the door closed upon the handsome figure my mother turned upon me. "You must be mad!" she shrieked. "Do you know what you're about, girl? Do you know what you've just done?"

"The only thing I could do," I answered. But I was almost frightened

The Regimental Inspection

Col. Edwards is to be complimented on the showing made by his regiment last evening. Each company as it lined up before the inspection officer, Col. Montazambert, of whom there is no better, certainly did itself credit. While the attendance was not up to the mark—which is accounted for by the several changes in the date for inspection—each company as it lined up, was up-to date and every man did his duty. Corp. Fitzsimmons, of B. Co., was congratulated by all hands on his soldierly appearance. The Regimental inspection will take place this evening, and it is expected that there will be a large turnout of citizens to witness the event which will be especially interesting. Both bands will be out.

A TRAGEDY AT KEENE.

THE SAD SUICIDE OF MISS MAGGIE ENGLISH

The Body Found Yesterday Morning and Interred in the Keene Cemetery—No Inquest

Yesterday morning the body of Miss Maggie English, of Keene, was found floating in the Keene River, by James Dickson, a fisherman, who was trawling in the stream.

The deceased was a neice of Mr. Robert English, general merchant, of Keene, where she resided with her uncle and grandmother. It appears on Saturday evening last she had been calling upon a friend and at about ten o'clock she returned home in company with a young man with whm she was said to be keeping company. He parted from her on the verandah of her residence at about 10.30 and observed nothing unusual in the young lady's demeanour.

This was the last seen of her alive. There was not the slightest outward evidence that she entertained any intention of ending her life. There is no doubt of the manner of her death, as the bridge is boarded up for some distance and she could not have accidentally fallen into the water.

The deceased was an orphan and was about 24 years of age.

There is much sympathy for Mr. English and the other relatives over the distressing affair.

It was decided that no inquest was necessary, and the remains were accordingly interred in the Keene cemetery yesterday.

ANOTHER STRIKE

Workmen on the New Elevator for Cereal Company Quit Work

About 100 men went out on a strike yesterday morning, on account of the refusal of the American Cereal Works to pay them 25 cents an hour. The men are those connected with the building of the elevator and have been receiving 17 cents per hour.

There are still about 30 men at work and an officer of the Company told The Times that they would have little difficulty in securing men to take the places of the strikers.

A BAD WASHOUT

The Storm of Monday Caused a Great Deal of Loss

The washout on the C.P.R. at Pontypool, on Monday, was a rather serious affair. One hundred feet of track was completely undermined, but the large force of section men mustered at the point had the track ready for the passage of trains some time on Tuesday.

One hundred passengers on the Ottawa express bund for Toronto picknicked on the cars while the trains were made.

Trainmen from the Midland Division of the G.T.R. report that the crops east along the line were all levelled by the fierce rainstrms of Saturday night.

CRULING.

A Montreal Star cable says: A largely attended and representative meeting in connection with the proposed visit of a Scottish Curling team to Canada, was held in the Royal Hotel, Edinburgh. The Secretary of the Committee, Mr. Davidson Smith, C.A. said the Canadian clubs had passed a resolution desiring a visit of Scottish curlers. Mr. Smith said he had written a letter to noblemen and gentlemen interested in Canada asking for their patronage and support and to gentlemen of influence in the curling world. Generally speaking the project had been favorably received. Letters had been received from Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. Jos. Chamberlain, who said he was deeply interested in the matter, Lord Mount Stephen, who promised a subscription of $50, Lord Strathcona, Lord Elgin and Lord Balfour, of Burleigh. Forty curlers had volunteered to go. They received from the Canadian branches offers of hospitality and the Canadians were prepared to waft on the Canadian Pacific Railway authorities to see if the visiting team could obtain free transit from place to place. It was estimated that the tour would take 28 days, with 16 days extra for the sea voyage.

CHINA AND THE POWERS MORE SERIOUS TROUBLE

The Asiatic Power Appeals to the United States for Aid

And Demand the Restoration of Tientsin—Military Officials at Bottom of the Troubles

Special to The Times.

Washington, July 11.—Minister Wu called at the State Department this morning and had a conference with Secretary Hay with regard to the new complications in China over the proposed restoration of Tientsin. A cablegram received yesterday by Minister Wu, and delivered by him to Secretary Hay today, makes it appear that the military officials of the foreign Powers are at the bottom of the fresh difficulty and not the foreign representatives. The cablegram which is from Viceroy Yuan Shih-Kai, of Chili, as as follows:

Your cablegram of July 7 is received with much gratification. In the final protocol signed by the different Powers, there is no stipulation that a supplementary convention will be made in regard to the restoration of Tientsin. But the foreign military officers at Tientsin have arbitrarily given rise to fresh complications and drawn many articles limiting to 300 the number of Chinese guards to be stationed at Tientsin within the limits of thirty kilometres. Since the brigands in the vicinity of Tientsin, on account of the looting of the arsenals in 1900, are generally well armed, it would be impossible for such a small force to suppress and punish brigandage, much less can it police the city and vicinity. The military officers appear to be willing to restore the city, but in reality they wish to delay; there is no reason to fear that their action is not by any means for the purpose good. The foreign Ministers at Pekin don't approve their action and they have repeatedly remonstrated with them; but the military officers have not been willing to come to an agreement. The Ministers and the military officers each hold to their own opinions, which greatly impede the progress of our affairs. I request you to ask the Government of the United States to consult with other Governments so that instructions may be sent to the different military officers direct, ordering them to accede to the suggestions of the foreign Ministers to the end that the restoration may not be further delayed.

OAKWOOD BOY DROWNED

Melancholy Fate of Young Cecil Rennie who was Drowned

Special to The Times.

Oakwood, July 10.—A sad drowning accident took place at Oakwood, the victim being Cecil Rennie, the third son of Mr. G. B. Rennie, principal of The Oakwood school.

The young lad, with several companions, was bathing at the creek east of the village. On account of the recent heavy rains the water was very high; and it is supposed that the unfortunate lad got beyond his depth and was carried away by the swift current. The body was found about seven o'clock this morning, a considerable distance from where the accident occurred.

Cecil was 13 years old and was a general favorite among his friends. Mr. and Mrs. Rennie will have they sympathy of the entire community in their sudden bereavement.

The sad accident has cast a gloom over Oakwood neighborhood, and the garden party under the auspices of the Methodist church, which was to have been held in that village last night, has been postponed indefinitely.

PASTOR BURT ON TRIAL

Girl's Story of Clergyman Startling Proposition

Threatened Suicide, She Says, Unless She Would Accompany Him to Africa—Case May Go to Conference

Special to The Times.

Lancaster, Pa., July 10.—An investigation into the charge that Rev. O. C. Burt, pastor of the Quarryville Methodist Episcopal church, has planned to desert his family and elope with Miss Annie Shenk, one of the parishioners, is being held in St. Paul's church, this city. The investigating committee consists of Presiding Elder A. G. Kynett, Revs. J. B. J. McConnell, William Jones, F. G. Cotson, W. H. Pickop and A. M Vivan of Philadelphia; Dr. J. W. Fayres, of Chester, and C. W. Milam, of Magietta.

Rev. W. H. Shaffer, of Chester, is counsel for the church, and Rev. S. W. Schreid of Philadelphia, is assisting him in the prosecution. Rev. E. H. Hoffman of Philadelphia, represents Mr. Burt. The committee acts in the capacity of a Grand Jury, and its function is limited to a suspension of Burt from all pastoral duties until Conference shall meet, when he will be tried, if this committee suspends him.

Witnesses from Philadelphia today furnished evidence reflecting upon Mr. Burt's character prior to his arrival at Quarryville. The principal charge under investigation involves Burt's relations with Miss Shenk. She was the star witness, and was corroborated in much of her testimony by her parents. The mother is convinced that the girl was under hypnotic influence, a power the minister claims he can exercise. He gained favor through his efforts for her conversion, and afterwards almost monopolized her entire time in church work. She was made a leader in prayer meeting and did much missionary work in Quarryville, and was a frequent visitor to the pastor's study for the purpose of preparing herself for the work in his congregation. Finally he confessed his love for her, and she admitted being infatuated with him. She regarded Burt as a saint, and could repeat his sermons and prayers verbatim, and soon lost interest in all with which he was not connected. Miss Shenk said she believed Burt when he told her he was not legally married, and sympathized with him when he said he was living under a terrible condemnation for not renouncing the woman he acknowledged as his wife. His eyes were only opened to his perfidity when she became convinced that he was legally married, and she then confessed to her parents, telling them Burt had persuaded her that the Lord had summoned her to be a missionary in Africa. He had exhibited a revolver, with the threat that if she refused to accompany him to Africa he would commit suicide. The parents were misled by the belief that she had surrendered all to the church, until they learned that the minister and their daughter were preparing to elope. The sequel of that discovery was the father's thrashing of the preacher and the legal proceedings which followed.

Mrs. Shenk states that Burt's influence over his wife was as remarkable as that over her daughter, for when the pair were planning to elope the wife was compelled by him to assist in the preparations. The committee this evening had Burt on the stand.

CHOLERIA SPREADS AT PEKIN

Two Hundred Victims a Day Now in the Chinese Capital

Special to The Times.

Pekin, July 11.—The epidemic of cholera is on the increase. Its extent among the natives cannot be reckoned. About 200 corpses are carried out of the two or three east city gates every day. The epidemic has abated at Tientsin.

The Ministers met today to consider the issue of fractional currency bonds for the payment of the indemnity. No conclusion was reached. Instructions which have been received from several Governments in regard to the American and English proposals for the payment, of the indemnity in silver indicate that there is little prospect of an agreement on this point.

TWO DOLLARS FOR A SHAVE

An Illustration of the Boycott in the Schuylkill Valley

Special to The Times.

Pottsville, Pa., July 11.—At some of the towns in the Schuylkill region a boycott of non-union men is so rigid that it costs $2 for a non-union man to get a shave and 25 cents to get a glass of beer. The coal companies have begun wholesale arrests of strike leaders who are concerned in this boycotting. Coxe Brothers to-day had four strikers from Sheppton and Oneida arraigned before Justice Flater charged with conspiracy and boycotting. These men have made such effective arrangements with the merchants of Oneida that none of the non-unionists were able to buy food. The accused men were all held under heavy bail.

LOST SAVINGS OF A LIFETIME

Silas Toole, an Innocent Whitchurch Farmer, Handed Out $5,000 to Two Swindlers

The old game of fooling the innocent was perpetrated once more in Whitchurch Township last week, when Mr. Silas Toole, a farmer, was swindled out of $5,000 his savings of a lifetime. Mr. Toole is well advanced in years and his loss is disastrous.

Two audacious rogues drove to Toole's farm, taking with them a satchel, a couple of smooth tongues, and a high-sounding story. They told Mr. Toole that they were nephews of Hon. William Mulock, and wished to purchase some farm property in the vicinity of Newmarket. They were willing to pay a good price for a desirable farm, and, as Mr. Toole's was, in their opinion, one of the best in the township, they were prepared to give him $10,000 for a clear title. The offer was a good one, and Mr. Toole readily accepted it. But the men seemed eager to bind the bargain, and Mr. Toole seemed equally eager. They had no present means of having the papers drawn up and signed, so the men proposed that they should pay over the money to prevent either party to the agreement from breaking the bargain, and then return later with the papers to be duly signed, sealed and delivered. They agreed to count out $10,000 into the satchel, to give Mr. Toole the satchel, but wished to keep the key themselves until the signing of the papers. This seemed a generous offer and the farmer accepted it. He was sure that he saw the men count out the $10,000 and place it in the satchel. Then they drove away, and both parties were well pleased.

But within a few hours the men returned and told Mr. Toole that they had been negotiating with the owner of the adjoining farm, Joshua Wilson, and had agreed to pay him $5,000. Their desire, they assured Mr. Toole, was to secure both farms, and make of them one large estate. It seemed a very likely thing, but they were in a rather tight fox, having brought only $10,000 with them and they had disposed of all of it in the first purchase. They finally proposed to Mr. Toole that he lend them $5,000 of his own money, as they did not care to open the satchel and thereby break the first bargain and confuse the two deals. They would pay the money back to Mr. Toole when they should return to make the final settlement, and meantime they wished to strike while the iron was hot in Mr. Wilson's case.

Mr. Toole agreed to let them have the money, and went to his bank at Newmarket and drew out the required sum. He handed it to the men, and has not since then seen them. He went home, and it was not long before he learned that Mr. Wilson had received no offer whatever for his farm. In view of that he forced the satchel open, and to his great dismay found nothing but pebbles and a note saying, "When you open this we will be far away."

Mr. Toole was so much disconcerted when he realized the game that had been played that for days he said nothing about it to the authorities. On Monday last, however, he was threatened with nervous collapse, so on Tuesday he came in to Toronto and reported the occurrence to Judge McDugall, who referred him to Inspector Stark. He gave a description of the men, but the inspector has up to the present withheld it. High Constable Ramsden has since been investigating the case, but as yet no trace of the swindlers has been found.

A DISASTROUS FIRE CAUSES LOSS OF LIFE

Five Firemen Crushed to Death Beneath the Walls of a Burning Building

Special to The Times.

Toronto, July, 10.—At 6 o'clock this morning the most disastrous fire so far as loss of human life is concerned, which has occurred in many years in the city broke out in the huge wholesale flour and storage establishment of P. McIntosh & Son, at the southwest corner of Front and George streets. The origin of the fire is a complete mystery but those who noticed the condition of affairs at a quarter past six o'clock when the first alarm was sent in to the fireman, state that the whole building then seemed to be ablaze and that smoke was oozing out of every window crack. At any rate, in half an hour there was a tremendous spread of fire and destruction, the big eastern wall fell suddenly and the lives of three of the firemen were snuffed out in an instant. The western wall of the building also crumbled, and two more firemen disappeared. The northerly wind carried a shower of sparks and fire brands across the railway tracks, fully 500 feet, to the big icehouse of the Knickerbocker Ice Company, and destroyed it. The flames also leaped eagerly across the way to the east side of George street, and Gadsby & McCann's wholesale hay and straw building went up in smoke. Mrs. Mitchell's boarding house to the south was gutted and a little wooden cottage to the North of Gadsby & McCann's was badly singed.

The dead are as follows:

David See, Lombard street station, 32 years of age. Single. Lived with his parents at 174 Duke street. Joined brigade November 8, 189.

William Harry Clark, Lombard street station, 27 years of age. Married. Residence 220 DeGrassi street. Joined brigade Nov. 11, 1899.

Adam Kerr, Lombard street station, 28 years of age. Single. Boarded at McFarlan's hotel, 195 Jarvis street. Joined brigade October 1, 1900.

F. G. Russell, Yonge street station, 32 years of age. Married. Residence, 341 Lippincott street. Joined brigade July 23, 1895.

W. O. Collard, Ross avenue station, 38 years of age. Single. Residence 35 Salisbury avenue. Joined brigade June 1 1891.

The injured are —

The Cause Not Known

The cause of the fire is unknown. No coherent statement could be gotten. Incendiarism is the only plausible explanation.

Before Chief Thompson had come up the Lombard street brigade were playing several streams on the south east corner of the building. It was here that See, Clark, and Kerr, three of the men killed, had placed themselves. They were there of their own violition, Chief Thompson not having directed their movements. At 6.50 the order was passed to them to move further up George street, when, without a moment's warning, the wall on which they had been playing a stream of water blew out with a puff, and, collapsing, buried the three brave fellows in the ruins.

Chief Thompson detached a detail of men to clear away the debris and recover the bodies. See and Clark were a few minutes later brought out, but it was 8 o'clock before the remains of Kerr were borne on the shoulders of his fellows to the morgue.

REGIMENTAL INSPECTION

The 57th Regiment Peterborough Rangers Attack and Capture Armour's Hill

The 57th Regiment turned out in pretty nearly full strength last night when they were inspected in field movements by Lieut-Col C. E. Montizambert, D.O.C., of Kingston. The regiment left the drill shed at 7.15 o'clock, and, headed by both bands, marched over to Ashburnham, where they were to attack Armour's Hill. The hill was defended by the two local sections of the Durham Field Battery with two guns, under the command of Lieut W. C. Ackerman. The attacking force was divided into three sections. No. 1 and 2 companies approaching from Elizabeth street, No 6, from the North, and Nos. 3 and 4 making a frontal attack, while No. 5 company served on the defence. The attack proved successful, and the hill was captured, but not until the defending party's ammunition was expended. The force from Elizabeth street made a splendid attack, and the Battery's work was brilliant. The frontal attack was also creditable, but No. 6 company coming on from the north, through some blunder, got within the firing of one of the guns, and would certainly been annihilated had they been in real action. Some of the defence also managed to take a stand in front of their own guns, which at the time were playing vigorously. On their return the Regiment reached Central Park at 9.15, when muster parade was held, and the regiment marched past the inspecting Colonel. Lieut-Col. Montizambert expressed himself as highly satisfied with the inspection on the whole, and complimented both the Durham Field Battery and the 57th on their work.

REGIMENTAL NOTES

Bandmaster Gliddon was called to the front by the inspecting officer and highly complimented on the fine playing of his band.

Drum Major Peters of the Regimental band was an especial favorite with the citizens lining the route of march.

Pte Dave Sargison of B Co., who was injured at the Cordage works, and is at present being carefully looked after by the kind and obliging nurses of St Joseph's Hospital, was visited by several of the members of the regiment while the remainder were capturing Armour's Hill.

CASTRO TO LEAD TROOPS

President to Take Personal Command Against Revolutionists

Special to The Times.

Washington, July 11.—The United States minister cables from Caracas to-day that he is informed by the Venezuelan government that President Castro will take command of the government troops in person, and lead them against the revolutionists, leaving V. P. Gomez as the executive head in Caracas.

BRAVE JOSHUA SANDFORD

Is Suffering a Great Deal—Only a Temporary Set Back

Paris, July 11.—Mr. Joshua Sandford is suffering from a relapse. The excitement and intense suffering while in the well are beginning to tell on his mind. His sleep is broken by delirious dreams, when he imagines the horrors of the well all over again.

In addition an abscess threatens. A day or so ago a consultation of doctors took place, at which Dr. Stanley, of Brantford, was in attendance.

To-day when spoken to by a Times reporter, Dr. Stanley said Sanford's chances of recovery were exceedingly good. The only trouble at present, to be feared was a threatened abscess which was deeply seated in his right shoulder. This might delay the patient's recovering a week or two days. Otherwise his condition was favorable.

AGUINALDO COMING

Former Leader of Philippine Insurgents to Lecture

New York, July 11.—According to announcements made here, says a Boston despatch to the World, Aguinaldo is coming to the United States, and his departure from Manilla for San Francisco is expected at any time.

He will come direct to Boston, it is said, to join his former secretary, Sixto Lopez, and will then start on a tour, delivering a series of lectures on the conditions of the islands and making a plea for the independence of his countrymen.

Englishman Barely Escapes Severer Treatment in East Boston

Special to The Times.

Boston, July 11.—An American flag flying in front of an East Boston shop was torn down by a party of three stewards from the steamer Saxonia, and later one of the trio, said to be Stewart Roberts, an Englishman, tore the flag into pieces and flung the fragments into the face of an American citizen.

A hundred men who were drinking or lounging in an East Boston hotel immediately set upon the Englishman, drove him downstairs from the second story room where the insult to the flag was given, forced him into the street and gave him a severe pounding.

It was with difficulty that the Englishman escaped severer treatment, and he finally sought refuge on the Saxonia, bleeding and bruised.

The Englishman had been drinking. Stewart Roberts has been on the sick list of the Saxonia since.

SUMMER BABIES

Summer babies should be brought up on health-giving Lactated Food which is strongly recommended by our best physicians. Lactated Food is the only safe and pure food for the little ones in the hot weather. It is a preventive of cholera infantum, dysentery and diarrhoea. Makes puny and weak babies strong and happy. Ask your druggist for Lactated Food; take no other.

CASTRO WILL LEAD

President Castro of Venezuela, goes forth to battle and will lead his army against the revolutionists. He is confident as to the result, for he says in his proclamation on the eve of marching to meet the revolutionists: "Anarchy has set its claws into the entrails of the country, but I shall strangle it with my energy." A decisive battle is expected at any time. It is estimated that Castro has 3000 troops in and about Caracas, and the insurgent army, under the chieftian named Matos, an earnest patriot, though unskilled in military matters numbers in scattered bands, nearly, if not quite 10,000 men.

Commander McLean, of the United States cruiser, Cincinnati, which, with the cruiser Topeka, is at Laguayra, reported at the close of last week that Gen. Matos, with 800 well armed soldiers was at Urica, and that another army of 3000 revolutionists was in the State of Bermudez. Besides, there are various bands of revolutionists in the vicinity of Caracas.

The revolutionary army contains some of the best fighters in Venezuela, while the chieftain, Matos, is essentially a civilian. He had some military experience during the administration of Guzman Blanco. He is a good organizer and his energy and spirit have had the best effects upon his followers. He has two able lieutenants in Generals Perez and Ducharne, who command the two divisions of his army. His corps commanders are also experienced soldiers.

General Castro is not lacking in boldness. Notwithstanding his bombastic speech and manner he is a man of energy and force. But his army is spiritless and without an animating cause. Castro has seen several campaigns in which he served with credit. He wrested the Presidency from Andrade in 1899 after a series of victories.

The result of this approaching battle means a good deal for Venezuela. It means freedom from oppression and the right of the people under a republican form of government to make their own laws and enjoy self-government untrammeled by coercive edicts. The outcome of the pending battle will be watched with great interest by the people of the United States, who sympathize with Matos and his citizen followers.

At the police court, Saturday, George Hubbart, of Toronto, aged 18, contradicted his wife, who said he had given her only 50 cents since they were married, a year ago, claiming that he had given her a whole dollar. We don't know what the magistrate will do with George, but suggest that his mother be called to spank him and put him to bed without his supper.

EIGHTY FIVE THOUSAND BOERS

The New York Tribune has been studying the figures of the Boer war, so far as they are available, and comes to the conclusion that the strength of the Boers was very much underestimated during the time the war was in progress. The Tribune—and we think it is not nearly high enough—says:

We have now, however, definite data for calculating the numerical strength of the Boers. From April 1900, to the end of the war, almost exactly 50,000 were taken prisoners by the British. In September, 1900, some 2,000 surrendered to the Portuguese. Since the conclusion of peace more than 16,000 have surrendered. Here we have a total of 68,000, or considerably more than the highest estimate ever before made. But, of course, these are not all. Since April, 1901, Lord Kitchener reported 3,200 Boers killed in battle. Before that date we have no definite reports of their killed. The bulk of the heavy fighting in the war was, however, before that date, and, judging from the number known to have been killed in some engagements, and from the number of British killed, it seems not unreasonable to estimate the number of fatalities at 10,000. These figures swell the grand total to more than 80,000. If, finally, we add the number of those who have escaped from the country, or who are avoiding observation in Cape Colony, we may not extravagantly assume that the numerical strength of the Boers in the war was not less than 85,000.

NORTH MONAGHAN.

The Council of the Township of Monaghan met in the Town Hall on Monday, July 7th, 1902, at 2 o'clock p.m.

There were present the Reeve and Councillors Madill, Smith and Dobbin.

The minutes of the last two meetings were read and confirmed.

Communications were received and read from the County Clerk of Peterborough County, stating the total equalized value of North Monaghan for county purposes was $577,166.—Received.

From the Clerk of Cavan, stating that Cavan Council considered the boundary road between North Monaghan and Cavan on the 11th concession of North Monaghan in a dangerous condition, also that Cavan Council would not contribute one cent towards the repair of the road through lot 1, on 11th concession, North Monaghan. Received.

From W. H. Bradburn, the Township Treasurer, stating the bank overdraft to date was $411.99.—Received.

Gravel certificates were fyled as follows: 95 yards from J. Madill's pit, for Road Division No. 3; 140 yards from S. G. Bennett's pit for Road Division No. 3; — yards from John Patton's pit for Road Division No. 1. These were passed and ordered to be paid.

Mr. J. Smith, of the committee which met the committee of Cavan Council re repairs to Boundary Road, reported at length as to the nature and cost of the work undertaken jointly with Cavan. The report showed expenditures as follows: John McIntosh, for 40 yards gravelling at 50 cents a yard, $20; and removing stone from road, $8; total, $28; J. Crow, 33 yards gravelling at 55 cents a yard, $18.15; W. Jackson, 41 yards gravelling at 55 cents a yard, $22.25; D. Trew, repairing watering trough at Springville, $18; a grand total of $86.72.

It was moved by Messrs. Madill and Dobbin, that the Reeve and Councillor Smith be and are hereby appointed a committee to take the necessary legal steps to have the valuations of the municipalities for county purposes equalized by the County Judge.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Dobbin and Madill that the report as read regarding the work done on Cavan boundary be accepted and fyled as R. No. 202; also that orders be issued for one-half the amounts as therein stated, such being N. Monaghan's share of said expenditure.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Madill and Smith, that whereas the Township of Cavan is most benefitted by the side road through lot 1 on 11th concession of N. Monaghan, and having refused to contribute anything towards its repair or maintenance, be it resolved therefore that the clerk be authorized to undertake the necessary preparation of a by-law and lawful publication of the same for the purpose of closing the said road.—Carried.

By-law No. 411 to authorize the reeve and treasurer to borrow money to meet the current expenditures of the municipality until the taxes can be collected, was then introduced, read and finally passed.

The final passing of by-law No. 410 referred to this meeting, was deferred until a future meeting.

Council then adjourned until the second Monday in August.

COPPER AT THREE AND HALF CENTS A POUND

George A. Treadwell Mining Company

27 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK. JEROME, ARIZONA.

Capital - - - - $3,000,000.

VALUE OF SHARES $10.

In a suit recently tried in the New York courts it was proved from the books of the United Verde Copper Company and the sworn testimony of the bookkeepers that the cost to that company of producing copper was only three and a half cents a pound, not counting the gold and silver values, which—allowed for—reduced the cost to a still lower figure.

Nowhere outside the Verde Copper Belt in Yavapai County, Arizona, is copper produced in quantities for less than twice this cost.

The United Verde has about two hundred acres on the north end of the Belt and the George A. Treadwell Company has several times as much in the central and southern parts of the Belt. The conditions along the whole Belt are entirely similar. We already have three mines developed—the Cliff, Brookshire and Iron Queen—one of which, the Cliff, seems to be larger and better than the United Verde, and the other two at least approach it in magnitude and value, while we have several others, including Badger, Pastime, Green Monster and Spoke and Stonewall, which, though less developed, are equally promising.

Professor Treadwell believes we have at least half a dozen United Verdes within the broad and extensive limits of our holdings.

As soon as our smelter plant which is now in process of erection, is completed, we can certainly produce copper as cheap as our rich neighbor on the north.

The United Verde for several years has produced one-tenth the copper of the world. When our plants are fully installed we expect the Verde Belt to produce one-half the copper of the world, and the George A. Treadwell Mining Company will be prepared to do more than its full share.

Before investing in copper in unproved localities, consider the stock of the George A. Treadwell Mining Company, named after the great pioneer and explorer of the Verde Belt and owning the largest and best aggregation of properties on it.

The price of the stock is $11 a share. Make checks payable to The order of the company and send them to 27 William Street New York

The Poultry Yard.

An English poultry expert says—Both in the States and in France the system of feeding poultry generally followed is the exact opposite to our own, the fowls getting soft food at night and corn in the morning. The poultry-keeper may well ask which is right, and the answer apparently is that there is very little difference in the result. An experiment recently tried in America, two lots of fowls getting just the same treatment, but one having soft food in the morning and corn at night, and the other the opposite, resulted in the fowls getting soft food in the morning laying slightly better than the others in winter. This is what one might expect. To set against this, however, was the fact that the fowls getting soft food at night voided double the amount of manure. The reason of this, of course, is that soft food is more quickly digested, but in those poultry houses where the droppings from the fowlhouses are systematically collected and utilized, there is a distinct value in feeding soft food at night, in preference to the morning. There is far less trouble to the feeder when corn is given in the morning, and it really seems as though the value of soft food for breakfast has been over-estimated.

Sulphur for Fowls and Swine.

When fowls are attacked with cholera I find that a little sulphur given in the food will check it. One tablespoonful mixed with the morning's food for thirty fowls and given once a month is sufficient when they are in health. When much sulphur is fed, with exposure to a cold and damp atmosphere, it will cause stiffness in the joints. Sulphur put in the dust bath with ashes is a preventive against lice. A little sprinkled in the nests and under setting hens vouts these pests.

It is also good to give swine in case of cholera or sickness followed with vomiting caused from overfeeding. It regulates the stomach and liver without further trouble. I have given two teaspoonfuls twice a day in severe cases in sweet milk or sprinkled on some sliced vegetables.—Emma L. Hill, Damascus, N.Y.

To Make Hens Lay.

Many people complain that they cannot get their hens to lay in winter. One very strong complaint comes to us from one of our subscribers. To aid such we give the experience of one who resides in the cold climate of South Dakota.

Many farmers fail to get any eggs during the winter months, and, from the experience of others more successful, it must be concluded that they either do not care about winter eggs, or that they neglect to so manage and feeds the fowls as to induce them to lay. An interesting experiment was made with two lots of pullets, showing influence of feed and care on the production of eggs in winter, by Rose Seelye-Miller, in the cold climate of South Dakota. The trial was reported in a western journal as follows:—

Two pens of pullets were placed in conditions as nearly equal as possible. One pen was designed for breeding, and it was desired that they should not lay until toward spring. The other pen, containing 18 hens, was designed to produce eggs during the winter, and the eggs were not intended at all for hatching.

The experiment begun in December. Let it be remembered that the care, temperature and all other things were equal, save the food, and that the pen designed for late laying contained two less fowls.

During December the early layers produced five and a quarter dozen eggs, and the other pen not an egg. In January, the early layers produced ten dozen and three eggs; the late layers seven eggs. In February the early layers produced nine dozen eggs, and the other pen one dozen. In March the early layers produced fifteen dozen eggs, and the late layers three and a half dozen. In April came the change; the early layers laid ten dozen and nine eggs, and the late layers fifteen dozen and four eggs. From this time the breeders were kept laying, and produced in May 28 eggs, the early layers 143 eggs. This shows conclusively that egg-producing may be governed in a great measure. The feeding was very simple, and the early laying fowls were fed as follows:—In the morning, boiled lean meat, chopped, with scraps from the table, and during the day all the wheat screenings they would eat, with corn twice a week. They were, of course, watered twice daily, and had some milk to drink.

The pen not intended for laying were fed on poor wheat screenings, with corn. These fowls grew and waxed fat, until they seemed too fat, and no doubt were, for laying. As spring came on the food was changed, and as it was the natural time for laying, too, they produced eggs in abundance.

The ordinary poultry raiser feeds too much corn and wheat. Hens are fed liberally twice a day and are fed on a steady diet of one or two things, either corn or wheat, and both fattening. Hence our hens do not pay, and poultry raising is a snare and a delusion to the one who is not wideawake and up to date in caring for the fowls.

Meat is known to be a great egg-producer, and there is now upon the market a feed prepared from refuse which makes an ideal food for fowls. Bones ground and plenty of milk are also very good in egg production.

Cleanliness and warmth are absolutely essential. A hen with a frozen comb might about as well be killed, unless she is a valuable one, whose eggs will make good hatching in the spring.

We feed our cattle for beef, and our hogs for lean or fat; we feed cows for milk or butter. Then why not discriminate in feeding our poultry too?

If thought were used more we should find our purses growing fat. Lean hens and hogs may be desirable, but a fat pocketbook never fails of appreciation, and the need of strenuous labor is decreasing.—The Country Gentleman.

London, July 9.—Speaking at different banquets in London last night the colonial Premiers now assembled here congratulated the Empire and Sir John Gordon Sprigg, Prime Minister of Cape Colony on the victory for constitutional government gained in that colony by the decision of the Imperial Government against the proposal to suspend the Cape constitution. The Premiers also referred with great regret to the accident to Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the Colonial Secretary.

Mr. Edmund Barton, Prime Minister of the Australian Federation, said he felt sure that every self-governing portion of the Empire had been in sympathy with Sir John Gordon Sprigg who had fought so strenuously against the suspension of the Cape constitution as otherwise the colonies could not have been enthusiastic in helping the empire in the South African war.

Mr. Barton advised his hearers not to expect too much, especially in the way of written bonds, from the colonial conference. Nevertheless, he said, the outcome of the conference will be the strengthening of the Empire.

Sir John Gordon Sprigg, speaking at the same banquet, thanked the other Colonial Premiers for having helped him to fight the battle of constitutionalism. He expressed the greatest satisfaction with the manner in which the rebels are laying down their arms in Cape Colony, and the progress towards peace and pacification.

London, July 9.—In the House of Commons to the Parliamentry Secretary to the Admiralty. H. C. Arnold-Forster, replying to William Redmond, the Irish leader, confirmed the report that J. Peirpont Morgan had offered to place all the British ships in the new combine at the disposal of the Admiralty for the next 50 years, on certain terms. Mr. Arnold-Forster added that the offer had not yet been accepted, because it could only be dealt with in relation to British shipping generally, and the Atlantic trade position, which was being very carefully considered by the Government.

Brassey's Criticism.

Lord Brassey (Liberal) initiated a discussion on naval matters in the House of Lords yesterday, during the course of which he depored the fact that Great Britain had lost the place she once held with her mercantile marine. The question of subsidies, he thought, must depend on the action of the other powers. All the naval powers of Europe, the speaker asserted, gave liberal subsidies, while President Roosevelt and ex-Secretary Gage had recommended the policy. It was contrary to British policy to foster industries by bounties or protection, but to pay for a reserve of auxiliary vessels would certainly be to the public advantage.

Lord Shelborne, the first Lord of the Admiralty, in the course of a reply referred to the Atlantic shipping combine. He said it seemed to him that the balance was one of disadvantage to the combination, because it necessarily placed very large powers in the hands of a few men. The Government disclaimed any sort of jealousy of the intention of the Americans here They had an American marine of their own, and they had a perfect right to a full share of the Atlantic trade. It was to British interest that they should have it. It should not be an almost British monopoly.

On the other hand, Great Britain could not afford to see herself squeezed out of the Atlantic trade. The attitude of the Government, therefore, was not one of hostility, but of anxiety, and not until they had formed a final opinion of the whole question could they wisely or fairly enter into agreements with one party or the other. It would never do to rely in time of war on merchant ships of other nations for the purpose of British carrying trade. Great Britain had fallen behind in regard to vessels of high speed because she had not given heavy subsidies like other nations. The expense of so large a subsidy policy was so insidious that in his opinion the subsidizing of commercial corporations should and must be confined to a limited number, and for a special and definite purpose. While merchant cruisers had their proper place in time of war they could never be substituted for naval cruisers, nor would the possession of merchant cruisers never diminish the shipbuilding vote for the navy.

London, July 9.—The Russian Government has announced its intention to contribute over £100,000 towards the installation of a line of cold storage steamsh'pawsteamships which will run between Liban, a seaport town on the Baltic, and England, to carry meat produce of various kinds.

Experts in the meat trade who have been questioned regarding the latest developments in the American invasion of that trade say that the Smithfield control of American houses. Its capture has been secret and gradual, and prices are being raised. The English representatives of the American trust meet daily and agree upon prices, to their mutual advantages. As regard refrigerator beef, which comprises 77.5 per cent. of the beef consumed in England within the past six months prices have been raised three cents a pound.

The British side of the Smithfield market declares that the only thing that will prevent this will be the reopening of the Argentine supply now that Argentine is said to be free from the foot and mouth disease.

No Comparison

A sense of proportion is an excellent thing, and an old soldier who writes to The Globe upon the subject of the recent defeat of Lord Methuen makes a very good point as to some of the comments passed by certain newspapers. He signs himself as "one who saw this brave brigade from start to finish on October 25, 1854," and writes as follows:—

"I read the account of the Boer charge on General Methuen's rear-guard taken from The Standard newspaper, London, and published in The Globe of the 18th. The Standard compares the ride of the Boers with the charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava. The editor of The Standard must know well there is no comparison. General Methuen's column or field force of all ranks was only about 700 or 80. The Light Brigade, with the brave Cardigan leading, went right through the centre of thirty thousand Russians, with sixty guns, in a commanding position, blazing away on the brigade as they were advancing down to the guns, where they had to put the Russian gunners out of the way. They tried to get away the guns, but found it impossible. Every man had to fight for his life back through cavalry and artillery, as they all closed in on them with the intention to capture or kill what was left on the retreat. The brave Cardigan, who obeyed his chief's order to advance and take the guns, knowing well at the time it was impossible, was about the last to return. From the time the brigade started until what was left returned—about 180 when the roll was called after the return—twenty minutes would cover the time. Bear this in mind: it was every man for himself to fight his way back, as they were all broken up in the rush at the guns by the Russian artillery firing on the whole, Russian and British, at the same time. Every volley carried off as many Russians as British. This statement is correct about the Russians firing on their own men. It was a surprise to see any return from the dreadful artillery fire they got from the Russians."

Brave, dashing and skilful Delarey's charge certainly was; it was exactly such a rush as many times before in the history of war has carried cavalry to victory. To persons accustomed to think of the Boers as unable to attack, accustomed also to think of the day of cavalry as over, it must be a surprise to read of such a charge. But the Boers have been moulded by two years of warfare into excellent soldiers, able to attack as well as to defend, and the loose formations of modern war offer peculiarly good opportunities to good cavalry trained to shoot from the saddle. To compare such a charge to the Balaclava charge, or to Von Bredow's "death-ride" at Vionville, when a few German squadrons shook the whole French line of battle and saved their overmatched infantry, is absurd, as my old soldier correspondent convincingly points out.

In this connection a personal reference to Lord Methuen may be introduced, showing him in a light possibly unfamiliar to the majority of newspaper readers. Lord Methuen, as is indicated in the paragraph which is quoted, is a man of a deeply devotional turn of mind. The quotation is from The Daily Graphic, and is as follows:—

"A largely attended public meeting was held last evening at Corsham (near Bath, in England)—the home of Lord Methuen—for the purpose of passing a resolution to be sent to the wounded General, expressing his fellow-townsmen's high admiration for his distinguished services to the country during the South African campaign, and their sincere sympathy with him in being wounded. The Rev. J. D. Dunlap, vicar of Corsham, presided. The following telegram was sent:—

" 'Dunlap, Corsham. To Lord Methuen, Klerksdorp: Enthusiastic public meeting. Resolution sincere sympathy and speedy recovery. Shall sing your hymn Sunday.'

"Mr. Dunlap explained that the hymn referred to was 'Lead, Kindly Light,' Lord Methuen's favorite hymn, which he promised his Lordship should be sung in church the first Sunday in every month. He had received a letter from the General speaking of the comfort it gave him to know that he was remembered on the first Sunday in the month, and also in their prayers. The resolution was carried by acclamation, and it was also agreed to telegraph to Lady Methuen informing her of the terms of their message to her husband."

Some dispute has arisen as to Lord Methuen's nationality. It cannot be appraised with absolute accuracy; the family was originally Scotch, it is said, from Perthshire, and has for many years been settled in England, living in Wiltshire, at Corsham. Lord Methuen's grandfather was elevated to the Peerage in 1838; prior to that he had for many years been M.P. for his county. It may be added that Lord Methuen pronounces his name in three syllables, with the accent on the first.

The Culture of Celery.

"Celery Culture" is the title of another of the popular publications of the United States Department of Agriculture now in press, known as Farmers' Bulletins. "Little more than twenty-five years ago," says the bulletin, "the celery crop, which now forms such an important factor in market-gardening interests, was cultivated by few growers only. Celery was to be found on the menu of a few of the leading hotels, but not in many homes. Its use has spread until at present, with the output reckoned by the carloads, it is classed as a wholesome and palatable addition to the fare of all classes. All of the cultivated varieties now in use," continues Mr. W. R. Beattie, the author of the bulletin, "have been derived from the wild celery, a native of the marshes of southern England. This wild celery was for a long time considered poisonous, which was a natural supposition, as it belongs to the same family as poison hemlock." Mr. Beattie, after reviewing the value of celery from a commercial standpoint, notes the nutrition contained in the plant, which, by the way, is not so very great, but it makes a most palatable addition to the table in the winter season when a great quantity of meat is eaten [illegible] vegetables. It is generally [illegible] one of the most wholesome of vegetables.

Farm Notes.

Care should be exercised in the use of poisoned solutions for spraying, as many insects that are friends of the farmer may be destroyed. Bees have been exterminated in some sections by spraying, though something depends upon the kinds of plants sprayed.

We clip from an exchange the following directions for killing lice on cattle—Dust the animals thoroughly with fresh insect powder; rub in well, or else part the hair so the powder will reach the pests. In about a week, dust again to kill any mites that might have hatched. The other is: Make a strong tea of cedar twigs; wash the lousy animal with this tea; this last is effectual in cleansing buildings, coops, roosts, poles, etc., of lice.

No greater mistake is ever made than to suppose that by selecting the largest eggs from the basket for hatching improvement of the poultry is sure to follow. There is no makeshift in this industry. Careful selection of the breeding stock, males and females, alone will insure that grading up so desired by every breeder. There is no room today for slipshod methods in poultry culture, and the breeder who does not select a breeding pen from his best birds and keep them by themselves does not deserve and cannot hope to maintain the quality of his stock.

More pigs are lost in the summer season from improper feeding than from any other cause. They are compelled to consume foods that are not conducive to thrift, and which lead to disease in the herds. Some feeders keep slop in barrels, which ferments until sour, having a very disagreeable odor, the pigs being fed largely upon the slop. This kind of food is more injurious in summer than in winter, as it induces bowel disease. The best slop is milk and bran, freshly made, with grass, vegetables and plenty of pure water, which will induce growth and keep the pigs in good condition.

Use a Good Sire.

If there is one thing more than another which pedigree breeding has taught it is the value of using a good sire. It takes a long time before this lesson can be universally appreciated. There are some breeders whom nothing but adversity will teach; others are willing to profit by the experience of the many, and are ready to adopt the lessons which can be obviously deduced. It is a pity that in these times of enlightenment and advanced ideas the simplest lessons cannot be absorbed by small breeders. It is with the small breeder that the future lies, and the sooner he adapts himself to a more successful policy the better will it be for himself and for the breed which he favors. It is not enough to have a well-bred sire. That certainly is a primary consideration, for, as every breeder knows, there is nothing more perplexing in breeding than the frequency with which atavism occurs. It is satisfactory to note, however, that when characteristics have become more fixed by years of registered breeding, breeders are more and more coming to regard it as essential that the trumpeted merits of good back breeding should be displayed in the animal itself. The old principle that like produces like is truer now than it was fifty years ago, because of the increased prepotency of line bred stock. Nothing condemns the policy of a breeder more effectively than the use of an indifferent horse on good mares, or, for that matter, moderate bull on better cows. As a rule, the farmer is not deficient in useful breeding mares or roomy cows, but it would form painful reading to learn how often he had misused his trust by the use of an indifferent sire. It is a very safe rule to patronize a sire better than the females. There is everything to gain and nothing to lose. The initial cost is a mere bagatelle, compared with the difference in price of the progeny. It is a misfortune that many farmers expect too much of their mares or their cows. This, at all events, seems a reasonable deduction from their policy when they use very indifferent sires. The point we wish to accentuate is that it pays to use a good sire. It is short-sighted policy to expect too much of the dams.—Farmer and Stockbreeder.

Sore Mouths in Horses.

A sore mouth in a horse is frequently the cause of his not feeding properly. In cases where a horse has lost his appetite or does not redily eat his food it is well to examine his mouth, if the fact of his being off his feed cannot be traced to any apparent cause. A sore mouth may be due to several causes. In young horses it is generally due to teething troubles, which make the mouth more or less tender and interfere with the feeding. In such cases the only thing to be done is to provide the food in a state which will permit of its being easily chewed and masticated. The oats should be crushed, bran mashes and roots should be given, and the hay should not be hard, and free from woody stems.

In older horses the permanent molars are sometimes the cause of a horse not being able to chew his food, and of his having a sore mouth. The molars sometimes have sharp edges and points which hurt the inside of the cheeks, and cause considerable pain when the horse is eating. In this case they require filing with a rasp, but this operation can only be performed by a skilful hand. At other times a horse may be prevented from masticating his food properly by one of the molar teeth being longer than the rest, which prevents the molars in the upper jaw from coming into contact with those in the lower jaw. In this case again professional advice is required.

Lampas not infrequently is the cause of a horse having a sore mouth. Lampas consists of an inflamed condition of the roof of the mouth or of the palate, and is caused by various means. In young horses it is due often to the growth of the teeth, while in older ones it is caused through indigestion or by irregularities of the molar teeth. The treatment accordingly varies and depends on the cause of lampas. Ignorant grooms and stablemen sometimes suggest burning as a remedy. This is of course a cruel and perfectly inadmissible remedy, and one which should not be adopted on any account.

Another form of [illegible] of the mouth is known under the name of [illegible].—Farmer and Stockbreeder.

Making Poultry Pay.

Poultry-keeping will pay the man who has poultry at heart, just the same as farming pays the man who has farming at heart, only a much larger profit for the money invested.

Farming never paid the man who had a desire to drive a huckster waggon for the village merchant, or for the man who had some other pursuit at heart more than farming. The man who expects to make poultry-keeping pay must have a desire for that particular work. Of course he can be engaged in some other pursuits and make a success at poultry-keeping, but he must have a love for the business or he can never claim a grand success. There are thousands of men who are making fortunes at raising poultry, who are largely engaged in banking, railroading or some other profession as well, but they have a fancy for fowls or they would never have admitted them in their lines.

In former years I was engaged as a representative of a well-known commercial establishment, which required me to travel largely over the rural districts of our country, and where I noticed a farmer who kept all buildings in a high state of preservation, with well-painted doors on hinges, well shingled, all fences up to standard, all corners free from obnoxious weeds, no harvesting machines or waggons standing under shade trees, no farming implements of any kind standing or strewn where they were last used, I decided that sort of man would make poultry-keeping pay, and pay handsomely.

Speaking from a life spent on a farm, I will say one cannot possibly keep up all ends on a farm. But one can keep it neat and attractive and in a profitable condition. And this question is forced on the poultry-keeper. He cannot keep up all ends, but he can keep them clean, neat and attractive, and this is the secret of poultry-raising. If houses and yards are not kept clean and free from vermin great losses are sure to follow. A few years ago a neighbor requested me to send and get him a setting of White Wyandotte eggs. Knowing the disposition of the man—although he was a good-natured fellow, as all lovers of poultry generally are—I knew it would be money sunk for him, but I complied with his request, and ordered a setting from a well-known White Wyandotte breeder, a breeder I knew would send out nothing but choice eggs for hatching. The eggs came in fine condition, were put under the natural hen, and out of thirteen eggs seven chicks were hatched. A splendid hatch it was! A great many would suppose this a poor hatch, but if we can get seven chicks out of every thirteen eggs throughout the season we will have no "kick" coming. In about two weeks I called on my neighbor, and not a single chick did he have. All the blame was laid on the breeder, as usual. But I insisted on helping the breeder out and to look for the cause nearer home. On catching the mother hen and turning down a few fluff feathers I discovered a very good crop of lice. Lice and chicks cannot be raised togethere by any mans. This was not a surprise to me, but it seemed to be new to my neighbor. However, it lightened the load on the breeder, and if a number of poultry-raisers would look well to the cleaning of poultry houses, ridding the place of lice and disease, there would be more satisfied customers and less abused breeders.

I do not believe there is any royal road to wealth in the poultry business. Yet I am certain there is an independent living in it if properly managed. I know a breeder in Indiana who received $500 for a pen of Plymouth Rocks. Of course they had a great show record behind them, but they never could have been brought to this high state of perfection had they not been bred judiciously and by practical methods. But as we farmers are not breeding a specialty of show fowls, but utility fowls, yet keeping up to the standard requirements, we do not expect to get such fancy prices; but the aim of every up-to-date farmer should be to obtain strictly standard bred fowls, fowls that are positively from laying strain ancestors, as the egg production is the farmer's profit. A good egg yield can never be obtained from fowls roosting in treetops and on fences. But there has been a vast improvement in this respect in the last ten years, as farmers are fast learning that poultry comfortably housed during the winter season, and properly fed, will return a larger income than most any other stock fed and cared for on the farm; but the farmer that manages his poultry on the "Peter Tumble-down" plan will find poultry-keeping a total loss.

A few days ago I heard a man of this class running the poultry business down at a terrible rate. His argument was: Chickens eat their heads off three or four times each year, as his chickens had eaten with the fattening hogs all the fall and winter, and had not laid a single egg. He had been trying to get his wife to sell them, and not leave one on the farm. I was forced to say that a man who has no more sense than to expect eggs under such management should be sent to the insane asylum, as any sane person knows hens would get too fat to lay under such treatment. I believe in the corn ration, but it should be alternately fed with other grains, vegetables and animal foods. I have been a breeder of poultry for the last fifteen years, and I have never seen the time that our hens were not paying a handsome profit. I would rather have one hundred well-bred hens on a small piece of land and out of debt than to have two hundred acres and be financially embarrassed, as some farmers are. I would enjoy life better, have more money that I could call my own, and be free from the clutch of money sharks. To those who wish to enter into the poultry business for either profit or pleasure, let me say let the old mongrels of our forefathers softly down into oblivion and bury them, as I know from long years of practical experience that pure bred poultry have a much larger profit than scrubs. They lay more eggs and mature quicker and it costs no more to feed blooded stock than it does to feed scrubs.—J. C. Clipp, Saltillo, Ind., in N. Y. Tribune-Farmer.

SEA MONSTER LAUNCHED

Largest Schooner Ever Built Successfully Floated

Boston, Mass., July 10.—At the Fore River shipyard, on the south shore of Boston harbor, there was launched today the first seven-masted schooner ever built. The initial plunge of the big vessel was witnessed by a crowd that numbered thousands.

The ship is named the Thomas W. Lawson in honor of the Boston copper man, whose family owns a considerable share in her. She was built by Captain John G. Crowley, pioneer builder of large schooners, from designs by Bowdoin B. Crowninshield, who planned Mr. Lawson's Independence a year ago.

The Lawson has benefitted from all the lessons taught by experience with her big predecessors. The keelson has been made unnecessary by constructing her hill of steel. Thus her earning capacity has been increased very considerably. The crew expense has been cut practically in half by the introduction of engines to manage all the sails, to handle the enormous anchors, and do stevedore work. She is provided with a double bottom, which can be filled with water ballast if she sails light laden. She is lighted by electricity and steered by steam.

The heads of the seven masts are 105 feet above the wood-covered steel deck, the topmasts being Oregon pine spars 58 feet long, the lower masts steel cylinders 32 inches in diameter at the bottom, which is 30 feet below the wooden decking. Each mast weighs 17 tons bare, and will weigh nearly 20 when fully rigged. The seven-master has two decks of steel covered with wood. Altogether her carrying capacity is 8,100 tons. Her displacement is 10,000 tons, and she spreads 43,000 square feet of sail; yet, by the use of the engines, she need have but 16 men in her crew, including her master and her engineers. She will cost when completed an even $250,000.

THE VENEZUELA REVOLUTION

Entire Force of Revolutionists is Estimated at 10,000

Special to The Times.

Washington, July 9.—Commander McLean of the cruiser Cincinnati cabled the Navy Department today from La Guayra a report on the revolution in Venezuela, which is derived from information secured by the Topeka. Commander McLean says:

"Topeka reports forty revolutionists attacked Custom House at Guanta yesterday, secured four Mausers and some ammunition. They fled to the hills upon the appearance of troops. Captain of Topeka visited Barcelona, secured information that Gen. Matos with 3,000 men is at Urina, well armed but inactive, and 3,000 more in State of Bermudez. Estimates entire force revolutionists in country 10,000. Small bands revolutionists in this vicinity. Some firing at night. Foreigners not molested by either side. Yesterday 210 more troops came here from Caracas, but were recalled today in haste. Steamer Ossun goes to Puerto Cabello with 200 troops."

BLOODHOUNDS ON TRAIL

But Tracey, the Outlaw, Uses Cayenne Pepper to Defeat Them

Settle, Wash., July 9.—Harry Tracy, the fugitive convict outlaw, has, for the fourth time since his arrival at Meadow Point, escaped from the officers. Tracy was definitely located in the home of Charles Gerrels, one mile north of the town of Renton at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. At 4.45 o'clock Deputy Sheriff Cook arrived with a fraction of the posse and advanced up the track toward the Gerrel's home. The convict, however, plunged into the brush and was soon lost to view. When Tracy disappeared from the Gerrel's home the bloodhounds were hastily brought up from the rear and turned loose on the hot scent. Both dogs struck the trail down the stream, following it for a quarter of a mile, and crossing the track only to double back and swim the river.

Half way between Cedar River and Burrough's boathouse, both dogs ran into Cayenne pepper, sprinkled in the outlaw's retreating footsteps. Their nostrils were filled with the fiery substance, and fully ten minutes were lost in relieving the dogs, so that they could again exercise their powers of smell. Pressed to desperation, Tracy here made a circuit, headed due north, and plunged into the outskirts of the lake, where he finally succeeded in casting the scent. It was then dark and the guard returned to Renton with the dogs.

TO TEST THE DESTROYERS

British Admiralty Seeks an Explanation of the Cobra's Destruction

Special to The Times.

London July 9.—In order to test the strength of the torpedo boat destroyers, the Admiralty has ordered a remarkable experiment to be made at the Portsmouth dockyard. One of the dry docks is being especially prepared for the destroyer Wolf, where she will be subjected to a series of tests which will include hogging and sagging strains.

At first she will be sagged by being hung by the head and stern from two platforms having no support beneath. The middle will then be hogged; that is she will be balanced across a pile of timber so that the full strain of the unsupported fore and aft parts will be thrown on the centre of the vessel.

The experiment will prove whether a destroyer's hull is so weak, as was considered in the case of the Cobra, that the back breaks when a wave lifts her amidships or a sea lifts her in such manner that the wave is hollow beneath her middle.

LIVE LAKEFIELD LOCALS

What Is Going on in the Pretty Northern Country

—The village is quiet these days.

—Reports from the country are not reassuring. The enormous rainfall is proving injurious to the wheat, which is being flooded out.

—The many friends of Miss Hendren will deplore her serious illness. Her condition is, I am sorry to say, not at all encouraging. Her trip to Cariff has not benefitted her.

—The Presbyterian Sabbath school excursion, which was to have taken place last Friday, but was postponed on account of the rain on that date, has been set for to-day)Friday) June 11.

—Mr. and Mrs. Rubery and family of Hamilton, who have been visiting Mr. M. Fisher, have returned home after spending a couple of weeks here.

—The leaving examinations were conducted this year by Mr. Fife, of Peterborough Collegiate Institute staff.

—Mr. John Craig reports business booming at the Craig House.

—Mr. Marling, of Montreal, is the guest of Mr. H. Lefevre.

—Work on the new saw mill is progressing satisfactorily.

—Mr. John Hull, J.P., was in town this week.

—The Cement Works are running to their fullest capacity.

—The citizens of Lakefield are interested in the proposed electric railway to town. There are some here who think that it will greatly injure the village, and others are not of that opinion. There is little danger that Peterborough merchants who pay heavy taxes, high rents and extensive help are able to undersell our merchants. If I were asked for an opinion on the matter, I would say that it is the Peterborough merchant who is likely to lose his scalp in the encounter.

—Mr. John Thompson, the popular manager of the big saw mills of the Dickson Company, is the right man in the right place. The mills are a modell of neatness and industry. The cut this year promises to be larger than ever before.

BENSFORT.

—Rev. Thos. Dodds, of the Rainy River District, has been spending some time with his people in Bensfort

—Mr. Fred Manning left last Saturday for his home in Lindsay. He intends attending the University after midsummer.

—Miss Verna Scarlett, of the General Hospital, Toronto, spent a week at the home of Mr. Dodds.

—The wife of Mr. Andrew Finnie presented him with a fine baby last week. Mother and child doing well.

—Miss Fannie Waterman, of Anson Mills, is spending her holidays at home.

Mr. Thos. Armstrong has two peach trees in front of his store nicely loaded with fruit, possibly the first peaches ever grown in Monaghan.

—The thunder storm of Friday night did considerable damage. The lightning killed a cow for Wm. Pimmott, also striking the barn of Mr. Wm. Sisson in two places. No damage of any extent was done except to loosen a few boards and sliver one post.

—The campers and tourists are beginning to take advantages of the warm weather of the last few days. Mr. Wedlock and Jubilee Point seem to be well patronized considering the earliness of the season.

His Estimate of Cromwell.

Lieut.-General Sir William Butler recently lectured to the Irish Literary Society on "The Cromwellian war in Ireland." After a sketch of the famous campaign couched in the severest terms, Sir William proceeded to express his view of Cromwell. His appreciation, marked as it is by an enviable power of expression, is as follows:—For some 50 or 60 years, he said, it had been the fashion of the time to speak of Cromwell as one of the greatest of men. For quite 200 years before our time not one historian, not one writer of any eminence, had had anything good to say about him. But we had changed all that. His eulogizers could now be counted by the thousand, his admirers by the million. He had already quoted a letter, written by Cromwell some years before he became famous, in which he said, "Who goeth to war at his own cost?" That was the keynote of Cromwell's character. The two chief objects of his effort were plunder and persecution. He and his were the saints; they were to possess the earth. All the rest were sinners; they were to be despoiled, cast out, persecuted. Who could count the oaths taken by him and broken by him? He swore allegiance to the King, but he cut his head off. He swore to support the Parliament, but he betrayed it and turned it out of doors. He swore to the Scottish covenant, but he destroyed it. He swore to uphold the liberties and rights of his country, but he trampled upon the one and betrayed the other. Standing in his place in the House of Commons with his hand upon his heart, he swore, in the presence of Almighty God, that he knew the army would disband and lay down their arms at the door of the House whenever the Parliament should command them to do so, and within 24 hours he was in the midst of that army inciting them to fresh defiance of that Parliament. Could any instance of hypocrisy match this—that he had prayed on his knees to God for the life of Charles until his tongue clove to the roof of his mouth, by which he saw that God had willed the death of the King? He averred that he was a most upright and conscientious man to his King and he prayed that God would be pleased to look upon him (Cromwell), according to the sincerity of his heart to the King, and at that moment Cromwell had the death of the King planned. He was absolute master of every trick of tongue, gesture, expression by which man could deceive his fellow. He could weep at will, pray, preach, affirm, swear, cajole, belie, act the buffoon with the corporal, play schoolboy tricks while signing the death-warrant of the King, commit the most appalling deeds with the name of God upon his lips and the Bible in his hand. He was the greatest dissembler that history held record of. While raving of liberty he suspended in turn every liberty that Englishmen had ever known—representation in Parliament, trial by jury, taxation with consent, everything that the people had gained and valued. He proposed to sell St. Paul's to the Jews for a synagogue. He sold hundreds of English gentlemen and thousands of Irishmen, women and children to West Indian planters to be slaves. He arrested and locked up in the Tower the three counsel of a London merchant who was prosecuted for having refused to pay taxes which had not been voted by Parliament. When confronted with all this perfidy he fell upon his knees in the House of Commons and took a solemn oath that it was untrue. He was false to his own chosen band of supporters and to the inner circle of his friends; and to each one of those parties whom he deceived in turn he used the same solemn asseverations of rectitude, piling perjury upon perjury such as no age had ever seen before. Did he deceive even himself? That question we could not answer. It was possible that having deceived every one—enemies, friends, comrades—he had come at last to deceive himself. The world held no greater failure in its history than our civil war. The result was that the King lost his head and the Parliament lost every shred of privilege and liberty it had ever possessed. For years Cromwell ruled the land with heavy sword and booted foot. He abolished the House of Lords, and he shut up the Commons. He taxed without representation. He tried without jury. He ruled by martial law. He packed the courts, he arrested counsel, he hanged and beheaded as he pleased. His little finger lay heavier upon the nation, said the people of the time, than the loins of the late King had lain. And then he died, and there came back to a weary and blood-sucked land a King. Cromwell left nothing behind him, no public works, no new system of law, no better policy of land, no clearer conception of justice. "Nothing cried at his funeral," wrote Evelyn, "but the dogs." And that, the dismalest failure of English history, was the man in whose praise to-day histories were imagined and statues inaugurated. Courage, diligence and the most dogged and determined resolution—these things he had to an extraordinary degree. But to what end and at what cost did he use them? It was a cowardly and a base act of the Parliament of 1660 to dig up his remains and hang his mouldering body on the gibbet at Tyburn. It was voted without a dissentient voice in the House of Commons, but history had missed one strange coincidence which resulted from it. They could remember the choice which Cromwell, in the days of his victory, gave the unfortunate Irish:—"Hell or Connaught." He turned to the last page of Cromwell's latest biographer, and this was what he read: "Where Connaught Square now stands, a yard or two beneath the street, trodden under foot and beaten by horses' hoofs, lies the dust of the great Protector." And that was the end.

Grazing does harm to pastures if the cattle are permitted to eat too closely of the grass. Weeds in pastures indicate that damage is being done by cattle, because of the fact that the animals reject the weeds, leaving them to grow and crowd out the grass. When a pasture becomes infested with weed mow them down and keep the stock off until the grass has an opportunity to grow. It may be necessary to re-seed the pasture also, as well as apply fertilizer.

Charcoal is very valuable as an aid to keeping poultry in good order and preventing bowel disorders. It should be fed in powdered form mixed with the food several times a week; it is harmless, whatever amount is given, as it is not really medicinal but acts as an absorbent, taking up the poisonous gases in the system. It is said that chickens will fatten faster if charcoal is given.

THE GIRL OF THE PEOPLE

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

at the look in her haggard eyes.

"You've deceived me," she went on fiercely. "You've just the same as lied. You came here and pretended you'd been driven away from your old home. It wasn't true. You left because you were a fool. And now, as if luck was never tired of following some people that don't deserve it, you've got the chance again. You shan't refuse it, you shan't. Such a man! Why, there can't be hardly his like in England. He might be a prince. And you've got nothin', nothin' but your face. He's got everything; all he wants is for you to take it and him with it. But you won't."

"I can't," I said, quietly, though my voice was shaking. "You don't understand."

"I understand that you ought to be in Bedlam. Why, a queen's daughter might snap at him; and you—but I've no patience; I can't talk about it. I can just tell you this, my house is no place for fools."

"Very well," I said, faintly, "since you think me that, since you don't want' me here, I—I'll go."

"Oh, I don't mean that, Jenny!" she cried, her tone changing quickly. "I've got a temper, as you might know by this time. You oughtn't to aggravate it—just for nothin'." She came to me and laid both thin, work-worn hands on my shoulders, tears bursting suddenly from her eyes.

"My girl!" she sobbed. "My girl, do this—for me. For us all. Think what it means. Think what it would be for Fan and Totsey. I don't say for myself. It don't matter much any more. But they're young. They've had a hard life, and they've no better before them, unless you do this. I was talkin' with him—Sir Roger Cope, I mean. He'd do anything for the girls if he was your husband. He said so straight out. I was so happy, I could have screamed. I never thought for an instant you'd say 'No' to him, and ruin all our lives."

With that worn face and those beseeching eyes so near mine, I was dumb. My heart smote me. How selfish I had been, never even to think of what I could do for these poor soul-starved creatures, who had my blood in their veins! How selfish, how cruel I was even now, because my mother's appeal left me cold, and the voice of my spirit whispered: "You cannot do this thing that is asked of you, for them or anyone else on earth."

I could bear no more. "Oh, mother, mother, you are killing me!" I cried, and flung myself free from her clasping hands—not because the contact was hateful, but because I was desperate, scarcely knowing what I did. "I'll work for you all—I'll get money somehow, but—I'd rather die than marry Roger Cope. I told him I didn't love him, but it's worse than that, I hate him. He's a hypocrite—a snake."

I waited for no more—I could not endure to hear her answer, and have to retort upon that again. Turning, I flew out of the room, and, running to my own, dared to bolt myself in.

Time passed on, and nobody came to call me. I knew that the dinner hour must be long past, and I was faint with hunger, for I had breakfasted on a slice of bread; but I wished to think out some definite plan for the future before I saw my mother again. I wished to do this, yet I could not; for the preliminary pangs of starvation had begun their work. My head swam; I could not concentrate my thoughts.

At last evening was falling. I had stayed for at least five hours in the little back room. It was time for Fan to come home from the factory. I wondered greatly what had been happening outside, and why I had been left so long undisturbed; The silence seemed ominous, but at last it was suddenly broken by a great clamor in the next room. Some heavy object fell with a loud thud, accompanied by the crash of breaking dishes. Above the noise rose Fan's voice loud and shrill. She was screaming in hysterical passion, and flinging the furniture about, as I had known her to do once or twice before.

With a quickly-beating heart I laid my hand on the bolt, slipping it back, yet hesitating when it was done to venture out. As I stood, trembling and undecided, there was a sound of rushing footsteps in the passage, a weight was dashed against the door, which was violently opened, almost knocking me down. Fan broke in upon me, her handsome, bold young face distorted into crimson ugliness.

"You cat—you deceitful cat!" she shrieked. "I've lost 'im—and all through you. You've ruined me! You've spoilt my life, and on top o' that you refuse to make up to me in the only way you can. It's me earns the money ere. I keep this 'ouse, and I h'order you out of it. D'ye 'ear?"

She shook me as she spoke, until my breath well nigh left my body. I could only gasp:

"What—do you—mean?"

"She hasks what I mean!" mocked Fan, furiously turning to my mother and Totsey, who had come into the passage and were standing close to the doorway of the back room. Mrs. Miggits from upstairs had rushed down also, and was hanging over the banisters, drinking in the scene with greedy relish, her children crowding behind her.

Fan did not care that the Miggits family saw and heard; she did not care that in all probability a larger audience was by this time collecting at the front door. But I cared; I could not shriek my answers, like a fishwife, trying to scream her down.

"Tom 'as now thrown me over!" she panted. "That's wot I mean. And it's because of you. 'E's 'eard things about you—things 'e wouldn't tell me. But 'e won't 'ave nothin' more to do with me so long as you're in this 'ouse, making the whole ny'bour'ood ring with talk. 'E met me at the fact'ry, and we had it out. Then I comes 'ome, and I ear the chance you've thrown away—the chance fur the lot of us. You might o' myde the world a sort o' haven for us all, and I'd of snapped my fingers at Tom. But instid of that you sits here in h'idleness, eatin' my

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by the Times.

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed. Times.]

—St. Luke's Sunday School picnic will take place today to Jubilee Point

—A resident of Water street has been robbed of some choice geraniums.

—The Gilmour Company's drive of logs are expected to pass through the Otonabee river in ten days.

—The 57th Regt. was inspected by Lieut-Col. C. E. Montizambert, D.O.C., Kingston, last night.

—The members of St. John's choir met in the Guild room last evening at 8 o'clock.

—Mark street Sunday School excurted to Jubilee Point yesterday, when a very enjoyable time was spent.

—The Finance Committee of the Town Council and the Central Charity Board met jointly last evening.

—Strawberries are a glut in the Toronto markets just now. They have been selling at a cent and a half per box.

—Lindsay's Home for the Aged has raised its charge for keeping inmates from 15 to 20 cents a day.

—Service preparatory to communion will be held this evening at 8 o'clock in St Andrew's church. The Session will meet at 7.30. Free-will offering for Session and poor fund.

—A meeting of the stockholders of the skating rink will be held in the Council Chambers at 8 o'clock on Tuesday evening, 15th inst.

Dr. Burrows reports that Lindsay is practically free from infectious diseases. The fever scare circulated throughout the country has apparently subsided.

—On the evening of the circus, a lady's jacket was dropped from a buggy. The owner can have the same on application to Chief Roszel, at the police station.

—By the kindness of the Trent Valley Navigation Company, three of the inmates of the Home for the Aged at Lindsay will have an excursion each Wednesday during the summer.

—Lindsay merchants complained at the last meeting of their Town Council that the streets are not properly sprinkled, in consequence of which the dust has been disgraceful. We in Peterborough would like to see a little dust for a change.

—Fenelon Falls village creek is causing trouble on account of the protracted rains and some stoppage in its current caused the water to enter the lecture room to such an extent that on Sunday school service had to be held in the church. It almost looked as if the church might be badly injured, which would certainly be regreitable as it is a beautiful edifice.

—The Toronto Star is at it again. It has organized a scheme for the systematic encouragement of mendacity. It offers a $15 split bamboo fishing rod for the capture of the biggest black bass reported to the Toronto Daily Star. Last year Mr. John King, of Hustling Havelock, won a similar rod offered as a prize. Fish stories grow and flourish with sufficient spontaniety without being stirred up with a fifteen dollar pole.

—Mr. A. C. Babcock has a collection of coins that for number and value are likely unequalled in Canada. There are about 4000 of them in copper, silver and gold. They date for 320 B.C. to the present time and represent the money of several nations. With the collection are several specimens of paper money bearing dates memorable in history. Mr. Babcock's collection is said to be worth about $ 4,000.—Watchman-Warder, Lindsay.

—Here is an explanation of the mystery to many people how the circus men manage to capture such terrible looking creatures as are sometimes shown in the cages as wild men and women:—Jacob Kramer, a contractor, of Reading, Pa., recently discovered his missing daughter, Lizzie, in a circus cage, acting as "Wild Sappho and eating raw meat." Lizzie was disobedient at home, ran away and was soon converted into a wild woman from the forests of a wild country.—Review.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

NOTE—The Times requests it's readers to furnish the paper with items of a personal and social nature either by phone or in writing.—Ed. Times.]

—Miss Bessie Matchett is spending her holidays at King's Wharf.

—Mrs. John Whitbeck, of Rochester, N.Y., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John Harding, 261 Macdonnell street.

—Rev. C. M. Carew, of Omemee has accepted a call to the Bond street Baptist church at London, Ont.

—Mr Fred. Allison has taken charge of the ready-made clothing department of H. LeBrun & Co.

—Mr. Warren Dean, of the Ontario Bank, is spending a day or two with Judge Weller at Oak Orchard.

—Mr. E. E. Fitzgerald was in town yesterday. He is spending his holidays at Stony Lake.

—The many friends of Miss Gertie McMillan, Smith street, will learn with regret that she is seriously ill.

—Miss Marguerite Cassidy, graduate of the General Hospital, Ottawa, is home for her holidays.

—Miss Hilda Hodgson, formerly of Peterborough, has graduated from the St. John's Riverside Hospital, Yonkers, N.Y.

—The many friends of Mr. W. J. Lloyd, 223, Park street, will regret to learn that he is now confined to the Nichols Hospital, suffering from an attack of diphtheria.

—Col. Sam Hughes left for the Northwest, Wednesday morning. He will resume his position with the Canadian Northern Railway Company. Mr. William McArthur went west with the colonel.—Lindsay Watchman-Warder.

—Messrs. D. Walker, H. R. H. Kenner, J. Jeffries and W. G. Morrow, Leave today for Montreal where they sail on the Mongolian on Saturday for a six weeks' visit to the Old Country and Paris, France.

Farmer Loses $200

Mr. Reid Ball, a farmer of Cavan, who came to town to visit the circus on Tuesday lost $200 while travelling form Millbrook to Peterborough. He cannot explain in what way the cash disappeared but thinks he must have been robbed of it.

Painful Accident

John Mathieson, of No. 610 Reid st, and who works in the blacksmith shop of the late Wm Hamilton Mfg. Co. met with a painful accident yesterday morning. He was working a piece of steel when a splinter of it flew and pierced his stomach. Mathieson was at once removed in the ambulance to the Nicholls Hospital, where Dr. McClellan is attending him.

Months' Mind Mass

At St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday morning a solemn requiem high mass was celebrated for the repose of the sole of the late Mrs. Edward Phelan. The celebrant was Rev. C. J. Phelan, of Young's Point, son of the deceased lady, and he was assisted by Rev. T. Crowley, as deacon, and Rev. Patrick J. Kelly, as sub-deacon.

$20,000 for Streets in Lindsay

At the last meeting of the Town Council of Lindsay a motion was adopted ordering the solicitor to prepare a bylaw to raise $20000 to build streets. This will be sumbitted at the same time as those for $14,000 for a north ward school and for $2,000 for a library site.

The Twelfth of July

The Watchman-Warder of Lindsay says - The Twelfth of July is next Saturday and the prospects are that it will be celebrated by a very large demonstration in this town. Visiting lodges are coming from many outside points. The local organizations have made elaborate preparations and because the fever scare has passed away it seems likely that the crowd that stayed away on the 1st will likely be here on the Twelfth.

Owner Wanted for a Mare

MEN RETURNED TO WORK

The Strike at the American Cereal Co's Works is Over and the Ringleaders are Discharged.

The men employed on the American Cereal Co's. elevator who struck on Wednesday for an increase of from 17 to 25 cents an hour, all returned to work yesterday, with the exception of the ringleaders of the movement, whom is is reported have been dismissed. The men have accepted the old scale of 17 cents an hour.

The Battle of the Boyne

The glorious 12th will be celebrated this year in Lindsay. The Peterborough Orangemen will line up at 7.30, and at 8 will march to the Grand Trunk station, where they will entrain for the town on the banks of the Scugog.

A Quiet Wedding

The home of Mr. R. J. Martin, Rubidge street, was the scene of a very quiet and interesting wedding on Wednesday evening, when his sister-in law, Miss Maud Mary Rabey, of Toronto, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Gilbert Andrew Borland, by Rev. J. G. Potter, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church.

Mr. and Mrs. Borland are both popular in town, having resided here for some time. They are followed to their new home in Toronto by the best wishes of a host of friends for a long life of usefulness and happiness.

Substantial as Fact

They were two—one sober and the other not. They entered McCallum's restaurant. The sober man ordered poached eggs on toast, and tea. The tipsy man ordered broiled steak, and went fast asleep.

His friend grinned, and at the proper time ate his eggs and drank his tea. With his broiled steak before him his companion slept on.

The sober one pulled out a cigar and lit it. He called the waiter and ordered the table cleared of untasted steak. Then he waked his friend with, "Come along, me boy."

"Where's my steak?" the sleepy one demanded.

"Ate 'em," replied his friend "You've had enough to-night. Come along."

"All right," was the response, as the sleepy one complacently waddled out.

In that case, at least an assurance was as substantial as a fact.

THE KAWARTHA LAKES

An American Opinion of our Inland Water Stretches

The following is a clipping from the "Brighton News," Brighton, N. Y., a newspaper that enjoys a very large circulation in the city of Rochester:

"The opening up of the Highlands of Ontario, Canada, and the beautiful Kawartha Lakes has been a variable work of love of the adv. dept. of the Trent Valley Navigation Co., of Bobcaygeon, Ontario, and the coming summer promises such an influx of American tourists as will amply justify the outlay in hotel accomodation which are always being made. The Kawartha Lakes, in fact, promises to become to Canada in summer, what the Royal Ponciana is to Florida in the winter months, the fashionable resort of the continent, where the romantic and the beautiful can be enjoyed with all the luxury and comfort of the most modern hotel life. The fine hotels very much resembles the architecture of the famous Flagler hotels, soft gray stucco walls, timbered across under its red tiled roof, with deep cool verandahs, commanding views of surrounding lakes and islands."

MISPLACED KINDNESS

Kind Hearted Doctor Who Put Cooks Hat in Dish Pan

A certain good-natured doctor whose doorbell rang late one night, supposing that the summons was from some one who needed his services, rose from bed, put on his dressing gown, and went down to the door.

A workingman stood there, holding a huge package, from which buds and leaves were protruding.

"Is Miss Caroline Ward in?" asked the man.

"She has retired," returned the doctor. Miss Caroline Ward was his cook.

"I am sorry, sir, to call so late. Something went wrong with the tramcar I was in. I'll leave this for her, sir, if you will kindly give it to her in the morning."

"Certainly," said the doctor. He took the bundle carefully, closed the door, and carried the flowers into the kitchen. There he placed a dishpan in the sink, drew a few inches of water in it, carefully pressed the base of the package into the water, and went back to bed, thinking how pleased the cook would be.

The next morning he went into the kitchen early, to find the cook holding a dripping bundle. Her manner was belligerent and her tone was in keeping with it.

"If I 'ad the pussons 'ere wot did this," said she, "I'd empty the kettle on 'em! I'd let' em see if they would put my noo 'at in a dishpan, I would."

The doctor left the kitchen somewhat hurriedly, and not until he was safe in his study did he give vent to the laughter which was consuming him.

INDIAN RIVER.

—Haying is near at hand, but the weather is unfavorable.

—Mr. David O'Grady, of Douro, arrived from Galway, last week, where he had been visiting old acquaintances.

—Mr. Michael O'Leary, of the Grand Seminary, Montreal, is home for his summer vacation.

—Mr Maurice O'Brien, who has been teaching school in Chandos, has resigned his position, and intends going to Normal school, Ottawa, after summer holidays.

—Messrs. David and Frank Devlin, who have been down to Kingston with the volunteers, claim to have had a good time. The people around I. R. are safe now.

On Saturday evening last the Indian River football team journeyed to Norwood where they played a friendly game against the team of that place. The teams lined up as follows:

Indian River.		Norwood.
	Goal.
W. Breckenridge.		E. Watson.
	Backs.
W. Foster,		A. Finley.
M. O'Leary,		J. Miller.
A. Fife,		J. Lynn.
	Halves.
B. Fife,		H. Kempt.
D. Devlin,		E. Morrow.
A. Nelson, R. W.		C. McNichol.
F. Devlin, R. W.		H. McNichol.
	Forwards.
W. O'Leary, C.		D. E. Hunter.
A. Nelson, L. W.		A. Robinson.
R. Devlin, L. W.		S. Wildman.

Referee, W. O'Keefe.

The ball was faced at 6.45, and soon Indian River rushed on the Norwood goal, which was well relieved by Finley. Norwood forwards now rushed on their opponents goal, and after 12 minutes play the first, and only, goal was scored by Hunter. From this on, both goals were often in danger, but owing to the magnificent work of Breckenridge, and Norwood's strong defence, no goals were scored. In the second half Indian River tried hard to even the score and pressed closely around Norwood's goal, so that Watson had to keep on the alert. During this half Indian River appeared to have the better of the game, but were unlucky in scoring. On Friday evening the return match will be played, so another chance is given us to do better than even matters.

A Surprising Discovery

You will be surprised in trying Catarrhozone to find how quickly it cures cold in the head. The agreeable, penetrating vapor traverses every air cell and passage of the nose, throat and lungs. In one breath it carries instant death to the millions of germs infesting the respiratory organs and breaks up a cold in ten minutes.

A trial will convince you that Catarrhozone is the most potent, satisfactory and pleasant cure for colds, catarrh, deafness, bronchitis, asthma and lung trouble. Complete outfit, $1.00; small size, 25 cents. Druggists or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston. Hamilton's Mandrake Pills cure Biliousness.

At the Police Court

George Stevens, Henry Truesdale and Jno. Hinds were charged at the Police Court yesterday morning with using illegal measures. Information was laid by Mr. Wm. Johnston, District Inspector of Weights and Measures. Hinds did not put in an appearance and the other two pleaded not guilty. The case was enlarged until four o'clock in the afternoon when it was further enlarged until Thursday morning at 9 o'clock.

NATIONS ARE FLATTERING THE ITALIAN NATION

No Reason why Britain and Italy Should Not Become Exceedingly Cordial

Special to The Times.

London, July 10.—Italy is exhilarated, says the Rome correspondent of The Times, by the fattering attention shown her simultaneously by all the powers. Germany has sought to maintain her allaince; Russia is eager to welcome her King; France rejoices at the assurance that Italy, though league d with rival states, will never be a party to agression against the repuslic; the White House recognizes as faulty a policy which jeopardized British Italian friendship. There is no reason, says the correspondent, why Italian relations with Great Britain should not, with a modicum of tact and foresight, progress toward the high level o cordiality from which they have been allowed to fall.

Now that Lord Cranbrone has thoought fit to confirm an exchange of assurances regarding Tripoli, the existence of which he seemed recently to wish the British public to doubt, the British Government, may trust to time and the avoidance of past errors to cause the Italians to forget that those assurances were not given until the divulgation of the Franco Italian understanding convinced the British Foreigh Office of the advisability of not lagging too far behind French diplomats. The correspondent adds that Chumberlain's declaration on the Malta language question and the happy thought of sending a British squadron to greet King Victor Emmanuel at Palermo, are steps in the right direction, but Prinetti, the Italian Foreign Minieter, while not an anglophobe, is by no means an anglo-phile, and in the highest quarters there prevails a disposition to appreciate the advantage of Italy having more than one string to her bow in the Mediterranean.

TO INTIMIDATE THE COMMISSION.

Special to The Times.

London, July 10.—Referring to the Russian protest against the Brussels sugar convention, the Berlin correspondent of The Times says the object is obviously to intimidate the projected permanent international commission with a view to preventing it from recommending differential treatment of Russian sugar, as the United States already differentiates its duties in consideration of the way in which Russian sugar production is regulated by Government for the benefit of the Russian trade export. The correspondent says that the Russian suggestion that any examination of the conditions of sugar production in Russia should be extended to other commodities, playing a prominent part in the world's trade, is purely obstructive, and, indeed, too ridiculous to deserve a moment's consideration.

JAPANESE ARE ASTONISHED.

Special to The Times.

Tokio, Japan, July 10—Lord Cranborne's language regarding the British-Japanese alliance has caused great astonishment in Japan, but newspapers refrain from comment.

AN AMNESTY FOR EXILES.

Paris, July 10—The Parliamentary Committee has decided to recommend the Chamber of Deputies to consider an amnesty for the strike and other offences proposed by the socialist and also an amnesty proposed by the Nationalists for Deroulede and other exiles.

RICH GOLD FIND IN VERMONT

A Blast Uncovers 10,000 Tons of Gold-Bearing Quartz

Special to The Times.

Glen Falls, July 11.—Mining experts say that the greatest gold strike ever made in the East is that in the town of Searsburg, Bennington County, Vt., where, it is said, untold riches have been discovered. About two months ago John K. Batchelder of Manchester, a leader of the Vermont bar, upon the advice of a Colorado miner, began opening a mine on the Rice farm in Searsburg. Several heavy blasts were put in yesterday, and the last one uncovered a lode of gold-bearing quartz which carries immense quantities of pyrites, composed of sulphur, arsenic, and iron, with silver and gold, the latter in large quantities. It is estimated that there are now 10,000 tons of gold-bearing ore in sight. A reduction plant is to be put in at once.

GASOLENE ON BURNING WOMAN

Man Who Doused Her With It Thought It Was Water

Special to The Times.

Waterbury, Conn, July 11.—Mrs. Joseph Abramson was literally roasted alive today by a fire which ruined her cottage. Her gasolene stove exploded, and she was struggling to save the building and some valuable jewelry, when her clothes caught fire.

William Leleard, an iceman, ran to her assistance. Picking up a tin pail which he thought contained water, he dashed the contents over her. It was gasolene, and, of course, it added greatly to the woman's suffering.

S. Mendlebaum and D. Bletman, of Brooklyn, ran from the next house and dragged the woman from the burning cottage. They were painfully burned themselves.

Mrs. Abramson lived for a long time in New York. Her husband, a commercial traveller, is away from home.

RARE CHANCE TO INVEST

American Cotton Company's Sale of Debenture Bonds

We call the attention of investors to the announcement of the American Cotton Company in this issue of The Times. The people identified with the Company is a sufficient guarantee of the safety of the proposition. They include some of the strongest men in the United States. Hon. Cornelius N. Bliss, ex-Secretary of of the Interior, and one of the most conservative and ablest men in New York. He, with Mr. Cannon, of the Fourth National Bank, and Mr. Case, President of the Company, dictate the policy of the management. Mr. Case was formerly a partner with Mr. Andrew Carnegie, of the Carnegie Steel Company, prior to its consolidation with the United States Steel Company, at which time, of course, Mr. Case and his other partners retired from active business. Mr. Case is one of the ablest business men of the day. Mr. Wm C. Lovering, Vice-President, is at present Congressman from Massachusetts at Washington, and has for years been interested in the cotton mills of New England. Mr. Tenor, Vice-President and Treasurer, was also a partner with Mr. Carnegie.

There is no better or safer investment ever offered than this.

MEUTHEN'S RETURN

General Stands High in Public Estimation Because of His Grit

London, July 12.—Lord Methuen's return to England has been as quiet as Lord Kitchener's welcome will be demonstrative. Lord Methuen remained in South Africa for a longer period than any other of the generals of the original army corps of which so much was expected, and by which so little was accomplished. He has risen in the public estimation in consequence of the English grit with which he persisted in seeing the thing through, and, notwithstanding his final defeat and capture, he has a better public reputation than Gen. Buller or the other generals, with the single exception of Gen. French.

Gen. Sir George White, who has been properly reticent since the relief of Ladysmith, has profited by the publication of the recent budget of war correspondence, and is now accounted one of the most gallant and faithful soldiers of the British army.

Lord Kitchener has become the hero of the Radicals and the pro-Boers, because he is credited with having brought the war to a close by insisting upon magnanimous terms for a brave enemy. Both political camps will unite in welcoming him home this week. His next command will probably be in India, but he will likely remain until the end of the year in England, where he can be consulted by the war and colonial offices respecting the settlement in South Africa.

The Sight Of It Whets the Appetite

Malt Breakfast Food

Always a Welcome Dish At the Morning Meal

Many Use It Twice a Day in the Hot Weather

Malt Breakfast Food is a blessing to thousands in the hot weather. An Opportunity

Mr. E. Phelan has instructed Mr. Hagart, auctioneer, to sell by public auction on the premises, corner of Park and Gilmour streets, on Thursday, 17th of July next, that desirable residence formerly occupied by Mr. T. F. Matthews. The lot is 90 x 45 (two fronts) and the house is a solid brick structure, complete with all modern improvements, and recently repainted and papered throughout. Terms easy. For particulars see either Mr. Phelan or Mr. Hagart, auctioneer.

Fear About Basutos

Joel, One of the Chiefs, to be Tried on the Charge of High Treason

Pretoria, July 12.—There is some uneasiness here regarding the attitude of the Basutos. In consequence of supposed treachery during the war, Joel, one of their prominent chiefs, has been summoned to Maseur, capital of a military district of Basutoland, to stand trial on the charge of high treason. The paramount chief, Lerethodi, is likely to support Joel in the event of the latter's refusal to obey the summons. Troops have been dispatched to the frontier.

THE BOER FORCE

Pretoria, July 12.—According to an estimate of the Red Cross identity depot, which fulfilled the functions of a casualty bureau for the Boer forces, their total losses during the war were 3,700 men killed or died of wounds, and 32,000 made prisoners of war, of whom 700 died. The Boer forces in the field numbered about 75,000.

KITCHENER AS A GENERAL

Something About the Silent Man Who Ended the Boer War

An Unlovable Personality, but Strong and Compelling

Machine-Like Methods Wins Battles but not Enthusiasm

His Great Work in Egypt and South Africa

Special to The Times.

London, July 12.—Besides Lord Kitchener, what living Englishmen is there whose absence from London at the supreme moment of the crowning of Edward VII, could be answered with regret?

Now the London crowds are only too well aware that the war hero will arrive in England long before any coronation can take place.

Ever since it became known that the King had set his heart on peace as a means of making a culmination of his ambitions, an occasion of rejoicing for all his subjects, the name of Kitchener has been only second to that of his majesty in the hearts of the English people, and when peace was assured, those two names seemed linked in popular affectionate regard for all the future.

Even foreigners see in Kitchener the personification of English military power of Edward's reign, as Wolseley was of Victoria's reign.

For Americans Kitchener commands especial interest. Believing England to be the strong ally of this country, they think of Miles and Kitchener shoulder to shoulder in future wars which may embroil Old and New World powers. If they forsee a time when 1776 and 1812 are repeated, then they think of Kitchener as a foeman worthy of the steel of their best champion.

The crowds have not long to wait. Kitchener's work in South Africa is finished. He has turned over his authority there to General Littleton, and has now only to come home and receive his reward.

On reaching London Lord Kitchener will realize that he is a hero, and the British public will have the unique satisfaction of cheering a grizzled warrior, who has fought his way into a title and $400,000. Their satisfaction really will be unique, for though John Churchill was rewarded with the Duke of Marlborough, his bank account was created by means which made him far from heroic in the minds of his many countrymen.

On June 6, 1899, Parliament voted to Kitchener the sum of $150,000 as the "victor of Omdurman." Three years later, to the very day and hour, Parliament voted him $250,000 for concluding a peace with the Boers.

Not long ago Kitchener was not nearly so popular in England as he now is. He was accused, as Grant was, of recklessly subjecting his soldiers to slaughter. Now all Englishmen know that if Kitchener never spared his men, neither did he ever spare himself.

He has gone through a formidable list of wounds and diseases. Long ago, when under General Chanzy, he had a narrow escape in a balloon adventure. Soon afterward, when reduced by hardship and want of food, he fell victim to pleurisy and his life was despaired of.

In Palestine he was attacked by fever and nearly died. At Safed he and Captain Condor were attacked by a hostile Moslem crowd. Kitchener's thigh was crushed by a stone thrown upon him from a height, but nevertheless he crawled to the rescue of his companion who was holding would-be murderers at bay with no better weapon than a riding crop.

Once his arm was nearly severed from his body at the shoulder by a sword cut, and in an attack on Osman Digna's camp his jaw was shattered by a bullet.

Because of his fine constitution, his abstemious habits and his passion for athletics, Kitchener has come through all his hardships and sickness none the worse for them. Though over fifty, he is in his mental and physical prime. He is now a viscount, a rich man, and a nation's hero.

English society is therefore revolving in its mind, this important question: Is he a confirmed bachelor? Or has he been simply too busy to give matrimony serious thought? If the latter be the the case, Lord Kitchener, on his arrival in England, will find an embarrassment of beauty and fortune awaiting his choice.

REVOLUTIONISTS ROUT VENEZUELAN ARMY

Crushing Defeat of 3,000 Government Troops—President Castro Hurrying to Take Command

Willemstad, Curacao, July 12.—News reached here to-day from Venezuela that 3,000 Government troops under Gen. Modesto Castro, the President's brother, were completely routed July 3rd, between Barcelona and Aragua by revolutionary troops, under command of Gen. Rolando.

The Government forces lost all their ammunition and eqipment. Many of the soldiers deserted to the revolutionists during the engagement.

After the battle the revolutionary army surrounded Barcelona. The inhabitants of the city were panic-stricken, the shops were closed and the streets were barricaded.

President Castro left Caracas yesterday, taking with him his private guard of 500 veteran soldiers and Gen. Ferrer, as chief of staff. The President of La Guayra last night embarked on the steamer Ossun for Guanta or Barcelona, 150 miles east of La Guayra. It was his purpose to reorganize the Government forces at Barcelona, and personally lead them against the revolutionists. The step taken is considered extremely perilous.

WAS JUST AS OLD AS THE U. S.

Death of a Tennessee Negro Who Was Born on July 4, 1776

Knoxville, Tenn., July 11.—Ferry Chesney, the oldest man in Tennessee, and perhaps the oldest in the United States, died at his home on the summit of Copper Ridge, on July 4th, at the age of 126 years, the day of his death being his birthday.

Chesney was born in Virginia on July 4th, 1776, the day independence was declared. As a slave he belonged to Jonathan Jackson, at Clarksville, on the Roanoke river. When he was twelve years old he was thrown into the presence of George Washington, while attending his master.

For forty years he had lived a hermit's life, and it was four days after his death when his body was discovered.

THE HAY CROP

Reports Say That Never Before Was There Such Growth

Farmers in the neighborhood of Peterborough never before had such a hay crop as this year, but, unfortunately, the weather has been the worst possible for the cutting, curing and stacking of it. For four weeks or more now it has rained more or less nearly every day. The consequence is that while the crop has been very satisfactory in every respect, the opportunities for harvesting it have been of the poorest, and we are sorry to learn that a great many fields that have been cut and where the hay was on the ground for curing have been damaged to such an extent by the wet that the hay will not bring more than half its value even if it brings that. In some sections of the country, where the hay had been put in barns, it was found necessary to have it taken out, on account of over-heating. The farmers who have been fortunate enough to have a late crop will probably be in the best position, although there is uncertainty even yet that the wet season is completed, for all yesterday there was more or less thunder in the air around Toronto, and in other portions of the province. Some of the advices received by the Times are to the effect that between here and Toronto quite a number of hay fields are totally under water. The prospects of $4 a ton hay for feeding purposes next spring are not so bright as they were 10 or 15 days ago.

THE POLITICAL SITUATION A DIFFICULT ONE

Africander Bond is Still Busily Intriguing Against British Ascendancy in Africa

Special to The Times.

Cape Town, July 11.—The political situation created by Chamberlain's despatch, stating that the Constitution of Cape Colony was not to be suspended and that the summons to the Cape Parliament to meet August 20, is an extremely difficult one and evidently not realized by the English press. The personnel of Parliament is in a state of confusion and it is not known whether some seats are vacant or not. The Progressive party is embarassed. It has lost confidence in Sprigg and his colleagues and it would feel humiliated if it helped to register decisions reached with the aid of the Afrikander Bund leaders. The Bund leaders will doubtless counsel their followers to support Sprigg quietly on questions of indemnity and unauthorized expenture in order better to beat him on measures which touch their own ascendancy and on immigration and other measures affecting British interests. There never was any proof that Sir John had a progressive majority at his back. While the surrendered Boers have used generous language no utterance favoring loyal reconciliation has been forthcoming from the Bund or the Dutch Reformed Church

LAURIER TO TOUR CHANNEL ISLANDS

Special to The Times.

London, July 11—The London Times says that Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P., will accompany Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier on a tour of Jersey and the other channel islands at the end of this month. The Jersey officials are arranging a handsome reception for the Canadian Premier's party.

Paris, July 11.—Parliament has a law to extricate the capital from its financial deficit of 4,500,000 francs. The deficit was due to imprudent tampering with old taxes. The municipality in its perplexity, thought of taxing insurance policies and even ranges. It persisted in taxing gardens, clubs, carriages, furniture, sales and rentals of shops and factories. The tax on capital, value of houses and land, has now been sanctioned. It is expected to produce an income of 11,000,000 francs, which will permit the repeal of the garden and shop taxes.

GRAND DUKE AT TOKIO.

Special to The Times.

Tokio, Japan, July 11.—The Russian Grand Duke Boris has arrived at the Japanese capital and will remain until tomorrow. The leading Japanese journals are silent editorially regarding the visit, but minor journals welcome the Grand Duke, insisting there is no reason for antagonism between Russia and Japan, while Russia's East Asian Railway and other enterprises should create a community of material interests and produce an entente. It is declared that Russia's policy does not conflict with the British-Japanese alliance.

QUEEN'S COMPLIMENT TO ROOSEVELT.

Special to The Times.

London, July 11.—Queen Alexandra paid an exceedingly delicate compliment to President Roosevelt at the coronation bazar. She carefully examined the articles on sale at the American court and then selected a volume of Roosevelt's latest works, saying she anticipated much pleasure reading it.

A TOKEN OF ESTEEM

Miss Agnes Judd, Presented with an Address and a Purse and Ladies' Companion

When severing her connection with the porcelain department of the Canadian General Electric Company, Miss Agness Judd was presented with a purse and a ladies' companion, by her fellow employes. The presentation was accompanied by the following address.

Miss Agnes Judd:

As you are about to sever your connection with the C. G. E. Porcelain Works, and intend taking your departure from Peterborough in the near future, we take this opportunity of expressing to you our deep and sincere regret.

During the time that we have had the pleasure of your acquaintance our associations have been of a most pleasant and agreeable character, and we feel that we are sustaining a great loss, but trusting our loss will be your gain. We also desire that you should carry away with you the assurance that we earnestly wish you every joy and happiness in your next undertaking. We trust that you will accept the accompanying purse and ladies' companion as a slight token of our good will towards you, and that it will cause your thoughts to wander back to us as fellow-workers with you of the C. G. E. Porcelain Works, Peterborough.

Signed on behalf of her fellow workers,

M. J. A. BROWN.
MISS ADDIE THOMPSON

Miss Annie Hall read the address and Miss G. Henderson made the presentation.

WANTS CUSTODY OF HIS CHILD

Claims That Neighbors Spirited Her Away to Canada

Montreal July 11.—What may prove an interesting case was brought to the notice of the Superior Court this morning by a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, presented on behalf of Alex Leduc, of New York, to recover possession of his eight-year-old daughter Pheobe, from one L. Z. Meunier.

Leduc, in an affidavit, alleges that the child, whose mother is dead, was living with relatives in New York about two years ago, when the members of the Meunier family, who were neighbors and on friendly terms with the little girl, moved to Canada, taking her with them. He claims that it was only a few days ago that he succeeded in locating them, and was able to take the legal steps necessary to its recovery.

Judge Davidson granted the petition to issue the writ, and ordered the child to be produced in court on Monday when the case will be investigated.

The Annual Outing

The annual excursion of the professional and business men of the town will take place on Monday afternoon to Rice Lake, per steamer City of Peterborough. Mr. Charles Stanley has generously placed his fine piano at the disposal of the party and Mr. Halpanny, Peterborough's popular entertainer, will assist in making it pleasant for those on board. The committee who have the matter in charge have issued about 75 invitations, nearly all of which are being accepted.

The Cause of Dyspeptic Pains

Improperly digested food usually forms gases that cause a painful distention of the stomach and pressure against the heart. This results in much pain and distress, but Nerviline will relieve the distention, dispel the gas, and cure the dyspeptic pains very quickly. Polson's Nerviline is really an excellent remedy for dyspepsia, indigestion, cramps, summer complaint, and all stomach and bowel troubles. No household is complete without Nerviline. Try a 25c. bottle.

King Free from Cancer.

London, July 11—An authoritative statement regarding the health of King Edward was published in today's issue of the British Medical Journal. It says—

"In view of the fact that sinister stories continue to be manufactured and printed, it may again be stated, as emphatically as possible that during the operation no trace of malignant disease was observed, that no suspicion of any kind has arisen since, and that the medical attendants are quite satisfied that his Majesty's constitution is thoroughly sound."

The British Medical Journal adds—

"The progress of the last week has been everything that could be desired. The wound, though still deep, is granulating well. During the last ten days the improvement in his Majesty's general health has been remarkably rapid. The King has regained his strength almost completely and is able to take restricted diet with a good appetite."

The Lancet also stigmatizes as "lies" the sensational rumors circulated, and says:—

"There is not and never has been the faintest shadow or ghost of a suspicion of any malignant disease."

They Take Weeks

Ordinary remedies sometimes take weeks to even relieve cases that Catarrhozone cures at once.

Inhale Catarrhozone five minutes now and again, and it cures a cold.

Inhale Catarrhozone five minutes every hour and we guarantee it will cure any case of catarrh, bronchitis, asthma, lung or throat trouble, or deafness. It is very pleasant and convenient to use, quick to relieve, and certain as the hereafter to cure. Large size, complete, price, $1; small size, 25 cents. Druggists, or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills cure Headache.

SUMMER BABIES

Summer babies should be brought up on health-giving Lactated Food, which is strongly recommended by our best physicians. Lactated Food is the only safe and pure food for the little ones in the hot weather. It is a preventive of cholera infantum, dysentery and diarrhoea. Makes puny and weak babies strong and happy. Ask your druggist for Lactated Food; take no other.

THE FIGHTING BURGHERS

If the Boers have not staggered humanity they have provided a series of surprises from start to finish of the war, and the latest surprise is not by any means the least, says the Ottawa Citizen. The number of men who have grounded arms and surrendered under the terms agreed upon at Pretoria, May 31, has been so greatly in excess of the popular belief of the Boer strength that it compels a revision of all previous estimates of the fighting force with which the British troops had to contend and of the opinions which have been held of the British conduct of the war to a final victory. Before the war the Boers spoke of an army of 50,000 burghers with which they would sweep the British out of South Africa. On the other hand it was argued that the entire fighting force of the two Boer states, between the ages of 18 and 60, could not at the utmost exceed 40,000. When the war was actually on, the foreign friends of the Boers declared that there were not more than 25,000 or 30,000 burghers in the field to cope with ten times the number of British troops. From reliable data it now appears that the number of Boers in the field was greatly underestimated. Between April, 1900, and the end of the war exactly 40,000 were taken prisoners by the British. In September, 1900, 3,000 surrendered to the Portuguese. Since the conclusion of peace more than 16,000 have surrendered, making a total of 59,000. But these are not all; there are others. Since April, 1901, Kitchener has reported 3,300 Boers killed in battle. The heavy fighting of the war was before that date, and judging by the number known to have been killed in some engagements and having regard to the British loss in the same period, it is thought not unreasonable to estimate the fatalities of that period at another 10,000. These figures give a total of 70,000. If to these be added those who have escaped from the country or who may be avoiding observation in Cape Colony the grand total may safely be placed at 75,000 fighting burghers.

This confuses and upsets all former calculations and leaves us wondering how it was possible to recruit such an army out of a total population of scarcely 250,000. We can explain it only on the theory that the proportion of males is much larger than one-half, and that recruits were received much younger than sixteen and much older than sixty years. Such a revelation of Boer strength is, in a way creditable to both sides. It speaks volumes for Boer patriotism and devotion that about one-third of their entire population took up arms and went into the field. We have yet to hear of a nation that ever exceeded that proportion of fighters in any war. On the other hand, there is added explanation of the difficulty of the British task. Instead of outnumbering the Boers ten to one, the British did so by only about three to one —a very different matter. Of course, three to one are heavy odds. But when we consider that the three were fighting seven thousand miles away from home, in a strange land and climate, in absolutely novel fashion, and on the aggressive, while the one was right at home in all respects and on the defensive, the difference does not seem so great. In such considerations we may find corroboration of the German military expert testimony that no other soldiers in the world could have done better in the circumstances than the British did, and of the Austrian field marshal's statement that the war has added greatly to British military prestige.

AN AWFUL WEAPON

Col. Humbert, a French artillery officer of considerable technical knowledge and experience, announced lately that he has invented a practical apparatus which, applied to firearms, large and small, from the huge cannon down to the light pistol, can suppress not only all trace of smoke, but the flash and report as well. It is hardly necessary to dwell on the importance of such a discovery, which, as the gallant gunner points out, may have the eventual effect of rendering the dream of universal peace a happy reality. In Col. Humbert's own words, the matter is thus described: After very many experiments I have succeeded in constructing an apparatus which, applied to the gun at the moment when it is wanted, completely suppresses the flash, the sound and the smoke, even of black gunpowder. There is no longer any ebranlement of the air at the muzzle of the gun. My apparatus is of simple make, of easy and quick adaption, and inexpensive. It works thoroughly well, is very strong, and does not require any previous instruction for its use. It can be moved about, and can be applied to the arm when it is needed without any difficulty. It can be at once used for pistols, rifles and mitrailleuses. Its construction for big guns presents no difficulty. The methods of war in the twentieth century and the mode of fighting will differ totally from those hitherto witnessed.

A Fitting Response

A donkey stepped into a Peterborough merchant's store the other day and asked for the proprietor, who walked out of his private office to meet him, but was surprised to see a donkey in the store.

"Why are you here?" he asked. "You know that this is no place for a donkey."

"I am here," said the donkey, "because I saw your advertisement on the fence that surrounds my pasture. I know that you, too, must be a donkey, or you would have placed the advertisement in The Times, Peterborough's brightest and best daily newspaper, that everybody reads, and where it would be read by people, not donkeys. Being lonesome to-day I thought I would be neighborly and call on you."

Paine's Celery Compound
Saves the Life of a Manitoba Lady

It Completely Banishes The Agonizing Troubles that Were Dragging Her to the Grave

There never was a remedy so highly recommended as Paine's Celery Compound. There never was a remedy in such universal demand. It is popular and prized in tens of thousands of homes, because it makes sick people well.

Paine's Celery Compound has saved thousands from nervous prostration and collapse, it has effected wonderful cures in kidney and liver complaints; its victories over rheumatism and neuralgia have commanded the attention and admiration of our best physicians. It has cured disease when everything else has failed. The following voluntary testimonial from a Manitoba lady who owes her life and present good health to Paine's Celery Compound will cheer the souls of many despondent sufferers. Mrs. Annie R. Cobb, of Swamo, Man., says:

"Before using your valuable Paine's Celery Compound I was so crippled with rheumatism that I had to crawl on hands and knees from one place to another. I also suffered from neuralgia and dreadful headaches, and could not get more than one or two hours sleep each night. I often thought it would be better to die than live and endure my terrible agony. I was happily advised to use Paine's Celery Compound, and after use of six bottles the rheumatism and neuralgia are now banished, and I now eat, rest and sleep well. My present improved state of health is due entirely to the virtues of Paine's Celery Compound, which has done wonders for me. My husband is now using it for dyspepsia, and it is doing wonders for him."

George A. Treadwell Mining Company

27 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK. JEROME, ARIZONA.

Capital - - - - $3,000,000.

VALUE OF SHARES $10.

In a suit recently tried in the New York courts it was proved from the books of the United Verde Copper Company and the sworn testimony of the bookkeepers that the cost to that company of producing copper was only three and a half cents a pound, not counting the gold and silver values, which—allowed for—reduced the cost to a still lower figure.

Nowhere outside the Verde Copper Belt in Yavapai County, Arizona, is copper produced in quantities for less than twice this cost.

The United Verde has about two hundred acres on the north end of the Belt and the George A. Treadwell Company has several times as much in the central and southern parts of the Belt. The conditions along the whole Belt are entirely similar. We already have three mines developed—the Cliff, Brookshire and Iron Queen—one of which, the Cliff, seems to be larger and better than the United Verde, and the other two at least approach it in magnitude and value, while we have several others, including Badger, Pastime, Green Monster and Spoke and Stonewall, which, though less developed, are equally promising.

Professor Treadwell believes we have at least half a dozen United Verdes within the broad and extensive limits of our holdings.

As soon as our smelter plant which is now in process of erection, is completed, we can certainly produce copper as cheap as our rich neighbor on the north.

The United Verde for several years has produced one-tenth the copper of the world. When our plants are fully installed we expect the Verde Belt to produce one-half the copper of the world, and the George A. Treadwell Mining Company will be prepared to do more than its full share.

Before investing in copper in unproved localities, consider the stock of the George A Treadwell Mining Company, named after the great pioneer and explorer of the Verde Belt and owning the largest and best aggregation of properties on it.

The price of the stock is $11 a share. Make checks payable to The order of the company and send them to 27 William Street New York

Money and Dreams.

He settled himself in his roomy chair in his big, old house, where he had lived so long that the city had grown up away and beyond him, leaving the house, which had been in a fashionable neighborhood, so far down town that there was little more than the hum of business to be heard all day around it. The old man's housekeeper brought him a cool drink, and one of his nephews came in to enquire how he had stood the unusual heat of the day.

He had so many nephews and nieces to look after his comfort. Some even stayed in town all summer to be near him. When they tried to persuade him to go away for a little rest in the hot weather he would say:

"Rest! Who wants rest? If you let money rest it rusts—rusts! Turn it over, keep turning it over; it grows, it grows!" And he would add that the summer was the best time of all for work. The old financier was the possessor of many millions. But he walked alone. This evening he sat in the twilight which settled itself hot and thick about him. The night was bringing no cooling breath. The roar of the metropolis was dying away in tired sobs outside. The city's life seemed sapped with the heat. Even the old man, who never stopped his work for anything, realized that it was unusually hot to-night. He fanned himself with his newspaper and took a sip from the glass which stood near him on the table.

He closed his eyes. He felt such a strange sense of oppression. No, he was not dizzy. It had passed. He opened his eyes and put up his hand to unfasten his collar. At his neck he touched a twisted cord of silk that was around it. He pulled at the cord and drew out its length. From it hung a ring—a silver ring—old-fashioned and worn, and on it two raised hearts lying against each other and rubbed smooth by time.

He sat now with his eyes closed again and his hand folded over the ring on his breast. He dreamed once more, and it was his last dream. It was summer—yes—but it was nearly fifty years ago. The dust and roar of the city gave way to the scent and quiet of an old garden; the heat to the dew of a country evening, its breeze lightly moving the leaves of the trees and fluttering the ruffles of a girl's muslin frock, with its pattern of summer blossoms upon it.

A boy—such a boyish country boy—took the silver ring, then new and shining, from his pocket and put it on the hand of the girl in the flowered muslin frock. Then they kissed each other, and the girl fell to sobbing, with her arms about her companion's neck, and he spoke:

"Never mind, dear; Annie, dear. I am going away to make a fortune, and I'm coming back for you, and we will be married, and I will take you away to the city, and you will be rich and have everything you want."

"But I don't like the city. I should be so afraid and so confused, and you might not love me there as you do now here in the country. People in the city forget each other so."

"No, they don't; not if they really love each other, and I love you. Nothing can ever make me forget you. See, not as long as evening comes after the day and the stars come with it."

They kissed each other again.

The ring came back to him in a letter with a flower from Annie's grave.

Never once did he go to seek the grave to rest by it a moment. Work became his love and gold the star that guided him.

Now he clasped the silver ring tighter, tighter. By and by he gasped and fell forward. His clasp relaxed; he sighed once, a deep sigh, then lay there quite still. And later they found him so.—Margaret Klein in the New York "Herald."

A Useful Helpmate.

The editor of the Grapevine "Telegraph," after spending six years without a break, in the editorial harness, felt himself entitled to a vacation, and went away to the mountains for a month's hunting and fishing, leaving his wife in charge of the paper.

On his return he was astonished to find his office overflowing with potatoes. Everything that could be turned into a receptacle was filled with them. Each pigeonhole in his desk contained a potato. The drawer of his editorial table was bursting with potatoes. Old ink-kegs, lined with papers, were filled and heaped with them. There were potatoes in the coal-bucket, in the ash-pan, and even in the stove itself.

They were no small potatoes, either. Every one of them was as big as his fist, and some were as big as two fists. The collection would have taken a premium at a county fair.

"Lucy," he said, after the greetings were over, "what does all this mean?"

"Oh," she almost sobbed, "I wanted to do something original, and so I announced, in the first number of the paper I printed after you went away, that the 'Telegraph' would be sent for one year to the person sending us the largest potato raised in this county, for six months to the person sending the next largest, and for three months to the one sending the third largest. The potatoes began coming in right away, and they've been coming ever since. Some persons, I am afraid, have tried to get all three of the prizes. I have begged the people not to send any more, and I do believe they are doing it now for a joke. We can't announce any prizes till they quit coming, and there are some boys in the other room with their pockets bulging with them right now, and—Oh, Cyrus, what shall we do?"

"Do?" said the editor, with a grin on his face. "Do? The right thing to do would be for me to go away for another month and let you continue to edit the paper. Potatoes are worth a dollar a bushel, and you have got enough of them here to pay all the expenses of my trip, and all they cost us is a dollar and seventy-five cents' worth of 'Telegraph.' If you want an apprentice, just consider me in line for the job."

Wife—I am going down town this morning to try and match a piece of silk. Husband—Very well, my dear; I'll tell the cook to save some dinner for you, and I'll put the children to bed myself.—"Tit-Bits."

REGIMENTAL INSPECTION

The 57th Regiment Peterborough Rangers Attack and Capture Armour's Hill

From Friday's Times.

The 57th Regiment turned out in pretty nearly full strength last night when they were inspected in field movements by Lieut-Col C. E. Montizambert, D.O.C., of Kingston. The regiment left the drill shed at 7.15 o'clock, and, headed by both bands, marched over to Ashburnham, where they were to attack Armour's Hill. This hill was defended by the two local sections of the Durham Field Battery with two guns, under the command of Lieut W. C. Ackerman. The attacking force was divided into three sections. No 1 and 2 companies approaching from Elizabeth street, No 6 from the North, and Nos 3 and 4 making a frontal attack, while No 5 company served on the defence. The attack proved successful, and the hill was captured, but not until the defending party's ammunition was expended. The force from Elizabeth street made a splendid attack, and the Battery's work was brilliant. The frontal attack was also creditable, but No 6 company coming on from the north, through some blunder, got within the firing of one of the guns, and would certainly been annihilated had they been in real action. Some of the defence also managed to take a stand in front of their own guns, which at the time were playing vigorously. On their return the Regiment reached Central Park at 8.15, when muster parade was held, and the regiment marched past the inspecting Colonel Lieut-Col. Montizambert expressed himself as highly satisfied with the inspection on the whole, and complimented both the Durham Field Battery and the 57th on their work.

REGIMENTAL NOTES

Bandmaster Gliddon was called to the front by the inspecting officer and highly complimented on the fine playing of his band.

Drum Major Peters of the Regimental band was an especial favorite with the citizens lining the route of march.

Pte Dave Sargeson, of B Co., who was injured at the Cordage works, and is at present being carefully looked after by the kind and obliging nurses of St Joseph's Hospital, was visited by several of the members of the regiment while the remainder were capturing Armour's Hill.

CASTRO WILL LEAD

President Castro of Venezuela goes forth to battle and will lead his army against the revolutionists. He is confident as to the result, for he says in his proclamation on the eve of marching to meet the revolutionists: "Anarchy has set its claws into the entrails of the country, but I shall strangle it with my energy." A decisive battle is expected at any time. It is estimated that Castro has 3000 troops in and about Caracas, and the insurgent army, under the chieftian named Matos, an earnest patriot, though unskilled in military matters, numbers in scattered bands, nearly, if not quite 10,000 men.

Commander McLean, of the United States cruiser, Cincinnati, which, with the cruiser Topeka, is at Laquayra, reported at the close of last week that Gen. Matos, with 3000 well armed soldiers, was at Urica, and that another army of 3000 revolutionists was in the State of Bermudez. Besides, there are various bands of revolutionists in the vicinity of Caracas.

The revolutionary army contains some of the best fighters in Venezuela, while the chief ain, Matos, is essentially a civilian. he had some military experience during the administration of Guzman Blanco. He is a good organizer and his energy and spirit have had the best effects upon his followers. He has two able lieutenants in Generals Perez and Ducharne, who command the two divisions of his army. His corps commanders are also experienced soldiers.

General Castro is not lacking in boldness. Notwithstanding his bombastic speech and manner he is a man of energy and force. But his army is spiritless and without an animating cause. Castro has seen several campaigns in which he served with credit. He wrested the Presidency from Andrade in 1899 after a series of victories.

The result of the approaching battle means a good deal for Venezuela. It means freedom from oppression and the right of the people under a republican form of government to make their own laws and enjoy self-government untrammeled by coercive edicts. The outcome of the pending battle will be watched with great interest by the people of the United States, who sympathize with Matos and his citizen followers.

JOHN FOY, General Manager, Toronto, Ont

A Ghostly Game of Chess.

"The International Hall of the Cafe Monico is a truly palatial chamber, ever so many feet broad by ever so many more feet long. On the evenings of Friday and Saturday of last week," says London "Outlook," "it was divided by a barrier into two unequal parts. In the smaller sat, each at his board, the British chess-players competing against the American chess-players—who were not there. Through the larger roamed a selection of the chess public. . . . Inside the barrier, and next it, sat Mr. James Mason at a chess-board, facing us. We seem to have known Mr. Mason as a fine player these—well, say twenty years. On this occasion he is opposing Mr. J. F. Barry of America—who is not here; Mr. Barry is sitting in a room in Brooklyn three thousand miles away, under the eyes of American spectators. It is easy to say that the two men are connected by electric telegraph; but it is not wise to dispose of the mystery and romance of space in so rude a way. . . . But Mr. Mason, in this grand International Hall, seated opposite nothing better than a man with a book of telegraph forms who waits unconcernedly for the move, can he play thus dumbly and in absence against Mr. Barry in Brooklyn and think it chess? It is a very ghostly business, and we wonder Mr. Mason can get through with it at all. But he does. He is as solemn, as rapt in thought, as oblivious of all but the game as if Mr. Barry were opposite to him in the flesh, and not opposed to him only by electric telegraph. Clearly to him the play is everything, whether the opponent's move comes to him by actual touch, by telegraph, or by psychic suggestion. But for our part we cannot throw off a dread of the uncanny nature of the business. We feel inclined to look about for some manifestation of Mr. American Barry's spirit. What better evidence of it could we have than the arrangement of these wooden pieces on that wooden board? There is Mr. Barry—most effectually Mr. Barry, for he is causing Mr. Mason to think, and think, and think; to purse his lips in the old familiar way, to fall into immovable silences, wherein you would think he was revolving schemes of a new order of creation or puzzling out the mystery of man's origin and destiny; and Mr. Mason is doing the like to him in far Brooklyn. A strange and fascinating pursuit is chess, strange and unprofitable. Not politics, nor fame, nor wealth, nor love can so engross a man. These objects are usually compassed by flashes of passion, insight, and daring; but this slow, prolonged struggle of brain against brain, through the medium of pieces of fantastically carved wood, is pure devotion to an abstraction. The man who wins, who so hems in the piece of wood called a king that he may not move, gains nothing, proves nothing, establishes nothing but—"checkmate." Yet when he accomplishes that he tastes of a satisfaction deeper and more permanent than is accorded to statesman or lover, merchant or gambler. To accomplish it he deliberately, and for very love of the doing of it, undertakes an enormous mental effort, a thing which mankind in general shuns as if it were Satan himself. Truly a most mystical business this chess. In Paradise you will find politicians reading poetry, and poets studying morals; merchants will be cultivating the arts, and critics weeping on other people's necks; but the chess-players will be playing chess.

Dispensing With Early Rising.

Some genius has, according to his own advertisement, invented an apparatus to dispense with getting up so early in winter time to set the kettle boiling. As far as we understand it, you fix the new invention on your clock, and at the hour required it starts a fire under a kettle of water. As soon as the water boils a bell rings, and you wake up. This is not the sort of thing that takes the cake; it simply grabs it.

We once saw a remarkable invention of this nature in Sheffield. It consisted of a small, but powerfully built bedstead which had an ingenious clockwork arrangement attached, as you would expect, to the ticking of the mattress. In the morning a phonograph got up from under the bed, walked round to your side, and announced it was seven o'clock. After giving you two minutes to reply, one of the hands of the clock reached up and pulled your ear playfully. These were just preliminaries so to speak. If you didn't move then, the patent bed began business. It got up on its hind legs and ran downstairs with you inside it till it got to the garden, where you were shot into a modest little heap under the pump. By a clever arrangement of the process of suction you were drawn up to the mouth and a refreshing stream of cold water crawled down your back. If this didn't wake you, you had to wait for Gabriel's trumpet.

As a matter of fact, the inventor explained, it did wake most people. But in case you were too sleepy to collect your thoughts into fitting shape, by pressing a little knob in one of the blankets, a second phonograph would grind out a little appropriate profanity to ease your feelings. The invention is patented; and when it is put on the market it will beat all the spring mattresses going, as it does for summer, autumn and winter as well.—"Pick-Me-Up."

An "Infernal" Dinner.

A tiny girl of seven gave a dinner-party the other day, for which twelve covers were laid, and that number of small maidens sat down to dine. It was a real little girls' dinner, and the little hostess herself presided, sitting at the head of the table. She had been very anxious, in looking forward to it, to do everything as it should be done. "Mamma," she asked, "shall we say grace?" "No," said mamma; "it will be a very informal dinner, and I think you need not do that." That meant one ceremony the less to be gone through, and was a relief. But the little lady was anxious to have all her guests understand it. So, as they gathered about the table, she explained: "Mamma says that this is such an infernal dinner that we need not have grace to-day!"

For Duck-Keepers.

The largest duck farm in America is located at Speonk, Long Island. Last year over 35,000 ducklings were hatched. Nearly every pound of the flesh was marketed in New York City.

Ducklings for Profit.

Ducklings are wonderfully hardy, and the death rate, even when large quantities are reared, is very slight when the duck raiser knows his business. They must, of course, be kept dry and sheltered from rain, and if their sleeping house is draughty they may get a touch of roup. This shows itself by a froth collecting round the eye, and can easily be got rid of with a little care, and taking precaution to prevent their sleeping in a draught. They fatten not only easily but quickly. In one big duck-rearing establishment no ducklings are kept over eight weeks old, but generally they are fattened for a fortnight longer.

During the last week of incubation the eggs need to be damped, as a rule, two or three times; in incubators they require rather more moisture than hens' eggs, and makers give instructions on the subject. When the stock ducks have their liberty and are strong, healthy birds, the eggs hatch well, and the twenty-ninth morning sees all the ducklings out that are coming. Like chickens, they need no food for twenty-four hours, but just sleep. By the expiration of that time they are thoroughly dried, and their abundant fluff no longer sticks to their skins, but stands out, making them look much larger than they did when first hatched. They are now ready for their first meal, which should consist of hard-boiled egg and breadcrumbs, damped with skim milk or water, given moister than to chickens; the food should be dropped on their backs; they huddle together in a heap when first collected for feeding, and, seeing the food, they peck at it readily enough.

A pan of water should be put down by them, and to let them see it, a few grains of coarse oatmeal should be dropped upon it. Then they peck at the oatmeal, find the water, and drink. It is necessary that at each meal they should have all the water they want, and they want a great deal, for they are thirsty creatures. Pure, fresh water, and plenty of it, is very necessary for successful duck-raising. The water should be supplied in shallow pans at first; as they get bigger it can be given in larger pans or troughs, but they should not have access to a pond. When they have never had the opportunity of swimming they do not pine for it, but if once they get the chance of swimming they fret for access to it.

For the first two or three days nothing should be given but the hard-boiled egg and breadcrumbs, or oatmeal may be substituted. The eggs should be passed through a sieve, the unfertile ones removed on the eighth day of incubation should be reserved for this purpose. They should be fed very frequently—every two hours, at least. It is a good plan, as in the case of goslings, to give them a little tender chopped grass mixed in with their food, but they are not large eaters of green foods, as goslings are. After the first three days the egg food can be dropped, though if there are unfertile eggs this feeding can with advantage be continued a little longer. Biscuit meal, scalded, is an excellent food for ducklings, and can be made the chief article of diet from a week to a month old. Boiled rice is also largely used by some breeders; others rely entirely on biscuit meal and ground meals. The rice should be thus prepared: To one quart of rice add six quarts of water, and let it simmer till the water is all absorbed. A little fat or greaves can be added. On rice thus boiled, biscuit meal and various ground meals, the ducklings can be quickly forced to maturity; meat and fat are also given more or less, and it hastens them on. The meals used are ground oats or oatmeal, maize meal and pollard.

After the first week the meals can be reduced to four a day, giving them all they will eat at a time, but permitting no food to lie by them between meals. The four can be reduced to three when they are seven or eight weeks old. Most fatteners have their own system, and differ in details of management, the object, in all cases, being to keep the ducklings in good health and appetite, so that they eat well, for the more they eat the better they grow. There are certain adjuncts that must be supplied if they are to keep in first-rate condition under the somewhat artificial mantion under the somewhat artificial manner of treatment they receive, and these are plenty of grit, a supply of green food, and strict cleanliness. For bedding them, peat moss can be highly recommended, and, failing it, straw, but straw is getting scarcer than it was. The peat moss, too, when it is finished with, will be a valuable manure for either the field or garden. Later in the season they can sleep on the ground without ill-effect, but not before it is dry.

It is very needful to protect the ducklings from rats, as they highly prefer them to chickens. They must be well netted in at night, and a few traps set near, for rats are sure to be attracted to the vicinity when ducklings are bred for market. It is also necessary to shelter them from the sun, as they get sunstroke very easily if exposed to it, but, of course, this means the July and August sun, when it is really hot.

In case of their going off their appetites when fattening a meal should be missed for a day or two, and the food changed. This will bring back their appetites. A little spice may with advantage be given at this time. Those ducklings intended for stock should be picked out at four or five weeks old, and have more liberty and a certain proportion of corn. Ducklings for table are fed entirely on soft food. They can have a swim just before being killed, as this washes their plumage.—Farm and Stockbreeder.

Hostess (to guests, who have to spend a few days)—We're so glad you've been able to come, Miss Gushington; but I do hope we are going to have better weather, or I am afraid you won't enjoy yourselves much.

Miss Gushington—Oh, but, my dear Lady Boreham, we didn't come here to enjoy ourselves. We came to see you.—London Punch.

Beating a Gambler at His Own Game.

If every one who has a system for beating the bank at Monte Carlo attempts to float a public company, as the young Earl of Rosslyn is doing, to invite the world to share in the profits, there will not be much available capital left for any other enterprises. Whatever may be the peculiar merits of the scheme evolved by the English peer, who has recently been selling dog biscuit, the fact remains that despite the daily attack on the Monte Carlo bank by mathematicians with new systems the Casino continues to pay its large dividends.

Not only does the Prince of Monaco welcome the distinguished scientists who come to deprive him of his wealth, but he even goes so far as to pay their railway fare home, when their money is gone, and to provide for them, if desired, one of the most picturesque spots in the world in which to blow their brains out. But pistol practice on the grounds is very distasteful to the prince; hence his readiness to provide funds to place the unlucky system player in some other part of the world, where he may take his life in whatever manner he pleases, without disturbing the other players at the tables.

One of the recreations of a well-known New York banker, who has no need to "break the bank" at Monte Carlo to provide funds for himself, is to play imaginary roulette on a complicated system of his own invention. Although a yearly visitor at Monte Carlo, he has never staked a sou on the spin of the ball at the Casino. Back in his college days he was an honor man in mathematics, and he still delights in odd computations that have no connection with dividends and money rates. One day last spring at Monte Carlo he amused himself by making a "graphic chart" of the "rouge et noir" croupier for five hundred consecutive rolls. Governed by the immutable laws of chance, the zigzag line, tracing the variations from one color to the other, appeared to have certain sub-zigzags of similar outline occurring at irregular intervals. Taking the daily record sheets of the roulette wheels, the New York banker plotted more charts, all of which showed the same characteristic zigzags, with "high levels," "low levels," "criss-crosses," "runs" and "shutes," and other peculiarities, for which the mathematical American has an elaborate nomenclature.

Coming back to New York, he privately engaged, in another part of the office building in which is his banking house, a small room, which he fitted up as a miniature Monte Carlo. Six young women spent three weeks there spinning the roulette wheels and making charts of the fall of the balls. These charts represent the equivalent of a year's play at one of the tables at Monte Carlo. The banker keeps them in a safe-deposit box, marked "strictly private;" the wheels he has destroyed. These charts, too, have the same easily recognized zigzags. From the study of them the New Yorker has evolved a "graphic system" of "beating the bank" which has met with marvelous success, although the major part of the winnings has been made in imaginary play. At odd moments he and several club friends played the charts. Starting with a capital of $1,000, they won a small sum every "day," and at the end of the "year" had won $256,000 without plunging. Had they given a larger increment to their wagers they would have "broken the bank." They are all satisfied that the chart system is based upon good mathematics and will "beat the bank."

While he was at the Carlton, in London, the banker met a Dutch diplomatic officer, on his way to America, to whom he gave the results of his observations at the tables at Monte Carlo. The nobleman from Amsterdam, who is greatly respected among the baccarat players of Paris, had just had some very costly lessons in American poker from his New York friends. He was delighted with the mathematical beauties of the "graphic system" and offered to furnish a capital of £10,000 if the banker would go with him to Monte Carlo and instruct him how to make his wagers. The American, of course, declined, but he gave the Dutch official enough of an outline of the method of play so that when he made a recent visit to America he spent several profitable nights in a well-known gambling house near Fifth avenue. The first night he won $250, the second $440, the third $1,200, and the fourth $970. The one fault he found with the system was that the winnings were made at the expense of brain tissue. He said he would not attempt to follow it longer. Meanwhile the secret of the "graphic system" of "breaking the bank at Monte Carlo" lies in a safe-deposit box in Broad street, and the man who has the key refuses to indulge in public gambling.—"Leslie's Weekly."

A Golf Sermon.

To illustrate his text, "Thou art not far from the Kingdom of God," an Edinburgh minister the other day drew upon familiar golf expressions. He said:

"'Not far from the Kingdom of God' is not within it. That is how I would put it. 'Never up, never in.' I dare say those of you who are golfers know what that means, and I am sure if you have ever paid any attention to the game you will be struck by the way in which the game of golf seems to reproduce the common scenes of life. Those of you who don't play may know that the great object is to put the little white ball into the little hole. So long as you are short of that, if you don't do it—well, the other man does it before you. He has won the hole. And in doing this, when you come to what is called the 'putting green,' and you take your putt—it may be a beautiful putt, it may run straight to the hole, but if it stops short you will say to yourself, and your partner will say to you, 'Never up, never in. It is a beauty, but it wants legs.' And that is just exactly the situation here—'not far from the kingdom.' You may be 'lying dead,' as we say. The next shot is sure to do it. 'Never up, never in.'"

Teacher—Johnny, can you tell me how iron was first discovered?

Johnny—Yes, sir.

"Well! Just tell the class what your information is on that point."

PASTOR BURT ON TRIAL

Girl's Story of Clergyman Startling Proposition

Threatened Suicide, she Says, Unless She Would Accompany Him to Africa—Case May Go to Conference.

Special to The Times.

Lancaster, Pa., July 10.—An investigation into the charge that Rev. O. C. Burt, pastor of the Quarryville Methodist Episcopal church, has planned to desert his family and elope with Miss Annie Shenk, one of the parishioners, is being held in St. Paul's church, this city. The investigating committee consists of Presiding Elder A. G. Kynett, Revs. J. S. J. McConnell, William Jones, F. G. Coxson, W. H. Hickop and A. M. Vivan of Philadelphia; Dr. J. W. Sayres, of Chester, and C. W. Milam, of Marietta.

Rev. W. H. Shaffer, of Chester, is counsel for the church, and Rev. S. W. Schreit of Philadelphia, is assisting him in the prosecution. Rev. E. H. Hoffman of Philadelphia, represents Mr. Burt. The committee acts in the capacity of a Grand Jury, and its function is limited to a suspension of Burt from all pastoral duties until Conference shall meet, when he will be tried, if this committee suspends him.

Witnesses from Philadelphia today furnished evidence reflecting upon Mr. Burt's character prior to his arrival at Quarryville. The principal charge under investigation involves Burt's relations with Miss Shenk. She was the star witness, and was corroborated in much of her testimony by her parents. The mother is convinced that the girl was under hypnotic influence, a power the minister claims he can exercise. He gained favor through his efforts for her conversion, and afterwards almost monopolized her entire time in church work. She was made a leader in prayer meeting and did much missionary work in Quarryville, and was a frequent visitor to the pastor's study for the purpose of preparing herself for the work in his congregation. Finally he confessed his love for her, and she admitted being infatuated with him. She regarded Burt as a saint, and could repeat his sermons and prayers verbatim, and soon lost interest in all with which he was not connected. Miss Shenk said she believed Burt when he told her he was not legally married, and sympathized with him when he said he was living under a terrible condemnation for not renouncing the woman he acknowledged as his wife. His eyes were only opened to his perfidity when she became convinced that he was legally married, and she then confessed to her parents, telling them Burt had persuaded her that the Lord had summoned her to be a missionary in Africa. He had exhibited a revolver, with the threat that if she refused to accompany him to Africa he would commit suicide. The parents were misled by the belief that she had surrendered all to the church, until they learned that the minister and their daughter were preparing to elope. The sequel of that discovery was the father's thrashing of the preacher and the legal proceedings which followed.

Mrs. Shenk states that Burt's influence over his wife was as remarkable as that over her daughter, for when the pair were planning to elope the wife was compelled by him to assist in the preparations. The committee this evening had Burt on the stand.

PATRIOTIC ENGLISHMEN.

Englishman Barely Escapes Severer Treatment in East Durham

Special to The Times.

Boston, July 11.—An American flag flying in front of an East Boston shop was torn down by a party of three stewards from the steamer Saxonia, and later one of the trio, said to be Stewart Roberts, an Englishman, tore the flag into pieces and flung the fragments into the face of an American citizen.

A hundred men who were drinking or lounging in an East Boston hotel immediately set upon the Englishman, drove him downstairs from the second story room where the insult to the flag was given, forced him into the street and gave him a severe pounding.

It was with difficulty that the Englishman escaped severer treatment, and he finally sought refuge on the Saxonia, bleeding and bruised.

The Englishman had been drinking. Stewart Roberts has been on the sick list of the Saxonia since.

BRAVE JOSHUA SANDFORD

Paris, July 11.—Mr. Joshua Sanford is suffering from a relapse. The excitement and intense suffering while in the well are beginning to tell on his mind. His sleep is broken by delirious dreams, when he imagines the horrors of the well all over again.

In addition an abscess threatens. A day or so ago a consultation of doctors took place, at which Dr. Stanley, of Brantford, was in attendance. To-day when spoken to by a Times reporter, Dr. Stanley said Sanford's chances of recovery were exceedingly good. The only trouble at present to be feared was a threatened abscess which was deeply seated in his right shoulder. This might delay the patient's recovering a week or two days. Otherwise his condition was favorable.

TWO DOLLARS FOR A SHAVE

An Illustration of the Boycott in the Schuylkill Valley

Special to The Times.

Pottsville, Pa., July 11.—At some of the towns in the Schuylkill region a boycott of non-union men is so rigid that it costs $2 for a non-union man to get a shave and [illegible] cents to get a glass of beer. The coal companies have begun wholesale arrests of strike leaders who are concerned in this boycotting. Coxe Brothers to-day had four strikers from Sheppton and Oneida arraigned before Justice Fister charged with conspiracy and boycotting. These men have made such effective arrangements with the merchants of Oneida that none of the non-unionists were able to buy food. The accused men were all held under heavy bail.

FELL THIRTY-FOUR FEET.

A Peterborough Man Meets with a Serious Injury in Toronto

Toronto, July 11. — Harry Gilman, whose home is at Peterborough, met with a serious accident by falling 34 feet from the iron structure for the Canada Foundry Company His injuries consist of fractures to the right wrist and right elbow, also dislocation of the left wrist. He was otherwise bruised and injured about the body.

The injured man is no doubt one of the three sons of Mr. John Gilman, of Ashburnham, all of whom are in Toronto.

NEW COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

Mr. D. W. Dumble Urges the Erection of an Up-to-Date Building

Dear Sir.— I am glad to see that the School Board is considering how they can best meet the urgent demand for increased and better school accommodation.

The Menzies building was not built suitable for the purpose.

The proposed Collegiate Institute would give more than double the number of rooms in the Menzies building and better ventilated and fitted for school purposes. By taking the present Collegiate Institute for public school purposes, it would be equal to two such schools as the Menzies building and the $500 a year paid for the rent of that building would be saved, and accommodation equal to another $500 a year procured to meet the increased demand for school accommodation.

Then as to the Institute, when the present building was erected the Board had in mind that it was a temporary arrangement. The fact was that the pressure on the public schools at that time forced the Board to build, and it was thought wise to erect a building suitable for public school purposes, use it for a few years as an Institute, and when a suitable building for an Institute was provided take it back for public school purposes. This was done. The Institute was shoved out of the fine old building into the new one, and the vacant rooms were at once filled up with public school pupils. Now the time has come to give the Institute another above, and I think the Board is wise in the intention to erect a new building wholly separate from the public schools.

The Institute pays the public school for the present building occupied by them $1,100 a year. That alone represents 4 per cent. on $28,000 a year. A little more added to $28,000 would give a much more suitable building, so that the increased cost of the High School would be very small.

Any new building erected should have in it a suitable gymnasium and a suitable room where public lectures debates, etc., might be held, as in Lindsay and in other progressive towns. The fact is at last recognized that we are behind the times in that one respect.

The people of the town have in their Institute so fine a staff of teachers that they are not obliged to send their children out of town for their higher education. The rich and the poor are on a common footing and have equal advantages—the whole being a levelling, but it is levelling up for the most part, as there all classes and all creeds are brought into familial contact, and they gain most who most need.

If we are to have an Institute, let us have the best.

Your obedient servant.

D. W. DUMBLE.

Death of Mrs. Jas. Fair

After an illness of some five weeks there passed away on Thursday last another of the old residents of Cavan the beloved wife of Mr. Jas. Fair, of the first concession Deceased was born in Cavan township twenty seven years ago, being a daughter of the late John Stewart of the 4th line. At the age of twenty she became the wife of him who now mourns her loss and for over half a century they toiled together, cleared the forest from the soil, raised a family most highly respected, and as neighbor, friend, wife and mother, she who passed away, has been much beloved. To look across the lovely landscape throughout all that neighborhood from Centreville to Bethlehboro and south and west, and see the rolling grain and meadow where the giant tree held sway when Mrs. Fair was young, is to bring forcibly to the mind something of the toil and energy of our early settlers, and she who was laid to rest in St. Paul's cemetery on Saturday last was one of the makers of our Canada just as truly as was one of our political fathers. Two sons, George and Johnston, and four daughters, Mrs. Thomas McCamus, Mrs. J. McNeill, Mrs. Jas. Armstrong, and Miss Mary Fair, at home, are left to mourn the absence of a mother's smile, while the aged partner has also to journey on through his remaining days alone. A very large gathering of friends followed the remains to their last resting place on Saturday last, the Ven. Archdeacon Allen, who has been her pastor for half a century, performing the last sad rites.—Millbrook Reporter.

bread. I won't stand it, I won't. I never liked you. Now the sight of you and your airs mykes me sick! Out you go this night."

She pushed me from her, and I staggered backwards, half falling on the bed. "I will go," I gasped. "After this—I could not stay."

I got up again, feeling strangely dazed, my arms bruised, and sparks dancing before my eyes from the rough treatment I had received.

"You're too hard on her, Fan," I heard my mother plead. "She has paid her way up to now, and well, too. I'd never have charged her so much board if you hadn't made such a fuss. We've bin better off with her than without her; and though she's an aggravation there's nothing against her character. I don't care what Tom Stephens says. He's a beast to set one sister against another, anyhow. And mebbe she'll come round and see things different from what she does now."

"She goes out o' this 'ouse to-night, or I do, that's all," pronounced Fan.

I had been almost too giddy to stand at first, but now I groped to the wall, where I had hung up my hat and coat, after I had come in, hours ago.

"I—I want to go," I stammered. "Don't worry, mother. I shall be all right. I won't stoop to defend myself. And I—know people who will take me in. This must have come sooner or later, I see now. I'll write to you, and—and by and by I'll send you money, I hope. Good-bye. You have meant to be kind."

"But——" my mother had begun to falter, when Fan cut her short.

"Don't you begin with no 'buts'," she cried. "I won't 'ave 'em. I'm the breadwinner, I am. I've got the right to eye who stops or goes."

Her great black eyes dominated my mother. The girl was like some savage young animal at bay. I did not wonder that the two who knew her moods best cowered before her now. There was a look on her face, with the twitching lips apart showing strong white teeth, which said that she might do me a mischief if I defied her.

I took my mother's shaking hands and pressed them. Perhaps I ought to have kissed her, but somehow I could not. I murmured something confused about seeing her again, and then, when I had given the sobbing Totsey a fleeting embrace, I pushed blindly past the group of curious ones who had gathered in the passage; and went out into the open air.

I had told my mother that I had friends who would take me in if I asked, and I had not deliberately uttered a falsehood. I had only said the first thing that occurred to me, with the desperate impulse to escape. Indeed, there were doubtless people in the old set from which I had vanished who would receive me if I threw myself upon their kindness, but I had no intention of doing that.

Dusk was falling early, for a storm threatened. There were faint grumblings of thunder, which I was scarcely conscious of hearing. Great purple cloud-banks boiled up from the west and overspread the sky. As I ran out into the street, a big drop or two of rain splashed down upon my upturned face. The man Welcome, just coming home from his unknown "business," caught sight of me as I left the house, and I saw by his eye that it was in his mind to follow. I quickened my pace, and hurried round the corner. Then I began to run, flying through street after street until I knew that he must have lost scent. At last I stopped, bewildered and completely lost.

CHAPTER XII.

Waterloo Bridge.

It seemed to me that I had come to the end of the world—my world. Nobody wanted me. Nobody cared. It would be better if I were dead.

Rain began to pour down in sheets, and I was soon wet to the skin. The streets were emptying, for people had hurried into shelter from the storm, and only here and there could be seen an umbrella, black as a scurrying bat over the pavement, that shone with rain beneath the gas-lamps.

It occurred to me that I might stand under the protection of some doorway until the worst of the storm should be over; but in my dull despair it seemed hardly worth while to care for the wretched body which had ceased to be of importance to me or anyone else. So I went through the downpour, stolidly; and at last, when I had walked for a very long time and it was really dark, I came to a great bridge over the Thames.

It was in my way, going straight on, to come to it; and I proceeded at first steeped in the strange apathy that was part of my condition. But my eyes fell upon the black water flowing underneath, and I stopped suddenly, fascinated. It was as if someone had spoken in my ear, saying: "There's no place for you in the world. Perhaps there may be somewhere else—somewhere beyond. You could find out here."

The thunderstorm was long ago over, but rain still fell heavily and steadily. Except when an omnibus rumbled by, there was scarcely anyone on the bridge, and nobody who passed paid any attention to me, as I cowered close to the stone wall in one of the embrasures. In my black dress and hat, my slim little figure must have melted into the shadows of night.

Two forces in my nature began warring together as I looked down at the dark, flowing water, with a thought in my mind that never in my life had harbored there before.

"You are young," one voice said. "Only eighteen. It is pitiful that you, who have been petted and loved, and told that you were beautiful, should die like this. Who knows what the years may yet hold for you if you stay and see?"

But the other voice answered: "It's no use. What can a girl like you do against the world? You haven't a penny. You can't buy even a piece of bread to eat, and you can't ask for charity. You're only a little grain of dust, not of any importance at all. Thousands of girls as young as you must have died in this way. It saved

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by the Times.

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is 'phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed. Times.]

—The 57th Regt. Band played in the Victoria Park last night.

—The Battle of the Boyne, fought July 12th, 1690, 212 years ago to-day.

—East Peterborough Orangemen will celebrate at Havelock today.

—The farmers are now making hay. Last season they were harvesting wheat at this date.

—The band engaged by the Orangemen today is a scratch one, organized for the occasion.

—The rush to Stony Lake is now on Nearly all the cottages are being occupied.

—Want a hammock of the best quality and value in town? Come to Times Bookstore for it.

—Inspectors Davis and Thompson are expected here next week to inspect the steamers plying on the Otonabee.

—Mr. Stanley has kindly placed one of his best pianos at the disposal of the business men's excursion on Monday afternoon.

—Handsome boxes containing 25 sheets of paper and envelopes to match, good quality, and in all the latest shades, for only 20 cents, at Times Bookstore.

—The Toronto Star says that no one need be surprised at Lord Kitchener leaving South Africa, because he cannot take it with him.

—At the police court yesterday morning a man who was charged with being drunk was dismissed with a warning.

—A citizen appeared in the police court yesterday morning charged of keeping a dog without a license. The case was enlarged.

—Only a few more of those extra value lacrosse sticks left, and no wonder, because the price is least than half for the same stick in other stores. Times Bookstore, Market Block.

—On Monday night last, during the thunderstorm, a barn belonging to Mr. Benjamin Johnston, of Fraserville was blown down. His house also was struck by lightning.

—The delay in starting the Street Railway has been a great disappointment to many of our citizens and particularly to those who are interested in Chemong Lake.

—Religious services will be held in the pavilion at Chemong each Sunday afternoon during the summer season, commencing next Sunday, at 4 p.m.

—Another manufacturing establishment is thinking of locating in Peterborough. Our energetic Mayor and his colleagues will undoubtedly use their best efforts to secure this concern.

—The Town Council will make a conditional grant to the consumptive sanitarium. Peterborough patients are to be benefitted by the conditions under which the grant is made.

—The local Orange lodges will assemble in Central Park this morning, and after being joined by the Lakefield and Nassau sections will march to the Grand Trunk station, whence they will entrain for Lindsay at nine o'clock.

—A meeting for the purpose of forming a Peterborough and County Old Boys' Association was held in Toronto on Monday evening last. E. A. Morrison occupied the chair. An adjourned meeting will be held at St. George's Hall, on Monday evening, July 21.

—At the joint meeting of the Finance Committee of the Town Council and the Charity Board held on Thursday night it was decided to send John Evans to the House of Providence. Evans is suffering from paralysis, and was confined in the jail as a vagrant which is contrary to law.

—Miss Jennie McIntyre, daughter Mr. McIntyre, of Monoghan road, was united in matrimony on Wednesday last to Mr. John J. Stewart, formerly of Peterborough, but now a resident of North Monoghan. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Torrance. Miss Eva Elliott officiated as bridesmaid and Mr. Jas. Stewart, the groom's brother, was best man. The happy couple were the recipients of many costly presents. Mr. and Mrs. John J. Stewart will take up their residence in North Monoghan.

—County Police Magistrate Edmison held court in Norwood on Friday last when Mr. George Stevens was arraigned by the District Inspector of Weights and Measures on four separte charges for using illegal measures in buying ashes. Two of the charges were dismissed, the Magistrate holding that there was not sufficient evidence, another was heard and judgment reserved; the fourth owing to an error in making out the papers was not dealt with. Mr R. Wood acted for the defendent and Mr. E. B. Edwards acted for the prosecution.—Norwood Register.

Mr. Jas. Johnston had as close a call as anyone could have and not meet with a terrible accident on Wednesday last at the station. He went up to the station with Mrs. A. J. Johnston and children of Peterborough, who had been visiting them, and went into the coach to help them with their traps, when the train started. He hurried out, and in stepping off, slipped between the platform and the rapidly moving train. He had presence of mind enough to keep close in to the platform until the train passed out, but it is marvellous that an arm or leg was not taken off. As it was, he received a severe bruise and black eye, which bled very profusely, and a general shaking up. We are glad to congratulate Mr. Johnston on his narrow escape.—Omemee Mirror.

CECIL RHODES' WILL

Provides For Proper Food for Students

Cecil Rhodes in his late will left a bequest of $50,000 for the improvement of the high table for resident Fellows and tutors at Oriel College, Oxford.

"I am rejoiced to find that one millionaire has at last given some thought to the question of dietetics in educational institutions," says Elizabeth Cady Stanton in the New York Journal.

"One of the crying evils in our schools, colleges and universities is the bad system employed in feeding growing boys and girls.

Students, above all other classes, need plenty of good, well-cooked food and a happy state of mind in anticipation of their various meals.

Dyspepsia is one of the common diseases among the literary classes, and the foundation for this prevalent ailment is laid in our colleges and seminaries. Of what avail is a knowledge of art, science, philosophy and government when health is seriously undermined?"

All this comes from ignorance as to the kind of food element the body must have to supply and daily loss from brain work. Bacon, meat, potatoes, white bread and Bacon, bread, potatoes, white bread and coffee absolutely will not keep a hard brain worker well. A food expert perfected a perfect food for brain workers.

Not only in the schools but in the home should the food be looked after. The necessity of selecting food to supply proper nutrition to replace the daily waste of tissue of brain and nerves is of the greatest importance.

Grape-Nuts is the ideal food for young and old who use the brain actively; the diastase of the grains being perfectly developed and the starch transformed into grape sugar in the most perfect manner.

In this condition, Grape-Nuts is ready to be quickly absorbed into the blood and tissue without taxing the intestinal digestive machinery. The phosphate of potash found in the cereals is retained, and this with albumen, supplies the elements required to build the gray matter in brain and nerve centers.

Dr. Max Grossman of New York City recently called the attention of the Board of Education to the fact that "pupils of the defective class are apt to be weak physically. Temporary aberrations are often mistaken for real defects, when they are only symptoms of physical growth, of indigestion or other maladies. Indigestion has been responsible for more than one falsehood, and its cure has often been followed by a return to truthfulness."

In its predigested form, the daily use of Grape-Nuts for the cereal part of the meal, aids digestion, nourishes the body, tones up the nervous system and quickens the mental faculties.

Coffee should also be banished, for it unnaturally stimulates the brain and nerves so that proper nutrition is interfered with and they cannot get sufficient rest to take the food needed for the work they must do from day to day. For the morning beverage, Postum Food Coffee should be used in place of coffee.

Let the daily breakfast, particularly at this time of the year, consist of Grape-Nuts and cream, a little fruit, a cup of Postum Food Coffee, some whole wheat bread and possible one or two soft-boiled eggs. It is impossible to make one believe what a wonderful change in health, strength, comfort and ability comes in ten days after quitting wrong food and living on scientifically selected food.

A Fast Boat

The Peterborough Canoe Company is completing a steam launch that will be a novelty in its way. The boat is only 30 feet long by 6 feet beam, and will carry a fifty horse power boiler and engine. It will be the fastest steam launch of its size in the world, being expected to develop a speed of forty miles an hour. The launch is being built for a party in Ottawa.

A New Launch

The Peterborough Canoe Company have completed a handsome new launch for Mr. C. B. McAllister. The boat is 25 feet long by 6 foot beam and is fitted with a three horse power engine. It will be placed on the Stony Lake waters in a few days.

Wedding Bells

The wedding took place in Millbrook on Wednesday afternoon at the residence of the bride's father, of Miss Louisa Mulligan, youngest daughter of Mr. Henry Mulligan, inspector for the Midland Loan and Savings Company, to Mr. William J. The following cablegram has been received from the Casualty Department, Cape Town:—"Dangerously ill, 6th Sydenham, "E" Division, S.A.C., Ernest William Walford, enteric fever; please notify next of kin, father James Walford, Garden Hill, Ont.

The Burglars

The Belleville Intelligencer says:—"Wm. Lasher, one of the three parties who are under arrest at Port Hope on the charge of comitting burglaries in the vicinity of Port Hope, is well known to the police here. It will be remembered that a few weeks ago a car was broken into in the G. T. R. yard here and a quantity of bottled ale stolen. Three parties were arrested, two of them were sent to the Central Prison, and the third party, Wm. Lasher, of Deseronto, was allowed his liberty, as it was thought that he was led into the transaction innocently by his companions. Now he's in trouble again."

Cattle Graze on the Streets

The town has in force a bylaw prohibiting horses and cattle from running at large or grazing on the streets of Peterborough and citizens are given warning that this bylaw will be rigorously enforced. Of late complaints have been made that horses and cows are tied out on the sides of our streets for grazing purposes. In this respect the north end of the town presents the appearance of a country village rather than the outskirts of a wide-awake and progressive town. Cattle grazing on the streets not only cause a good deal of annoyance but occasionally damage to property to no small extent, and the authorities are determined to put a stop to the nuisance.

THE

TO THE PUBLIC:

Mr. H. P. Lindsay, who has represented the Temperance & General Life at Peterborough for some years, and the Manufacturers Life since the amalgamation of the two companies, has retired from the agency and we have appointed Mr. G F. Blackwell as general agent for the Peterborough district.

Until a suitable office can be arranged for, Mr. Blackwell will have his office in Room 44, National Hotel, Peterborough. At an early date organization work will be effected both in town and all parts of the county, when Mr. Blackwell will be pleased to meet any policy holder and the public in general. Any information or assistance given along this line by a policy holder, or any person desiring a local contract will be much appreciated by the management of this company and will receive Mr. Blackwell's prompt attention.

The Company desire to thank the public of Peterborough, town and county, for the manner in which they have contributed to the success of the Manufacturers Life in the past, and hope that through Mr. Blackwell you will continue your liberal patronage.

Yours truly,

J. F. JUNKIN,
Managing Director.

THE BRITISH EMPIRE NOW DOMINATES EUROPE

Her Strength and Influence Greatly Increased Since the War

A FRENCH EXPERT ON BRITAIN'S STRENGTH

Her Financial Might a Great Constructive Force—Unity Greatly Strengthened

Special to The Times.

London, July 14.—Whatever the outcome of the tribulation through which the British people are passing, the Empire stands infinitely stronger before the world to-day than ever it stood before. Splendid as the coronation of Edward might have been as a demonstration of pageantry of imperial unity, it could never have equaled the spectacle of a great people, a globe-encircling power, awaiting with bated breath day after day the fateful bulletins from Buckingham Palace. The grief of a nation is more impressive than its joy—more in what it reveals; more in what it implies; more in what it conserves.

Let Edward's life be far prolonged or not, his illness came at a moment when its moral effect on his subjects would most powerfully supplement the material forces that are raising Britain to the dominant position in old world politics.

UNITY STRENGTHENED.

Continental opinion now grudgingly but explicitly admits that the events of the last three years, instead of limiting or diminishing British dominion, have extended and confirmed it. Dr. Delbrueck, one of the ablest Prussian writers on the art of war, declares that "England to-day is only held in bounds abroad by the possibility of a European coalition threatening her at home." He emphasizes the fact that she will soon be in a position to appear on any trans-oceanic battleground with 100,000 veteran troops of the best class, and he declares that not even Germany is not in a position to do as well.

Discussing the same topic in the Temps, a French military writer says: "Facts speak for themselve. England was caught unawares by the Boers, and has paid the price Kruger exacted for her unpreparedness. But what of it? Her military organization has been transformed by the war, and will soon be equal to any demands that could be made upon it. No longer are the English a nation of seamen; henceforth they will be soldiers also. Who shall say what England may not yet attempt if she is not held in check by Europe?"

TALK OF COALITION.

Dreams of a continental combination against Britain still visit the slumbers of some shallow thinkers, just as visions of a European trade coalition against the United States flit before the eyes of Count Goluchowski. But trade is no more disturbed by such threats than Washington. Neither of the English-speaking powers cares a straw for plots which could do no harm to the one unless the other were to join the conspiracy. Danger to Britain lies not that way, despite Prussian publicists and the Temps.

It would not be possible, as the powers are grouped to-day, to find one of them who is more anxious to seek a better understanding with Britain than to line up with her. France and Germany have more to gain by courting than by antagonizing her, and there is no continental state that does not see in some continental rival a potentiality more menacing than Britain. Irresponsible journalism may sing a warlike song at Albion's expense, but the men who really direct affairs at Berlin, Paris and Great Britain know better than to foster coalition delusions.

BRITAIN'S FINANCIAL MIGHT.

Britain's magnificent financial condition is another of the constructive forces making for her old world dominance. Continental observers concede that too. Lord Goschen's fresh exposition of British credit has called fresh attention to this factor of imperial strength. Britain has spent $800,000,000 in less than three years, and has borrowed three quarters of it. Yet the British government can borrow all the money it wants at nearly par for 2 1-2 per cent.

One of the costliest wars in which a European state was ever involved has been carried through successfully by Britain with scarcely the slightest tension in the national credit. She still commands all the sinews of war. She is still invited to use to the uttermost all the advantages offered by loanable capital throughout the world. To cap the climax, the United States has taken a share of the British war loan. Even with payment of the national debt suspended, concols are 13 points higher than they were in 1888. Could there be more convincing proof of the financial strength of the British Empire.

MORAL INDORSEMENT FELT.

Truthfully does the Morning Post observe: "In no spirit of vain boasting Britons may rest with confidence upon the foundations of their power. 'We have the ships, the men, we have the money, too.' If we ever need help we shall get it, and without the asking, from the invincible republic of the West. Whoever reigns, the British people rule.

Beyond all questionable theory that despite differences in their governing and social systems, Britain and America stand and will stand together for certain high political doctrines which operate to strengthen mightily the British position. After all it is the moral indorsement that makes Britain formidable to continental Europe.

A ROYAL WEDDING IN MONTENEGRO

IMPORTANT POLITICAL MATCH

An Event of Considerable Interest to the People of the East

Special to The Times.

Vienna, July 13.—A dispatch from Cettinje says: The simple folk of the Black Mountain are rejoicing today after their own peculiar fashion, and the welkin is resonant with the sharp and stunning reports of rifles, muskets and revolvers. Old and young, men and boys, gather in street and village, and on the mountains, and by the crack and pink of fire arms give expression to their joy as long as ammunition lasts. In the afternoon and evening, when the cartridges are spent, they will gather in front of the royal palace, a term which gives an adequate idea of the sedate farmhouse occupied by the Montenegrin royal family, and there they will shout their zivios, and even plunge into that measured excitement of the national dance, the kolo.

The cause of these popular rejoicings is to be found in the fact that tomorrow Prince Mirko, second son of the Montenegrin ruler, will marry Mlle. Natalie Constantinovitch. Prince Mirko has inherited the beaty of his mother, considered, not only in her youth, but even now, the handsomest woman in the land. He is a tall young man of 24, a typical Petrovitch, and very accomplished. His tastes run to music (he composes and plays well) and bacteriology. He has a large palace near Podgorica in the fertile valley of the Zeta, of which province he is the voivoda or duke.

His bride is just 17, tall, slender and a blonde. At home she is known as Lily. Prince Mirko met her only a few months ago in Vienna, and fell in love at once. Her father, Colonel Constantinovitch, saw much service under Prince Alexander of Battenburg.

Marriage is a peculiar institution in Montenegro, and it is to be hoped that the fair bride will not be subject to the same humiliating customs as are the rest of her sex in the little mountain principality. When married, a woman may not sit at her husband's table when he has guests, but must take her meals street, he passes her by as a stranger, or, if after some days of separation, they in the kitchen. If he meet her in the meet in public, she will not dare to greet him with a kiss on the mouth, but in token of subjection she will kiss twice above and below the elbow the arm he thrusts out to her in condescension. It is true, however, that the position of women of the better class is improving, for there is already a college, presided over by a Russian lady, in Cettinje, and the daughters of the rich attend. But they are few, and their privileges without precedent.

Politics in Montenegrin Wedding

Paris, July 13.—Much interest is manifested here in the marriage of Prince Mirko of Montenegro and Mlle. Natalie Constantinovitch, which is to take place tomorrow.

It was believed at one time that the young Prince would persist in his desire to wed Letitia Bonaparte, widow of the Duke of Aosta. But reasons of state prevailed, and thhe handsome young Prince was induced to give up the Duchess Letitia, who, by the way, was fifteen years his senior.

From a political point of view his union with Mlle. Constantinovitch is a far better match. In fact, the marriage tomorrow will mark a definite point in the history of the races of the Balkan peninsula. There are five States which have in this century been carved out of the Ottoman Empire, one of them Roumania, Greece and Bulgaria are governed by foreign dynasties closely connected with the great reigning families of Europe. Only Servia and Montenegro are governed by native dynasties, neither of which was related to the imperial families of Europe until the comparatively recent weddings of the Princess Helene of Montenegro with the young King of Italy, and of the Crown Prince of Montenegro with the Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz. Having strengthened his position by these alliances the astute Prince Nicholas, ruler of the principality, looked out for a consort for his second son, and at the same time with an eye on the future prosperity of his country. During recent years he has often cast an eye across the barren mountains of his own principality to the fertile plains adjoining. He would like nothing better than to see his son Mirko ruling over a neighboring kingdom so desirable as Servia. Circumstances strengthened Prince Nicholas' hopes. For is not Servia unaccountably cursed as regards an heir to its throne? Queen Draga is childless. The principal Servian pretender, Karageorgeevitch, an old man and a bookworm, prefers not to leave his quiet library in Lucerene to rule over chaotic Servia. His two sons have been educated for a military creer in Russia. Still another pretender, Prince Alexander Karageorgevitch, prefers Paris to Belgrade. Therefore Prince Nicholas believes, not without apparent reason, the day is approaching when there will be a greater Servia controlled by two of his sons. The alliance of Prince Mirko with a daughter of one of the most popular families of Servia certainly seems to strengthen the situation. The young Montenegrin prince, indeed, may find the future made for him in less time than his father had dared to think, for the report comes that King Alexander's throne even now is tottering and Servia may soon be searching for a new and more popular ruler.

THE CEREAL COMPANY'S DAM.

Contract Let for the Big Dam on the Otonabee River

The Cereal Company has let the contarct for the construction of its big concrete dam ont he Otonabee River to Mr. O'Toole, of Ottawa, and the work will being at once.

The new dam will be a massive one, the piers being 26 feet in length and 25 feet high. It will be built so as to serve the purpose of a railway bridge as well as a dam. The new power house is also to be built. The excavating of the tail race, will, it is expected, be a work, which will involve a great deal of labor as the rock blasting, which will be necessary, will be very extensive.

Mr. O'Toole has had a large experinece in handling big contracts, having been engaged on the Soulanges canal and other Government works of that character.

RARE CHANCE TO INVEST

American Cotton Company's Sale of Debenture Bonds

We call the attention of investors to the announcement of the American Cotton Company in this issue of The Times The people identified with the Company is a sufficient guarantee of the safety of the proposition. They include some of the strongest men in the United States Hon. Cornelius N. Bliss, ex-Secretary of the Interior, and one of the most conservative and ablest men in New York. He, with Mr. Cannon, of the Fourth National Bank, and Mr. Case, President of the Company, dictate the policy of the management. Mr. Case was formerly a partner with Mr. Andrew Carnegie, of the Carnegie Steel Company, prior to its consolidation with the United States Steel Company, at which time, of course, Mr. Case and his other partners retired from active business. Mr. Case is one of the ablest business men of the day. Mr. Wm C. Lovering, Vice-President, is at present Congressman from Massachusetts at Washington, and has for years been interested in the cotton mills of New England. Mr. Tener, Vice-President and Treasurer, was also a partner with Mr. Carnegie.

There is no better or safer investment ever offered than this.

INSULTS OF GERMANY REMEMBERED BY BRITAIN

Vienna Paper Says Emperor William Is Aware of Bitter Feeling in England

London, July 12.—Advices from Vienna state that the Information assumes that Emperor William's manifestations of regard for his royal uncle (King Edward) are not wholly sentimental "Probably," says the paper, "the Kaiser is led by political motives to make such violent efforts to get at the King. The Emperor is under no delusion regarding the bitter feeling against Germany in Great Britain. Whoever Salisbury's successor in Premiership may be, Balfour, Duke of Devonshire, or Chamberlain, he will certainly be less Germanophile than the present Prime Minister. Emperor William is trying to sultivate British sympathies while the opporperor William is trying to cultvate Bismarck's maxim, that Germany can only pursue a transoceanic policy in agreement with Great Britain, but it is not certain that he will succeed increating a more favorable feeling in London. "The British Court" continues Information, "is as Germanophile as ever, King Edward, referring to the tradition followed by his mother but the sentiment of the country is quite different. Cuspidores decorated with portraits of Chamberlain, pictures of Cecil Rhodes being hanged and of Roberts being kicked by the Boers, and picture postal cards representing British soldiers flogging Boer women, the circulation of which the German postoffice allowed, will not easily be forgotten by the British people."

ANGLOPHOBIA IN FRANCE.

Special to The Times.

London, July 12—A despatch from Paris to The Times says that probably the arrival of Ras Makonnen in the French capital today will be the signal for a "popular" demonstration, in which respect and curiosity will be mingled with certain elements of national anglophobia. Since the lose of the South African war, a little coterie of professional firebrands has been seeking a fresh pretext for an agitation. Ras Makonnen, who arrives on the eve of the great national review at Long Champs, is already known in France as the promoter of the treaties of 1894 and '95, which heralded the agreement between France and Abyssinia. His services were thought to be valuable at the time of the march of Explorer Bouchamps toward the Nile, where it was expected Bouchand would meet Marchand and solve by backstairs policy the Egyptian question. The "futile white flag of Fashoda," says the correspondent, is likely to be displayed.. Already Ras Makonnen has been compared to Hannibal

PANAMA CANAL WITHOTU LOCKS.

Special to The Times.

London, July 12.—According to an article in the Paris Figaro, Charles De Lesseps believes Americans will complete the Panama Canal without locks. He says public opinion has forced the French company to agree to construct a canal with locks, but Americans, having freedom of action will decide on a bolders course. De Lesseps thinks the canal may be opened for traffic in six years time..

SUSPICIOUS OF GERMANY.

Special to The Times.

London, July 12—A St. Petersburg correspondent says that leading Russian journals regard King Victor Emanuel's visit to St. Petersburg, as showing that the Triple Alliance is not directed against Russia. The correspondent says this is true enough but the King's visit was hardly needed to show it, for Count Von Buelow is always saying that the chief object of the German foreign policy is to maintain friendship with Russia. However, the Russian press has invariably displayed great skepticism in regard to the sincerity of frequent and effusive assurances of German friendship.

CONQUEROR OF BOERS GREETED IN LONDON

Enthusiastic Reception Accorded Lord Kitchener on his Return from South Africa

Southampton, July 12.—The Pacific Steam Navigation Company's steamer Orotava, which left Cape Town June 23 with Lord Kitchener and staff on board, arrived here at half past eight o'clock this morning. Owing to the fact that Major Gordon, who also was a passenger on the steamer, had been stricken with smallpox, Lord Kitchener and his staff only were allowed to land. The Orotava has been placed in quarantine.

Lord Kitchener lanued at 9.15 a.m. He was accorded a magnificent welcome from a huge throng of people After a brief official reception at the docks the general was driven through the decorated and crowded streets to Hartley Hall, where he received an address from the Chamber of Commerce, expressing admiration of the generalship, resource and skill which he had shown in South Africa, and hoping that the peace which he had secured would be lasting and mark the beginning of a new epoch in prosperity and commercial development throughout the Empire.

In reply, Lord Kitchener declared that whatever success had been achieved was due to the rank and file of the army. He thanked those who had looked after the friends and relatives of those left behind in Southh Africa.

In response to clamorous calls for General French and General Ian Hamilton they also spoke the former remarking that they had throughout been inspired by the example of their chiefs.

The freedom of the borough was conferred on Lord Kitchener and the party was then obliged to hurry away in order to meet their London engagements. The progress of Lord Kitchener and his companions to the railroad station was marked by scenes of remarkable enthusiasm.

ARRIVAL IN LONDON.

Lord Kitchener reached London at 12.48 p.m. His progress through the Metropolis after three years absence at the Boer war was one of the most memorable of the many remarkable of the past three years. The small procession of carriages containing the general and his staff, in simple, the serviceable veldt-dress, lacked spectacular features, but evidently, the crowd was there in its tens of thousands to see the man-of-the-hour and not a pageant. From the moment he set foot in London to the time of his disappearance beneath the portal of St. James' Palace, he was the object of such an outburst of popular enthusiasm as to quite overshadow the demonstration on previous and similar occasions. The platform at Paddington Railroad Station, when Kitchener arrived, looked more like a reception room of the War Office or India Office than a railroad station. It was covered with red carpets, and decorated with a profusion of flowers and palms, while rows of decorated stands, crowded with spectators, had been erected at all parts from which a view of the returning general could be obtained. The platform itself was crowded with distinguished personages, including Indian princes in resplendent costume, generals and other officers in full uniform, and many ladies in beautiful summer dresses. The Prince of Wales, the Duke of Connaught, the Duke of Cambridge, who is now very firm, Lord Roberts, the Commander-in-Chief, Lord Lansdowne, Foreign Secretary, Mr. Brodick, the War Secretary;; the Duchess of Somerset, Lady Roberts, Lady French Major-General Sir Francis R. Wingate, who succeeded Kitchener as Sirdar of the Egyptian army, and Governor-General of the Soudan, and Major-General Slatin Pacha, British Inspector General of the Soudan, were among those who assembled to greet the general.

TREMENDOUS CHEERS.

When Lord Kitchener's train arrived punctual to the minute, a tremendous cheer greeted the latest hero as he emerged from his car and shook hands with the Prince of Wales. He stood head and shoulders above nearly every one on the platform and his workmanlike khaki uniform, with the large brown sun helmet, made familiar by his pictures, was in striking contrast to the glittering uniforms and rows of medals and orders worn by most of those in waiting. The reception lasted ten or fifteen minutes, when the Prince of Wales and other members of the Royal family drove off. After an interval, Lord Kitchener and Generals French and Ian Hamilton took seats in one of the Royal carriages, and, followed by the brilliant headquarters staff, headed by Lord Roberts and an escort, left the station amidst loud cheers from those in which grew into a perfect roar as Kitchener and his companions came in sight of the great gathering outside.

THE ADDRESSES.

In spite of his hatred of "palavar" the General was obligid to submit to the presentation of welcoming addresses at Paddington and other points on his way to St. James' Palace, but his replies were cut as short as politeness permitted and he showed evident signs of relief when the procession re-started. The route throughout was decorated with Venitian masts, banners, flags and streamers, with mottoes of welcome, the house fronts were draped and troops lined most of the way, colonials and Indian soldiers being utilized as well as the local regiment. Every vantage point, even to the house tops, was occupied by sightseers, and solid masses of people gathered in all the open spots, such as Hyde Park corner and the space in front of Buckingham Palace, while the sidewalks, stands, windows and roofs were packed with gaily dressed spectators, who waved flags, hats and handkerchiefs, and shouted with a warmth that showed their hearts were in the welcome.

At Victoria Gate the Mayor of Westminster presented an address to the national hero, expressing high admiration of his tenacious genius, indomitable energy and devotion to duty and Kitchener, with the brevity habitual to him, uttered ten words of thanks and drove off.

LOCKMASTER COLLINS HONORED

He is Presented With a Purse by Steamboat Men.

On Saturday morning Mr. Wm. Collins, the popular lockmaster, was presented with a well filled purse, and an address by the owners of steamboats plying on the Otonabee River. The affair took place in the parlors of the Morgan House. The address was as follows:

William Collins, Esq.,
Secretary Farmer's Institute and Lockmaster,

We, the undersigned owners of steamboats plying on the Otonabee and Trent Rivers, and Rice Lake, being aware of the indefatigable efforts put forth by you in order to make the Farmer's Institute picnic such a marked success this season at Jubilee Point, and also on account of the many acts of courtesy extended to the crews of the different steamers in your official capacity of lockmaster, respectfully request your acceptance of the accompanying purse as a slight token of our appreciation of your valuable assistance in both the above capacities.

Wishing you many years of health, happiness and prosperity, that you may long enjoy your present position, with the same satisfaction in the future as that we have experienced in the past with like credit to yourself.

Signed on behalf of the steamboat owner.

H. CALCUTT, Steamers City of Peterborough," and "Water Lily."
THOMAS HARRIS, Steamer "Beaver."
F. BURNETT, Steamer "Rainbow."
W. C. HARRIS, Steamer "North Star."
DAN FOLEY, Manager Jubilee Point Hotel.

Peterborough, July 12th, 1902.

The address was read by Mr. Jas. Drain, as representative of Calcutt's Line of Steamers, on behalf of the steamer owners, and the purse was presented by Captain Wilbert C. Harris, of the North Star.

Mr. Collins made a brief but eloquent reply in which he expressed his gratitude. In doing so he referred to the pleasant feeling that had always existed between himself and the steamboat men of the Otonabee, he had ever been kindly treated.

The Times joins Mr. Collins' many friends in extending its hearty congratulations.

Nervous, Sleepless and Exhausted

Not sick enough to lay up, but you are out of sorts, blood is weak, nerves unstrung, kidneys deranged, vitality is low. Ferrozone will renew your appetite and digestion, make you sleep soundly—in fact will make you well. Price 50 cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50; at druggists, or Ormond & Walsh's.

COMPLEXION AND FOOD

Many Grain Foods Have Tendency to Disfigure the Face

Malt Breakfast Food

Promotes Healthy Circulation, Perfect Digestion and a Clear Complexion

Complexion—a good complexion—very largely depends upon the character of food used from day to day. Some grain foods used at the morning meal produce roughness and redness of the skin, as well as unsightly eruptions. Some foods act upon the blood in such a way that sallowness becomes very pronounced, and the eyes lose luster and brightness.

The use of Malt Breakfast Food guarantees a clear, clean and healthful complexion, with sparkling eyes, perfect digestion and circulation. Thousands have given up the use of blood-heating oatmeal, and by using Malt Breakfast Food have secured pure, life-giving blood and a good complexion. Prove it for yourself. Grocers everywhere.

Speedy Cure for Cramps and Colic

The most reliable cure for cramps, colic, dysentery and summer complaint is ten drops of Polson's Nerviline in a little sweetened water. Nerviline removes the pain and distress at once, insures prompt relief and a speedy cure in all cases. Nerviline is an excellent remedy for all pain, whether internal or external, and should be in every household. All druggists sell and recommend Nerviline. Price 25 cents.

GOOD APPLE CROP

Heavy Export Trade Expected in Early Varieties

Reports to the department of agriculture at Ottawa, state that the prospects are good for a fairly large crop of early apples in Canada. Red Astrachans, St. Lawrence and similar varieties will be abundant enough to provide a comparatively large quantity for export.

By arrangement with the department several steamers of the different lines have been fitted for the circulation of cooled air through the spaces where cheese and apples are to be carried. The more tender varieties of appples would go into the regular cold storage compartments, those in firmer condition could be carried in the cooled air chambers. Apple shippers who intend to ship such varieties would do well to communicate with the commissioner of agriculture at Ottawa, as the department is willing to co-operate as far as possible with the shippers to secure accommodation in the cooled air space or in the regular cold storage chambers for the delivery of the fruit in the very best condition in the markets of the United Kingdom.

WAR ON THE TRUSTS

A political party in opposition is always more dependent on a cry than the party in power. They want to put the other fellows out, and naturally they are expected to say why. The party in power wants to stay in, but is not called upon, in the same way, to justify that very natural feeling. It is becoming increasingly difficult, however, as we explained a short time ago, for oppositions to have a distinct policy of their own; seeing that the party in power is on the watch all the time to appropriate any policy that is likely to prove popular. The Democrats in the United States are today in the difficult position we have described. The only thing they are able to think of that can be used as a cry in opposition to the Trusts; but no sooner have they begun to appeal to the country vigorously on this line than it is announced that President Roosevelt is very strongly impressed with the necessity of curbing the Trusts, and that he and his Attorney-General are deep in the consideration of some drastic measure for that purpose. The only advantage the Democrats possess is that they are free to attack the tariff, which gives so mighty an advantage to the Trusts, while President Roosevelt is not. The tariff to him is something almost sacred, a sort of Ark of the Covenant for the people of the United States.

A PLAGUE IN UTAH

Grasshoppers are one dollar a bushel in San Pete County, Utah. They are in myriads, and darken the sun for an area of 1,300 square miles. Starvation stares the people in the face, owing to ravages of the pest. Sections of soil under microscopic test show seventy-six grasshopper eggs deposited in a piece only two inches square. This is the situation in an entire mountain-wall valley, including fifteen prosperous towns, having a combined population of 30,000 people. The grasshoppers are everywhere that they can crawl or fly, and have destroyed the wheat and oat fields, and will soon strip the grasses and trees of every sign of vegetation. Great dusty clouds hang over the green spots, and gently wave in the mountain winds. Suddenly the living mass drops to the ground, and the vegetation is no more. The average daily harvest of men and women, ranges about thirty bushels of hopping, squirming and jumping insects. These are held in "gunny sacks" and measured or guessed as to quantity, and the money paid without a murmur. Business men and farmers have contributed to a fund for the extermination of the hoppers, and have all the people they can secure at work picking them from the grain fields. When a collection of sacks is made, the mass is burned on the streets, amid the shouts of young and old, gathered around the bonfires. San Pete County is one of the richest agricultural sections of the state. It is often referred to as "the granary of Utah" because of the immense crops of wheat, oats and barley harvested. It occupies one great irrigated field, sixty miles long and thirty miles wide, surrounded by snow-clad mountains of the Wasatch Range on the east side and the Oquirrh spurs on the west. It stands at an altitude of 6,000 feet, and is noted for its fertile soil.

PROPHETIC

"When this union takes place we will be at the outset no inconsiderable people, and I am proud to believe that our desire for permanent alliance will be reciprocated in England.

"I know that there is a party in England—inconsiderable in numbers, though strong in intellect and power—which speaks of the desirability of getting rid of her colonies; but I believe it will never be the deliberately expressed determination of the Government of Great Britain.

"The colonies are now in a transition state. Gradually a different colonial system is being developed, and it will become year by year, less a case of dependence on our part, and of overruling protection on the part of the Mother Country, and more a case of healthy and cordial alliance.

Instead of looking upon us as a merely dependant colony, England will have in us a friendly nation, to stand by her in North America, in peace or in war

"The people of Australia will be such another subordinate nation.

And England will have this advantage of her colonies' progress under the new colonial system, as I believe they will, that though at war with all the rest of the world, she will be able to look to the nations in alliance with her, and owning allegiance to the same sovereign to assist in enabling her to meet the whole world in arms, as she has done before.

"If in the great Napoleonic war with every part of Europe closed against her commerce, she was yet able to hold her own, how much more will that be the case when she has a Colonial Empire rapidly increasing in power, in wealth, in influence and in position?"—Sir John Macdonald, in the Confederation debate.

Miss Floretta Vining, a well-known Bostonian declares that the dissipations of the women of that city are shocking in the extreme, and adds:—"I know men who have to take up the daily papers to know where their wives are. I am simply paralyzed by what I see and know about the great use of intoxicating liquors by young women." She adds:—"It is simply appalling, the habits of young women nowadays. Swearing, too, is now common among women." In other words, they say such things and do such things in Boston that we'll not go there any more!

Botha, De Wet and Delarey, according to the first names, are to tour Europe, England and America, "to collect funds in behalf of the Boers who were ruined by the war, and widows, orphans and cripples. This should afford a capital chance for W. T. Stead and his disciples to prove their practical sympathy for the suffering Boer by putting up some of their surplus cash. But we venture the prediction that it will be an instance, rather, of shut-up. If funds are contributed in Britain for such a purpose—and they will be if the projected appeal is made—the fighting tories will put up pounds for the pence of the peace-at-any-price party.

George A. Treadwell Mining Company

27 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK. JEROME, ARIZONA.

Capital - - - - $3,000,000.

VALUE OF SHARES $10.

In a suit recently tried in the New York courts it was proved from the books of the United Verde Copper Company and the sworn testimony of the bookkeepers that the cost to that company of producing copper was only three and a half cents a pound, not counting the gold and silver values, which—allowed for—reduced the cost to a still lower figure.

Nowhere outside the Verde Copper Belt in Yavapai County, Arizona, is copper produced in quantities for less than twice this cost.

The United Verde has about two hundred acres on the north end of the Belt and the George A. Treadwell Company has several times as much in the central and southern parts of the Belt. The conditions along the whole Belt are entirely similar. We already have three mines developed—the Cliff, Brookshire and Iron Queen—one of which, the Cliff, seems to be larger and better than the United Verde, and the other two at least approach it in magnitude and value, while we have several others, including Badger, Pastime, Green Monster and Spoke and Stonewall, which, though less developed, are equally promising.

Professor Treadwell believes we have at least half a dozen United Verdes within the broad and extensive limits of our holdings.

As soon as our smelter plant which is now in process of erection, is completed, we can certainly produce copper as cheap as our rich neighbor on the north.

The United Verde for several years has produced one-tenth the copper of the world. When our plants are fully installed we expect the Verde Belt to produce one-half the copper of the world, and the George A. Treadwell Mining Company will be prepared to do more than its full share.

Before investing in copper in unproved localities, consider the stock of the George A Treadwell Mining Company, named after the great pioneer and explorer of the Verde Belt and owning the largest and best aggregation of properties on it.

The price of the stock is $11 a share. Make checks payable to The order of the company and send them to 27 William Street New York

Curiosities of Book Sales.

Commenting on the phenomenal sale of some recent novels, a correspondent of the "Book Buyer" writes interestingly of notable books that years ago were popular, but since have become practically unknown. He says:

There was once a very popular preacher who wrote many books, and for every one there was a large demand on the day of publication. But most of them passed out of print while he was still living, and I doubt if a single one of them is now kept in stock by any bookstore. Not many years ago appeared a book which the laboring classes and the tenement-house population bought so eagerly as to run the sale into the hundreds of thousands, because they thought it showed how an equal distribution of all property might be brought about. Now it appears to be dead. Helper's "Impending Crisis" attained a sale of 140,000 copies, forty years ago, which was as great an achievement as half a million would be to-day. That was because of its bearing on burning political questions and the fact that it was systematically attacked in Congress. Now you can occasionally find a stray copy of it in a second-hand shop. Tourgee's "Fool's Errand," twenty years later, reached about the same circulation. For purposes of comparison, this and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" would seem to be closely analogous. But while the "Fool's Errand" has almost, if not quite, gone out of circulation, Mrs. Stowe's great novel, thirty years older, still sells largely in several editions, and at many libraries is called for more frequently than any other book. Mrs. Stephens' "Fashion and Famine" was the best selling novel of its day, and three translations of it were published in France. But to-day it is difficult to find a copy of it anywhere except in the lumber-room of a public library. Another example may be seen in the sudden popularity and subsequent deadness of "Robert Elsmere," the author of which is still writing successful books. Were it not that it might seem like telling tales out of school, something could be said of certain books that have begun life with a phenomenal sale, which has stopped suddenly and unaccountably, as if at some mysterious signal.

For the reverse of the picture, the most notable example is afforded by "Ben Hur." This book had no sale worth mentioning for a year after its publication, and was considered dead. Now it is said to have attained a circulation surpassing that of any other American novel, with the single exception of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Someone might prepare a curious and entertaining article on three classes of books in light literature: 1. Those that have had an immediate large sale, and have then gone to oblivion. 2. Those that have had no sale at first, but afterward have met with large success. 3. Those that have been popular at the start and never lost their popularity. The first class would be the largest. Probably the second class would be the smallest. Two that would shine in the third are the "Autocrat at the Breakfast Table" and "Reveries of a Bachelor."

The Making of Anagrams.

Apropos the renewal of the Shakespeare-Bacon controversy, an article by William Sheppard in the "Era" on the making of anagrams is enlightening. "A correspondent has asked me," says Mr. Sheppard, "to furnish him with some good anagrams on the names of famous people. He further informs me that he has spent a good deal of time trying to make an acceptable anagram on the United States, and has failed to do so. With reference to this failure, I would remind him that he must not be discouraged. The task he has attempted is an enormous one. United States has just a dozen letters. Now, mathematicians will tell him that a dozen letters will admit of seven thousand and twenty-nine millions (7,029,000,000) of possible transpositions. Old Camden has vividly described the vexation of soul undergone by anagrammatists when oft-repeated effort, with an oft-repeated approximation to success, have finally resulted in loss of time and labor: 'Some have been seen,' he says, 'to bite their pens, scratch their heads, bend their brows, bite their lips, beat their board, their paper, when they were fair for somewhat and caught nothing herein.' Again, let him comfort himself by the reflection that no one has yet succeeded in making a good English anagram on United States. Anagrammatists have been forced to fall back upon the more fluent and manageable Latin. It has been discovered that the letters forming United States may be transposed into the following Latin words:

In te deus stat. "God stands in thee."

Inde tutus stat. "Hence thou standest safely."

Dentatus est. "He has teeth," the "he" evidently referring to Uncle Sam.

Desiste, nutat! "Hands off, he shakes!" a sentiment which may have been applicable in 1861, when it was made, but is now, thank Heaven, without meaning or point.

Siste, nudat te. "Stop, he strips thee," which might be revived to-day by the Anti-Imperialists in their warnings to our new subjects in Cuba and the Philippines.

A te desistunt. "They leap off from thee," which is exactly the attitude which the anti's wish the United States to assume towards Cuba and the Philippines.

In Desperation.

The European king sighed and stirred uneasily. "My subjects," he exclaimed, "are getting so enlightened, so imbued with the ideas of democracy, that they no longer fawn upon me, toady to me. There's only one thing for me to do to relieve this monotony. I must visit America."—"Town Topics."

A Phenomenon of Sleep.

He had come on her dozing in a hammock, and when she woke up she accused him of stealing a kiss. "Well," he said, "I will admit that the temptation was too strong to be resisted. I did steal one little kiss." "One!" she exclaimed, indignantly; "I counted eight before I woke up."—"Household Words."

REVOLUTIONISTS ROUT VENEZUELAN ARMY

Crushing Defeat of 3,000 Government Troops—President Castro Hurrying to Take Command

Willemstad, Curacao, July 12.—News reached here to-day from Venezuela that 3,000 Government troops under Gen Modesto Castro, the President's brother, were completely routed July 3rd, between Barcelona and Aragua by revolutionary troops, under command of Gen. Rolando.

The Government forces lost all their ammunition and eqipment. Many of the soldiers deserted to the revolutionists during the engagement.

After the battle the revolutionary army surrounded Barcelona. The inhabitants of the city were panic-stricken, the shops were closed and the streets were barricaded.

President Castro left Caracas yesterday, taking with him his private guard of 500 veteran soldiers and Gen. Ferrer, as chief of staff. The President of La Guayra last night embarked on the steamer Ossun for Guanta or Barcelona, 150 miles east of La Guayra. It was his purpose to reorgan so the Government forces at Barcelona, and personally lead them against the revolutionists. The step taken is considered extremely perilous.

WAS JUST AS OLD AS THE U. S.

Death of a Tennessee Negro Who Was Born on July 4, 1776

Knoxville, Tenn., July 11.—Ferry Cheaney, the oldest man in Tennessee, and perhaps the oldest in the United States, died at his home on the summit of Copper Ridge, on July 4th, at the age of 126 years, the day of his death being his birthday.

Chesney was born in Virginia on July 4th, 1776, the day independence was declared. As a slave he belonged to Jonathan Jackson, at Clarksville, on the Roanoke river. When he was twelve years old he was thrown into the presence of George Washington, while attending his master.

For fifty years he had lived a hermit's life, and it was four days after his death when his body was discovered.

THE HAY CROP

Reports Say That Never Before Was Ther Such Growth

Farmers in the neighborhood of Peterborough never before had such a hay crop as this year, but, unfortunately, the weather has been the worst possible for the cutting, curing and stocking of it. For four weeks or more now it has rained more or less, nearly every day. The consequence is that while the crop has been very satisfactory in every respect, the opportunities for harvesting it have been of the poorest, and we are sorry to learn that a great many fields that have been cut and where the hay was on the ground for curing have been damaged to such an extent by the wet that the hay will not bring more than half its value even if it brings that. In some sections of the country, where the hay had been put in barns, it was found necessary to have it taken out, on account of overheating. The farmers who have been fortunate enough to have a late crop will probably be in the best position, although there is uncertainty even yet that the wet season is completed, for all yesterday there was more or less thunder in the air around Toronto, and in other portions of the province. Some of the advices received by the Times are to the effect that between here and Toronto quite a number of hay fields are totally under water. The prospects of $4 a ton hay for feeding purposes next spring are not so bright as they were 10 or 12 days ago.

AN AWFUL WEAPON

Col. Humbert, a French artillery officer of considerable technical knowledge and experience, announced lately that he has invented a practical apparatus which, applied to firearms, large and small, from the huge cannon down to the light pistol, can suppress not only all trace of smoke, but the flash and report as well. It is hardly necessary to dwell on the importance of such a discovery, which, as the gallant gunner points out, may have the eventual effect of rendering the dream of universal peace a happy reality. In Col. Humbert's own words, the matter is thus described: After very many experiments I have succeeded in constructing an apparatus which, applied to the gun at the moment when it is wanted, completely suppresses the flash, the sound and the smoke, even of black gunpowder. There is no longer any ebranlement of the air at the muzzle of the gun. My apparatus is of simple make, of easy and quick adaption, and inexpensive. It works thoroughly well, is very strong, and does not require any previous instruction for its use. It can be moved about, and can be applied to the arm when it is needed without any difficulty. It can be at once used for pistols, rifles and mitrailleuses. Its construction for big guns presents no difficulty. The methods of war in the twentieth century and the mode of fighting will differ totally from those hitherto witnessed.

A Fitting Response

A donkey stepped into a Peterborough merchant's store the other day and asked for the proprietor, who walked out of his private office to meet him, but was surprised to see a donkey in the store.

"Why are you here?" he asked. "You know that this is no place for a donkey."

"I am here," said the donkey, "because I saw your advertisement on the fence that surrounds my pasture. I know that you, too, must be a donkey, or you would have placed the advertisement in The Times, Peterborough's brightest and best daily newspaper, that everybody reads, and where it would be read by people not donkeys. Being lonesome to-day I thought I would be neighborly and call on you."

The No Breakfast League.

Certain good people of Chicago have started a "No Breakfast League," the idea being that breakfast is a frivolous and unnecessary institution, and ought to be suppressed. People, they say, can work better and enjoy greater health by starting for the city in the morning without breakfast. On your way to the station you drink in the free air of heaven; and as you sit in the train you buckle up your waistcoat band another inch or two and feel a new man.

There has been for many years a "No Breakfast League" in everything but the name; although the members of the League do not brag about their connection with it. After what is popularly known as a "thick" night, breakfast has no charms whatever for the practised drinker. Perhaps this is the idea of the League. At any rate, anybody can start in the no-breakfast business for himself at any time. All you have to do is to mix your drinks judiciously the night before, so that you will wake up in the morning with a copper-colored taste in the mouth and general feeling that eating is a low and degrading habit anyhow. At such times even a sight of the breakfast ham gives you a dull, hard feeling in the chest; and when that stage is reached you will be a No Breakfaster of the first water.

More than likely, however, that the Chicago No Breakfasters are just the ordinary run of food cranks. If there is one thing in this world that you cannot prudently do, it is to advise your neighbor as to his dietary. And, as a natural consequence, we all think we know what is good and what is bad in the way of meals for the people. One man will tackle a breakfast big enough to make a dinner for three people, and if he hears that his neighbor's breakfast is limited to a slice of toast and a cup of tea, he at once predicts a lowered vitality and an early death. The tea and toast man, on the other hand, will no doubt hold that his neighbor is killing himself by inches with those heavy breakfasts; whereas, in these matters, it seems to be most true that every man is the best judge of what is good for himself. It is very likely that a breakfast limited to a run round the garden and a bit of dumb-bell exercise may suit the Chicago people, but it is very improbable that it would suit everybody alike.

The average enthusiast is apt to overlook the swing of the pendulum when taking up the newest craze in a whole-hearted manner. He will go without his accustomed breakfast on the first morning, and arrive at his office in a peevish and irritable mood. Somewhere about eleven o'clock he feels like throwing up the sponge, and sending the messenger out for a dry biscuit or two; but in most cases he will last out for the first experiment. At lunch time, though, the swing of the pendulum will come in. He has got to take a lunch that will average up to two meals; and in the first glorious rush at the good solid food there is a very fair chance that he will overdo the lovely business. The usual lunch hour will drag itself out into two hours and a half, or thereabouts; though it would be idle to fix a limit to it if it is going to be the first meal of the day under the new rules. The novice will eat—and drink—and the reaction after the unaccustomed fast will turn the meal into a considerable sort of orgie. "Thish ish the first drop I've 'ad to-day, ole feller! 'Ave anuzzer wiz me! Whoo-oop!"

Where is this No Everything going to leave off? They will carry these self-denying ordinances along till something occurs that will show the public that the wrong tack is being pursued. The papers the other day said that a Russian scientist had discovered that all the ills the flesh is heir to are due to our wearing—clothes. Let somebody start a No Clothes Society in this happy land of ours and see how it works. There would be a busy time on the first bright summer morning on which the Leaguers set out to justify their principles; and the authorities would be running round town buying up hundred-weights of trousers at contract price for the morning's batch of prisoners roped into the official strong-rooms. A league of this sort would impress the public with its stupidity, whereas you can't tell by merely looking at a man whether he has had his breakfast or not. And, as we know, what we can't see we don't trouble about to any extent.

Some people who profess to be very wise tell us from time to time that the average man eats too much. If the average man who hears the good news gets influenced by it, the chances are that he will thin his diet down a little, and thus save money for the doctor's bills that he will thereby incur. The average man, as a rule, eats what he thinks he wants. To some extent, he has probably learned by experience that a certain quantity of food is necessary for his well-being, and as soon as that quantity has become a habit he runs a considerable risk in changing it, for use is second nature. The scientist sits down and calculates that so many ounces of food are sufficient for an ordinary man, and calmly assumes that the last word on the subject has been said. Whereas, in the case of two men of equal size, one will often be satisfied with a dinner of oatmeal porridge and a glass of water, while the other will want soup, fish, joint, and cheese, and then as likely as not will want to order some biscuits with his wine just to fill up the still aching void.

You can't lay down a hard-and-fast rule in these matters; and if the No Breakfasters are going to have a free run in the country, I for one shall advocate an increase of accommodation in our lunatic asylums. It has long been a favorite rule of the medical profession that people oughtn't to eat suppers; and if we are now to be advised to do without breakfast as well, we might as well go the whole hog and live the higher life on two dry biscuits and a seidlitz powder per diem.—"Pick-Me-Up."

"It's an A1 display," said Mr. Fitz, at the dog show. "It's a first-class exhibition," replied Mr. Penn, "but you've got the wrong number." "How so?" "Instead of A1 it is K9."—"Dog Fanciers' Gazette."

"If any one asks for me, James, I shall be back in ten minutes," said Mr. Fosdick. "Yes, sorr," replied the Irish office boy: "and how soon will you be back if no one asks for you?"

Pennies by the Ton.

When one has put a penny in the slot and got his correct weight or a piece of chocolate, he seldom thinks of the thousands of other pennies dropped that very hour into other machines. The companies that own these "automatic vendors" receive tons of pennies, which they can turn back into circulation only through the United States Subtreasury, since banks refuse to handle pennies unless they are counted and packed in rolls, and the slot-machine companies would have to hire a large force of clerks to do this, and that would curtail their profits. The problem of counting pennies for deposit in the Subtreasury is simple. They are weighed like so many bullets on a scale, which registers not pounds and ounces, but dollars and cents. The collections from the slot-machines do not go directly to be weighed. The coin has first to be sorted, for it is mixed with all kinds of refuse—lead weights, buttons, bangles and counterfeits, put into the slot either in a spirit of mischief or to defraud the company. The boys who do this sorting wear antiseptic gloves, for the coins are very dirty and likely to spread disease. The refuse from the sorting process is usually valueless, although now and then gold pieces, bits of jewelry, gold and silver charms engraved with tender inscriptions find their way into the iron throat of the machine which swallows only copper cents. Hundreds of German pennies and many coins of higher value are found in the machines, put there through carelessness, for in these cases there can be no intention to cheat; there is nothing lower than a cent. Counterfeits abound. The cost of making is not great, and the per cent. of profit is large. People seldom take the trouble to look carefully at pennies, so counterfeits pass easily. On the Bowery in New York and at Coney Island from one to two per cent. of the copper in circulation is said to be spurious. So the owners of the penny-in-the-slot machines have more trouble with the actual money they receive than men in any other business. Making change relieves a street-car company from receiving nothing but nickels, but the penny-in-the-slot company must take the actual copper stuff and turn it into more convenient form. On lower Broadway it is no uncommon sight to see a wagon load of pennies going to the Treasury, in appearance only a load of canvas sacks, but really a clumsy embarrassment of riches.

A Believer in the Birch.

There are two very amusing little anecdotes in the newly-published "Memoirs of Herr von Busch," who lived for years in the confidence of Prince von Bismarck. It appears that the Iron Chancellor was not tender to his two sons when they were little, and spanked them for the slightest offence. Once Herbert and "Bill" had been caught stealing nuts in the garden of a neighbor, who, full of respect for the little gentlemen, only scolded them mildly.

At that very moment, however, Bismarck and Moritz Busch put in an appearance. "What!" cried the stern father; "is that all you find to say to these little scoundrels? Please cut one of the most elastic branches from your despoiled tree, and give them, under my very eyes, the best thrashing that they ever had. And, depend upon it, when I do it myself I do not spare them!" There was no getting out of it; so the neighbor set about the task as tenderly as possible, but Bismarck, stamping with his foot, kept on crying, "Go on! Go on! You coward!" till the wretched farmer, excited by the commanding voice, hit so hard that the boys asked for mercy.

Herr von Busch was indignant, and could not help venturing a few observations. "Bah!" Bismarck answered, "you are too much of a sentimentalist, and seem to ignore that the birch is the salvation of our German children. Look at the Prince Imperial himself! The birch never for a moment leaves the back of the chair of Fraulein H., his governess, who obeys orders, but hates beating her august pupil."

Then, choking with laughter, the Prince went on: "One day the poor, kind lady, after having administered a severe correction to Wilhelm, said, 'Believe me, your Highness, it hurts me more than it hurts you when I have to punish you so.' The boy shrugged his shoulders, looking somewhat incredulous. A little later, at luncheon time, when all the family was gathered round the table, he suddenly said to the governess, 'Is your back better?' On which Princess Victoria kindly asked her what was the matter with her back. 'Not much, I hope,' quickly answered the mischievous boy who is now Emperor, 'for I scarcely feel mine now, but you see, mother, Fraulein H. has such a sympathetic back that it begins to hurt her directly she commences to cane me, and she performed on me this morning.'"

The Glass Eye.

The following good story comes from Ceylon:—A tea-planter—he had a glass eye—was very desirous to go and have a day's shooting with a friend, but he knew that immediately the natives, who were at work on the plantation, got wind that he was away, they would not do a stroke of work. How was he to get off?—that was the question. After much thought an idea struck him. Going up to the men, he addressed them thus: "Although I myself will be absent, yet I shall leave one of my eyes to see that you do your work." And, much to the surprise and bewilderment of the natives, he took out the glass eye and placed it on the stump of a tree and left. For some time the natives worked like elephants, now and then casting furtive glances at the eye to see if it was still watching, but at last one of them, seizing the tin in which he carried his food, approached the tree, and gently placed it over the eye. As soon as they saw that they were not being watched they all lay down and slept peacefully until sunset.

Mrs. Hickey (who is entertaining her little son's playmate, aged five, to dinner)—Willie, can you cut your own meat? Willie (who is struggling with a piece on his plate)—Yes, thank you (with a desperate saw at the beef), I've cut quite as tough meat as this at home.—Glasgow "Evening Times."

To Invade the United States.

A recent issue of The Philadelphia Press contained an account of an interesting enterprise undertaken by Mr. Alfred Mosely, an Englishman, who has gained great wealth in South Africa. The Press says:—

In November next by the best of ocean steamships, and at the most luxurious of American hotels, and on the finest of special trains, there is to be made out of England an invasion of the United States. At the personal expense of Alfred Mosely this invading force is to be organized, maintained and transported, a force of 120 leaders, forty of them conspicuous in the world of educational affairs, forty more being men of authority in the trade unions of Great Britain, and forty more being capitalists. The visit will be prolonged until January of next year, and when this company returns to England it is expected that their fellow-citizens will be enlightened as to those mystic influences which have made it possible for the United States to gain equal rank with other nations in world affairs and in many things pre-eminent rank.

Mr. Mosely was one of the invited guests at the installation of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler as President of Columbia University last Saturday. He sat with that representative and distinguished group, which, as a whole, was a composite representative of all the intellectual and material influences that have made the United States what the nation is to-day. He was peculiarly impressed by the ceremony, and especially by the presence, in enthusiastic accord and sympathy, with all that the election and installation of Dr. Butler means, of men of affairs, men of distinction in commerce, in manufacture, in applied science, and in finance. That was something to which celebrations at English or European universities, of which Mr. Mosely has had knowledge, can offer no counterpart. In the presence and in the enthusiasm of these men he discovered one of the reasons why the United States has been and is now passing by unconscious promotion from the rear rank of nations to a place of supremacy.

He was reminded of the attempt made by the Duke of Devonshire a few years ago when one of the ancient and most famous of the English universities, finding itself in some pecuniary need, made appeals for help. The Duke undertook to raise a considerable fund, having in mind as much as $300,000, American money. But when he turned to the men of commerce he found them deaf. When he appealed to the financiers he discovered that they looked upon the university as something apart in all its influences and scope from their vocation. When he approached the manufacturers he learned that even Oxford with its venerable traditions was for them a mere incident in the national life of Great Britain. So that, having at last secured a scanty $50,000, the Duke abandoned his undertaking. And Mr. Mosely, after he had identified the various personalities prominent in finance and in all material activities who shared in the installation ceremonies of last Saturday, discovered one of the reasons why Oxford and Cambridge are, comparatively speaking, dead, so far as their influence upon the prosperity and advancement of Great Britain are concerned. Nor was he surprised when he was told that had an American prince of finance been appealed to as the Duke of Devonshire was some years ago, he would have, and many times in recent years he has within a day or a week or a brief time, secured the hundreds of thousands, and even millions, that the university needed. Columbia itself had an experience of that kind last winter.

Mr. Mosley might have been told—perhaps he was—of a recent experience of Yale's young president. It seemed to Arthur Hadley that there ought to be raised for Yale, so that administrative and other convenient buildings might be constructed, $1,000,000, and he hoped that it would be possible for him to announce at the bi-centennial that this money had been pledged. He had not then learned the art of approach, however, or the manner by which rich men make up large funds, so that he began to despair of success. Then one day he met an alumnus of Yale, M.C.D. Borden, a man of wealth, and to him Mr. Borden said in effect; "You are not doing this the right way. What you want first is a nucleus of, say, $500,000, secured from a few men, and when you have got that there will be no trouble about the rest."

"But who is to form this nucleus?" President Hadley asked; and Mr. Borden replied, "I will. I will begin it with $100,000. To-morrow I will see Mr. Vanderbilt and one or two others." And on the next day in less than five minutes' chat with Frederick W. Vanderbilt Mr. Borden had secured his pledge of $100,000, Mr. Vanderbilt's only comment being, "It will give me great pleasure to do it," and a day or two later two others were secured pledging a like amount, and at last James J. Hill, and thus President Hadley had his nucleus of $500,000, and it was a mere detail to secure the rest.

Such an experience, according to Mr. Mosely's view, would have been impossible in Great Britain, even for Oxford or for Cambridge, and these institutions staggering under land poverty and the indifference to them of the powerful men of material affairs in Great Britain cannot in Mr. Mosely's view, or in that of American educators, even though stimulated by the endowments made possible by the will of Cecil Rhodes, give to American youths that training, experience, and character which they may obtain at home, and which they need, if they are to be of service in their day and generation. In fact, the American youth would probably do better were they to attend some of the universities in the greater cities of England, for some of the quickening influences of modern times has been felt in these institutions.

The sowing of seed by hand is not an economical method, as more seed is required than when a drill is used, and there is a larger return from the drill, owing to better covering of the seed and greater uniformity of depth. The drill has been improved to a high degree of efficiency, and some have fertilizer attachments. In all experiments made to determine the comparative value of the drill and hand seeding a less quantity of seed, carefully drilled in, yielded more bushels per acre, in proportion to seed used, than seeding by hand.

NEW COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

Mr. D. W. Dumble Urges the Erection of an Up-to-Date Building

Dear Sir.— I am glad to see that the School Board is considering how they can best meet the urgent demand for increased and better school accommodation.

The Menzies building was not built suitable for the purpose.

The proposed Collegiate Institute would give more than double the number of rooms in the Menzies building and better ventilated and fitted for school purposes. By taking the present Collegiate Institute for public school purposes, it would be equal to two such schools as the Menzies building and the $500 a year paid for the rent of that building would be saved, and accommodation equal to another $500 a year procured to meet the increased demand for school accommodation.

Then as to the Institute, when the present building was erected the Board had in mind that it was a temporary arrangement. The fact was that the pressure on the public schools at that time forced the Board to build, and it was thought wise to erect a building suitable for public school purposes, use it for a few years as an Institute, and when a suitable building for an Institute was provided take it back for public school purposes. This was done. The Institute was shoved out of the fine old building into the new one, and the vacant rooms were at once filled up with public school pupils. Now the time has come to give the Institute another shove, and I think the Board is wise in the intention to erect a new building wholly separate from the public schools.

The Institute pays the public school for the present building occupied by them $1,100 a year. That alone represents 4 per cent. on $28,000 a year. A little more added to $28,000 would give a much more suitable building, so that the increased cost of the High School would be very small.

Any new building erected should have in it a suitable gymnasium, and a suitable room where public lectures debates, etc., might be held, as in Lindsay and in other progressive towns. The fact is at last recognized that we are behind the times in that one respect.

The people of the town have in their Institute so fine a staff of teachers that they are not obliged to send their children out of town for their higher education. The rich and the poor are on a common footing and have equal advantages—the whole being a levelling, but it is levelling up for the most part, as there all classes and all creeds are brought into familial contact, and they gain most who most need.

If we are to have an Institute, let us have the best.

Your obedient servant.

D. W. DUMBLE.

THE FIGHTING BURGHERS

If the Boers have not staggered humanity they have provided a series of surprises from start to finish of the war, and the latest surprise is not by any means the least, says the Ottawa Citizen. The number of men who have grounded arms and surrendered under the terms agreed upon at Pretoria, May 31, has been so greatly in excess of the popular belief of the Boer strength that it compels a revision of all previous estimates of the fighting force with which the British troops had to contend and of the opinions which have been held of the British conduct of the war to a final victory. Before the war the Boers spoke of an army of 50,000 burghers with which they would sweep the British out of South Africa. On the other hand it was argued that the entire fighting force of the two Boer states, between the ages of 16 and 60, could not at the utmost exceed 40,000. When the war was actually on, the foreign friends of the Boers declared that there were not more than 25,000 or 30,000 burghers in the field to cope with ten times the number of British troops. From reliable data it now appears that the number of Boers in the field was greatly underestimated. Between April, 1900, and the end of the war exactly 40,000 were taken prisoners by the British. In September, 1900, 2,000 surrendered to the Portuguese. Since the conclusion of peace more than 16,000 have surrendered, making a total of 58,000. But these are not all; there are others. Since April, 1901, Kitchener has reported 2,200 Boers killed in battle. The heavy fighting of the war was before that date, and, judging by the number known to have been killed in some engagements and having regard to the British loss in the same period, it is thought not unreasonable to estimate the fatalities of that period at another 10,000. These figures give a total of 70,000. If to these be added those who have escaped from the country or who may be avoiding observation in Cape Colony the grand total may safely be placed at 75,000 fighting burghers. With these figures before it, the New York Tribune concludes:

This confuses and upsets all former calculations, and leaves us wondering how it was possible to recruit such an army out of a total population of scarcely 250,000. We can explain it only on the theory that the proportion of males is much larger than one-half, and that recruits were received much younger than sixteen and much older than sixty years. Such a revelation of Boer strength is, in a way creditable to both sides. It speaks volumes for Boer patriotism and devotion that about one-third of their entire population took up arms and went into the field. We have yet to hear of a nation that ever exceeded that proportion of fighters in any war. On the other hand, there is added explanation of the difficulty of the British task. Instead of in all respects and on the defensive, the British did so by only about three to one—a very different matter. Of course, three to one are heavy odds. But when we consider that the three were fighting seven thousand miles away from home, in a strange land and climate, in absolutely novel fashion, and on the aggressive, while the one was right at home difference does not seem so great. In such considerations we may find corroboration of the German military expert testimony that no other soldiers in the world could have done better in the circumstances than the British did, and of the Austrian field marshal's statement that the war has added greatly to British military prestige.

TOLD HIS AWFUL SECRET, THEN DIED

Confession of St. Louis Man Clears up Mystery

After Ten Years Battle With Conscience E. E. Shannon, Tells of Murder, and Suicide.

St. Louis, July 11.—After 10 years battling with a conscience that day and night tortured him, E. E. Shannon aged, 25 years, of Winstanley Park, East St. Louis, confessed to his wife a crime committed ten years ago, and then committed suicide.

Shannon's death revealed the secret that he had carried so many years, and cleared away a murder mystery that had long puzzled the authorities of Clayton, a small village in Montgomery county, Ohio.

Four lives paid the penalty of a game of cards engaged in by young men of Clayton.

Two men were killed in the fight over the game, a third was legally executed for the murder of the first two and a fourth, Shannon, found relief in death from the burden on his conscience of being responsible for the death of the other three.

When a boy of 15 years Shannon engaged in a game of cards with a friend and two other young fellows. All of the youths were drinking. Shannon won, and was accused of cheating by two of the party. A fight followed, and Shannon drew a revolver and fired several shots, killing the two fellows who had attacked him.

Leaving the bodies in an out-of-the-way place, where the tragedy occurred Shannon and his friend fled. Shannon left Ohio, and became a wanderer over the country.

His friend remained behind and paid the penalty of loyalty to his friend with his life. The young fellow was arrested for the murder of the two men whose bodies had been found lying near the gambling table. He was convicted. He went to the scaffold and died without revealing Shannon's name.

Shannon learned of his friend's death through the newspapers, and haunted by the crime he had committed, fled further from the scene. He wandered over the greater part of the west, doing odd jobs here and there, but never remaining long in one place.

When the Spanish war broke out Shannon, reckless of his life, joined the engineering corps, hoping that he might find death in fighting for his country. He served through the entire war without receiving a scratch, and was discharged.

He sought his family, hoping to find relief from his tortured conscience among his relatives. He married and determined to settle down in East St. Louis and lead a quiet, retired life, in hope that he might in some way atone for his crimes.

But his conscience gave him no peace, and life became a burden. He determined to end his life and find peace from the pangs of conscience that had made his life miserable. Going to a drug store he purchased a bottle of chloroform, telling the druggist he wanted it to make a liniment. Carrying the drug which was to end his life Shannon went to his home.

Just before retiring Shannon told his wife of the awful crime that had weighed him down for so many years. He told her all the terrible details, and how he had been tormented by his conscience, and had in vain sought to forget the deed, but that the blood of the men seemed ever before him, and that he had determined to put an end to a life that was so full of remorse and fear.

His wife quieted him, and assured him that she would help him to try and forget the past, and making him promise that he would not take his life, she fell asleep.

Shannon waited until he was sure his wife slumbered, then quietly took some bedding out on the front porch and wrapping his head in a sheet, saturated the sheet with chloroform.

them from worse things, and it will save you. You told Roger Cope that you would rather die than marry him. Well, now you can die. And when he knows, perhaps he will be sorry that he hounded you to such an end; for he will really be more to blame than you."

"That's a coward's argument!" the first voice cried. "It would be brave to fight the battle out, weak to throw down your arms at the first attack."

"No, it's brave to die. It takes courage to throw yourself over into the cold, deep river, and not struggle or scream for help at the last; to breathe the water into your lungs and be choked by it till you drown. If you don't do this thing—now, when you are helpless, without money or friends who would not think it a great burden to help you—it is because you are afraid of the suffering, the horror."

"It is a wicked thing, an unforgivable crime, to destroy your own life," appealed the first voice.

"No, for God is merciful, and pardons all sins," said the other. "He will understand. Do it—now, while you have the courage!"

A whirlwind seemed to snatch my soul in a resistless grasp. Quick as lightning I sprang up on the stone seat. Blind and deaf save to the tempest of my own spirit, I put life behind me—stretched out my arms to death. I thought I was falling, that I had thrown myself over. It was as if my body were lifted by the force of my own passionate self-abandonment. For an instant I knew nothing. Then a man's voice spoke close to my ear. "Poor child! For heaven's sake what has brought you to this?"

I had not fallen. The river was not to have me after all. This man's hands had dragged me back, snatching me from the stone bench and holding me fearfully to his side.

I did not answer his question. I don't think that he expected it. I did not even struggle to free myself, for the conviction of his strength robbed me of all mine, as he half-carried, half-led me off the bridge. I had not seen his face, knowing only that he was tall and very, very strong; but suddenly a light dazzled my eyes, and, scarcely realising what I did, I looked up at him.

At the same instant his eyes were on my face, and by the exclamation of astonishment he gave, I guessed that it was for the first time to-night.

"Great heavens!" he ejaculated.

As he recognized me, so did I know him again. It was the man who had looked up from the pit to our box at the Lyceum Theater on the night of "The Bells;" the man who had followed me in a cab when I drove away; the man who had saved me and my money from the hands of a thief.

"You!" I whispered, half beneath my breath.

The word must have told him that I had not forgotten, but I was unconscious of its meaning. And suddenly I began to cry. My hands went up to my face, wet with cold rain, and the burning tears which gushed from the eyes that I hid lest he should see them. I did not know why the sight of this man had broken down all my self-control, but I sobbed heavy, tearing sobs that seemed well-nigh to wrench body and soul asunder.

"That it should be you of all women on earth," he said. "I thanked heaven that I was in time to save a life; but that it should have been your life! Now I thank heaven a hundred times over."

"I wish you'd let me die!" I sobbed.

"You won't wish that—to-morrow."

"There are no to-morrows for me," I answered. "I've come to the end of everything. And now—you've brought me back, to go through it all, all over again. Let me go! You had no right—you shall let me go."

"I shall not," he said, holding me tightly, as for the first time I began to struggle in his grasp. "I have the right, not to ask questions, but to keep you from doing a thing you would never have dreamt of doing if some trouble hadn't driven you half-mad for a moment. I had the right to do that, and because I have saved you I have another right as well. Forget me to-morrow if you like, but now you will have to obey me. Tell me the address of some relative or friend whom you love, and I will drive with you there in a cab. I refuse to leave you until I know that you are in safe hands."

"You said that you had not the right to ask questions," I exclaimed.

"Not to ask questions about yourself, or the trouble which has driven you out of your senses. But there are others which, for your own sake, I must and will ask. Tell me that address."

"There is no such address," I said, bitterly, still fighting with my tears. "I have no relatives or friends to whom I can go."

"Then I will take you to mine."

As he spoke he raised his hand to the driver of a cab, who saw the gesture from a distance and whipped up his horse.

"I can't—I will not——" I had begun, when he stopped me.

"Why? Because you're afraid of me? Because you don't know me, and so can't trust me?"

"No—o; it isn't that."

"Then come. You must."

"I will not."

The cab had drawn up at the pavement and he had stopped me beside it.

"Do you know what I shall do if you refuse?"

His voice was very firm, even stern.

"No. Except that you will let me go."

"I will not let you go. Do you think I don't know what you would do if I left you alone as you wish? I do know. And rather than you should have the chance I will give you in charge to the police for—attempting to kill yourself. I would cut off my hand rather than do such a thing; nevertheless, I will if you force me to it."

I uttered a little broken cry of shame and horror.

"You are cruel," I said.

"Only to be kind. If you would let me take you to a friend of your own—but you say there is no one. You say you trust me. Prove it, I beg of you."

"Ah, you begged things on that other

Boers in Boston Praise Canadians

Boston, July 13.—Among the passengers landed yesterday in Boston from the Prince Arthur, were C. Luyt, C. Moll, and A. Malan, who came that way from Bermuda, where they have been prisoners in the hands of the British.

The three are 33, 35 and 42 years of age, respectively and all speak excellent English.

They will sail from Quebec and go by way of England to Pretoria, where Mr. Luyt was a lawyer, prior to the war. He was educated in England. All were captured when Cronje surrendered at Paardeberg and their praise for the Canadian troops, who carried the day on that occasion, are fully as high as the opinions the Canadians freely stated of their Boer apponents.

The Returning Soldiers

Editor Morning Times

Dear Sir.—I would like to draw the attention of the authorities that to the fact that our noble boys, that left home in defence of our Empire are expected to arrive home by the 25th inst, and would suggest that they do not wait until the last minute to arrange a suitable reception for them on their return. The citizens of Peterborough always apppreciate the boys that go out to hold her end up, but I think this is one occasion where the good old Town should do herself proud, after the splendid record made by our boys in South Africa. "Every man done his duty";; let us at home try and appreciate the same.

Yours respectfully.

A Poisonous Drug Still Freely Used

Many people are brought up to believe that coffee is a necessity of life, and the strong hold that the drug has on the system makes it hard to loosen its grip, even when one realises its injurious effects.

A lady in Baraboo writes: "I had used coffee for years; it seemed one of the necessities of life. A few months ago my health, which had been slowly failing, became more impaired, and I knew that unless relief came from some source, I would soon be a physical wreck, I was weak and nervous, had such sick headaches, no ambition and was tired of life. My husband was also losing his health. He was troubled so much with indigestion, that at times he could only eat a few mouthfuls of dry bread.

We concluded that coffee was slowly poisoning us, and stopped it, and used hot water. We felt somewhat better, but it wasn't satisfactory. Finally we saw Postum Coffee advertised, and bought a package. I followed directions for making carefully, allowing it tions for making carefully, allowing it to boil twenty minutes after it came to the boiling point, and added cream, which turned it to the loveliest, rich-looking and tasting drink I ever saw served at my table, and we have used Postum ever since. I gained five lbs. in weight in as many weeks, and now feel well and strong in every respect. My headaches have gone, and I am a new woman. My husband's indigestion has left him, and he can now eat anything." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Married in Cincinnati

The following taken from the Cleveland Plaindealer gives the particulars of the marriage of Mr. A. E. Bogan, formerly of this town:—A wedding of unusual interest was solemnized in Immaculate Conception church on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock, when Miss May T. Jones, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jones, St. Clair street, was united in marriage to Mr. Albert E. Bogan. The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of white batiste, trimmed with batiste embroidery, and wore a white picture hat with trimmings of lace and lillies of the valley. She carried a handsome mother of pearl prayer book, the gift of the groom. She was attended by her friend Miss Agnes Cushing, who was becomingly attired in white organdie, with ruffles of lace, and wore a picture hat trimmed with lace and white ostrich plumes. She carried a large shower boquet of pink roses. Mr. Charles A Bogan, brother of the groom, performed the duties of best man. The marriage ceremony was performed by Mgr. Thorp during the celebration of solemn nuptial mass After the ceremony the bridal party returned to the residence of the bride's parents, where a wedding dinner was partaken of by fifty guests. The bride and groom, who are well and favorably known in Catholic circles were the recipients of many costly and handsome presents, consisting of many pieces of cut glass, silverware, etc. Mr. and Mrs. Bogan left in the evening for a honeymoon to Buffalo, Niagara Falls, and Toronto, Can. On their return they will take up residence at No. 80 Dibble avenue, where they will be at home after August 1.

The Late Thomas Morrow

We regret to chronicle the death of Mr. Thomas Morrow, which sad event occurred at his late residence No. 170 Edinburgh street, on Saturday last. In the death of Mr. Morrow, Peterborough loses an estimable citizen and one who enjoyed the respect and confidence of all with whom he came in contact. He was 64 years of age and was born in the township of Cavan he being a son of the late Wm. Morrow. He resided in Cavan until the year 1888, when he removed to Peterborough and has resided here since. He was a prominent member of the George street Methodist church and represented that church on the Nicholls Hospital Board for some years. Otherwise Mr. Morrow lived a quiet life He leaves to mourn his demise a wife and four daughters. The funeral will take place this Monday afternoon at 3 p.m.

THE

TO THE PUBLIC:

Mr. H. P. Lindsay, who has represented the Temperance & General Life at Peterborough for some years, and the Manufacturers Life since the amalgamation of the two companies, has retired from the agency and we have appointed Mr. G F. Blackwell as general agent for the Peterborough district.

Until a suitable office can be arranged for, Mr Blackwell will have his office in Room 44, National Hotel, Peterborough. At an early date organization work will be effected both in town and all parts of the county, when Mr. Blackwell will be pleased to meet any policy holder and the public in general. Any information or assistance given along this line by a policy holder, or any person desiring a local contract will be much appreciated by the management of this company and will receive Mr. Blackwell's prompt attention.

The Company desire to thank the public of Peterborough, town and county, for the manner in which they have contributed to the success of the Manufacturers Life in the past, and hope that through Mr. Blackwell you will continue your liberal patronage.

Yours truly,
J. F. JUNKIN,

COLUMBIA MAKES WAR ON SISTER REPUBLIC

Invades Nicaragua and Boldly Attacks Her Troops in a Stiff Battle

THE REVOLUTIONISTS ASSIST COLUMBIA.

An Act of Retaliation Against Nicaragua for Assisting Colombian Rebels—A War That Won't Last Long

Special to The Times.

Washington, June 14.—From information received at the State Department today it is believed that war has broken out between the Governments of Nicaragua and Colombia. The information is to the effect that a Colombian force, assisted by the Nicaraguan revolutionists, has invaded Nicaragua and attacked troops of that country. Whether the Colombian force is composed of Government troops is not known here, but there is reason to believe that the attack has the sanction of the Colombian Administration.

At the request of the State Department telegraphic orders were sent by the Secretary of the Navy to Commander William Potter of the United States gunboat Ranger to proceed from Panama to the scene of trouble. The orders read:

Confer with Consul-General (at Panama.) Then proceed to David. Investigate. Return to Panama.

The news that the two Latin-American countries has resorted to arms is not surprising to officers here who have been familiar with the differences between them. It has been predicted that if the Colombian Government succeeded in suppressing the formidable insurrection which it has had to contend with for three years it would then proceed to settle accounts with Nicaragua. The civil war in Colombia is now believed to be practically ended, and the invasion of Nicaraguan territory by Colombian troops is regarded as a natural result of the improved conditions.

The hostile feeling between the two republics has been openly shown. Accusations have been made that Nicaragua was assisting the Colombian rebels, and while the purpose of this attitude has never been clearly explained, the Colombians have suspected that Nicaragua's object was to excite a prejudice in the United States against the selection of the Panama route for the Isthmian Canal; the idea being apparently that this Government would not undertake the construction of this important project in a country torn by political disturbances.

New Orleans, July 14.—The reported invasion of Nicaragua by a force of Colombians and refugee Nicaraguans is confirmed by the Bocas del Toro. Gen. Calderon, a Nicaraguan exile, and a bitter opponent of President Zelaya, left Colon with a number of refugees in the Colombian cruiser General Pinzon, and it was freely declared that the Pinzon would land the Nicaraguans at some point on the Nicaraguan coast, where a revolution would be proclaimed by Gen. Calderon, and all persons opposed to the Zelaya Government would be called on to join the movement. The invaders have rifled fieldpieces, in addition to the armament of the cruiser.

THE KING WILL REVIVE TRIPLE ANOINTING.

Mediaeval Ceremony Abandoned by William IV and Queen Victoria to be Restored

Special to The Times.

London, July 14.—Many medical men still declare the King not to be able to stand the fatigue that he must necessarily be called upon to undergo at the coronation. There is great talk about cutting the ceremony very short, but at the very least, it will take two hours. Enquries are being made as to the origin of the golden canopy which is held over the Queen during a certain part of the coronation ceremony. It is stated that years ago the Queen had always to be stripped to the waist for the anointing of the breast and the golden canopy was held over her during this somewhat embarrassing ceremonial. Needless to say, the Queen is now only anointed on the head. It is stated in good authority that the King will revive at his own special command, the triple anointing which was dispensed with by William IV., and Queen Victoria. A puncture has been made in the King's robe to allow the anointing of the breast.

SALISBURY'S GREAT FEAT.

London, July 14—In an editorial today, the Times, after recounting some of Lord's Salisbury's chief claims to the gratitude of the British people, says: "Another achievement of Salisbury has been the steady building up, in circumstances of no small difficulty, of the excellent understanding now subsisting between this Empire and the United States. That has been the chief work of his last years in office, and it is a fitting crown for a life of successful and honorable service devoted to the highest interests of the British people."

FRENCHMEN ADMIRE KITCHENER.

Paris, July 14—Weeks ago many French papers were insulting Kitchener, and making him Great Britians scapegoat and the butt of their anglophobia. Now they have discovered unsuspected merits in him saying that perhaps he is not yet sufficiently appreciated by his countrymen. Nearly all the papers recall Kitchener's service when he enlisted in 1870 in the second army of the Loire, and risked his life for France. For the concentration camp system he is no longer held responsible. It is said he simply obeyed orders, which he regretted.

AUSTRALIA'S NEW GOVERNORR.

London, July 14.—The appointment of Col. H. McCalmont as Governor-General of Australia is being discussed. Some months ago he was approached unofficially regarding it, but since then he has heard no more about the matter. It is quite on the cards that Mr. Chamberlain may in the course of a few days, have something to say to McCalmont, because naturally before a man accepts such an appointment he wants to know something about ways and means and such like matters. Until last night Col. McCalmont knew nothing. His appointment would be a very popular one, not only in this country, but in Australia, judging from what one hears among the colonials now here. He is not only enormously rich, but a capital sportsman, and what is known as a downright jolly good fellow. A peerage would of course be conferred on him for it would never do to allow a commoner to succeed a long roll of peers. The colony would expect it as well. There have been rumours about Lord Brassey being apppointed but that is absolutely incorrect. I happpen to know for a fact that he would not accept. He is quite tired of holding office out of England having done so for such a very long time.

FALL OF THE BASTILLE

One Hundred and Thirteenth Anniversary of This Event

Special to The Times.

Paris, July 14.—Today, the one hundred and thirteenth anniversary of the fall of the Bastille was celebrated as usual as a national holiday. There were numerous public entertainments, and in many instances the proceeds will be donated to the Martinique relief fund. There was a military review at Longchamps, which was witnessed by a large number of people. There were also reviews at all military and naval stations, followed by illuminations, fireworks and balls in the evening.

The Parisians participated with their customary zest. Wreaths were placed on the Strasburg monument in the Place de la Concorde. President Loubet, while driving to the Longchamps race course to witness the annual review, was cheered all along the route. In the Presidential tribune with him were the members of the Cabinet and the Ambassadors.

In accordance with custom free performances were given in the subsidized theatres. As the evening wore on the city presented an animated and brilliant spectacle, open air dancing, pyrotechnic displays, and a general illumination being the principal features. At a late hour all the squares and open spaces were crowded with dancers and merrymakers, who gave no indication of an intention to give up their sport until dawn.

FRENCH NATIONAL HOLIDAY.

Washington, D.C., July 14.—The tri-color waved over the French embassy today, commemorating the French national holiday, the fall of the Bastile, on July 14, 1789. The attaches and other officials appropriately and quietly observed the day, the usual business of the embassy giving way to holiday recreations.

IN AID OF MARTINIQUE SUFFERERS.

San Francisco, Cal., July 14. — The French residents of San Francisco commemorated the fall of the Bastille today with an elaborate celebration. The proceeds from the celebration will be devoted to the relief fund provided for the sufferers from the recent volcanic disturbance in Martinique.

A Great Future for Canadian Northwest

Minneapolis, Minn., July 14. — The long talked of grinding of Canadian wheat in bond in Minneapolis began yesterday morning. At 10 o'clock a United States revenue store-keeper took his stand at the receiving desk of the Humbildt mill and the first car-load of grain was shoveled into the chutes and the grinding was begun.

It is impossible at present to tell what effect the grinding of Canadian wheat here will have on the local market, but it is not thought it will have any marked effect for a few years. The development of the Canadian wheat fields is rapidly going on, and soon their immense yield will affect prices in foreign markets.

It is thought that when that time comes the Minneapolis millers will have to take some action towards having the tariff reduced or the laws governing grinding in bond changed in order to successfully compete with Canadian millers.

WHAT OLD LONDON IS LIKE AT NIGHT

Scenes Around the English Capital Viewed by a Canadian

INTERESTING HISTORICAL FACTS

In Connection With the Seven Edwards of Royal Name—London in Gas Light

From our own Correspondent.

London, July 7.—London promises to be a greater magnet than ever for American tourists this year. For those who will make the trip for the first time there will be so much to see that it will be difficult to know where to begin. After all, when the fixed show places, such as the Tower, Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's, and the National Gallery, have been duly visited, the American visitor will enjoy nothing more, by night or by day, than the ever shifting panorama of the city streets.

This is the real workaday London. You will always remember the Tower and the Abbey, but you will also remember these busy street scenes and perhaps think of them oftenest.

There have recently been received from London some remarkable photographs, reproduced from the New York Herald today. They are remarkable in more than one respect. First, in their artistic importance, and, second, in conveying not alone a mere picture of the streets, but through the process of printing in tints, a sense of atmosphere. There are views of Trafalgar square, that busy centre where the tides of humanity pour from the Strand, Pall Mall, Northumberland avenue, Whitehall, and St. Martin's lane, the local points of London.

If you are lucky enough to reach one of those little "islands" in the middle of the driveway with your life, you can stay there for half an hour to advantage, and do nothing but look about you.

STREAM OF CABS.

Out from the Strand pour the cabs and buses by the hundreds. From morning until far into the night there is a steady stream of vehicles. You admire the "bobby" who holds up his right hand and stays this rush of horses, vehicles and humanity. You look up to the left and see old St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, and nearby you see a sign reading, "American bar," a distinctly English institution seldom patronized or understood by Americans. Then you see the National Gallery, not particularly imposing from an architectural standpoint, the Nelson monument and the lions.

Toward the early morning hours, when there is a temporary lull in the traffic and fog has settled over London, you can still stand in this old square and watch the lights flickering through the the moisture. It is not precisely an exciting pastime, but it affords ample opportunity for reflection.

Then again, there is a bit of newer old London that always interests the American traveler—the Victoria Embankment. Skirting the north bank of the Thames from Westminster bridge to Blackfriars' bridge, it is a scene of unceasing interest.

THE LIFE ON THE RIVER.

The interest is not alone in the beautiful tree lined driveway, but in the opportunity to view the life and color on the river. You can see the noisy, dirty little passenger steamers puffing along in their cumbersome way through the muddy waters and unending shipping. If you are of a curious turn of mind it will interest you to know that what is now the Victoria Embankment was once covered by the tide twice a day, and was not nearly as attractive a place as it is today.

At night on those occasions when the house is sitting and the lights are twinkling from the windows and reflected in the damp pavements beneath or in the river the houses of Parliament are particularly picturesque. You have doubtless have heard the sounds of "Big Ben" tolling in the clock tower long before you have arrived on the scene.

The reflection that Westminster hall a part of the ancient palace of Westminster, and which now forms the vestibule to the houses of Parliament, was begun by William Rufus, son of the Conqueror, in 1097, will add considerably to the poetry of the occasion.

CROWNING THE EDWARDS.

The postponed coronation of King Edward VII., with its rich promise of civil pomp, regal pageantry, and royal splendor recalls with considerable impressiveness the interesting epoch of English history when centuries ago the last one of the luckless Edwards to precede the present King was escorted through the streets of London, a pale, sickly youth in his tenth year, to receive the crown which made him ruler in name of the English domains.

The crowning of Edward VI. was marked by no such ceremony as will mark the official ascent the the throne of the present King of England. His father, King Henry VII., died rather unexpectedly on January 28, 1547, and a month later the frail youth upon whom the royal mantle fell was conducted to the Tower of London, and there proclaimed King.

Edward VI. had no royal pageantry marching before him or trailing at his sides and heels when he proceeded through London on the brief journey at the end of which he was to be declared a ruler. Mounted upon a magnificent white horse, with soldiers, armored and bristling with the accouterments all about him, the youth proceeded to the tower and was anointed and then King Henry's will was read. Under it sixteen executors were named to exercise the power of the crown during Edward's minority. To assist these executors in cases of doubt a second council of twelve persons was also nominated, so that while Edward became King in name, he was in reality divested of every bit of authority which went with the office. During his brief reign, which lasted but six and a half years, he exercised practically no control over public affairs, and he was prevented from showing what sort of dominion he might have exercised had the reigns of government been placed entirely in his hands by death which came to him before he had completed his sixteenth year.

At the time of Henry's death England was at peace, but within a month after the accession of Edward a state of active hostility with Scotland was approaching because of the attempt of the Duke of Somerset to secure the union of England and Scotland by bringing about the marriage of Edward and Mary, the Scottish child queen. In less than a fortnight after Edward's coronation an open breach occurred and England and Scotland were at war. A reign thus begun could scarcely have but one termination, and throughout the six years Edward occupied the throne England was torn by interior religious and civil strife, which was only surpassed by the turmoil going on on the outside.

Edward died July 6 1553, and there were some suspicions that his death had been hastened by Northumberland.

For the most part the Edwards have gone down into the English history as a luckless, unfortunate line of rulers. Beginning with Edward I., who was crowned king on August 2, 1274, their individual reigns have furnished continuous epochs of war, strife and tragedy. The first Edward was stabbed in three places with a poisoned arrow by an infuriated Turk, in 1272, before he acceded to the throne, yet he survived to carry on one of the most active periods of warfare in English history. He was a great general and statesman, yet his reign was far from being successful.

Edward III. was crowned on February 1, 1327, after his father had been dethroned, and his reign had a sad and gloomy close. He lived to see his empire in France virtually overthrown and the vast expenditures incurred in carrying on this warfare burdened his subjects and produced general discontent. By 1376 his mental faculties were in a state of decay and parliament virtually robbed him of the helm of state. He died in 1377.

Edward VI. was the second son of Richard, Duke of Norfolk, and after a siege of fighting was proclaimed King on March 4, 1461 His was the most successful reign on the line, and, although his name is tarnished by several acts of cruelty, he died without having done anything particularly worthy of note or calling for criticism of extraordinary severity.

The tragic death of Edward V. is a well-known historical fact. He fell a victim to the scheming Richard, Duke of Gloucester, and with his brother were murdered in the Tower. The two youths were smothered under pillows while they were asleep.

KITCHENER A HERO, BULLER A BYWORD

Triumphant Organizer Forged in Fires of French Defeat--Sir Redvers Denounced.

London, July 14.—Despite the great interest in the King's progress back to health, his future movements, the date of the coronation, the rowing carnival at Henley, and the magnificent coronation bazaar, the prominent figures in the public eye have been two generals who commanded the British forces in South Africa. But in what different light they stands!

Kitchener, the triumphant organizer, a stern, unbending, silent man of iron deeds; Buller, domineering, bluff, hail fellow well met, boastful headstrong, a wilfully blind man, now shown to have been devoid of every qualification to command men or himself. To one the Empire extends the heartiest welcome; the other she tries to forget.

In view of London's enthusiasm over Lord Kitchener of Khartoum, the man of Egypt and South Africa, the British Empire's foremost soldier, it is interesting to recall the fact that the first uniform worn by him was the blue blouse and red trousers of the French army.

LEARNED BY DEFEAT.

To the lessons taught by the French defeat of 1870-71 can be traced the dominant characteristic of Lord Kitchener's method. His belief in and insistence upon absolute discipline and perfect organizations have given him success where others have failed.

Lord Kitchener was not quite twenty years old, and was living in picturesque Dinan when the dark days spread over France. Fired by an impulse, which he said at the time he was unable to resist, the future first soldier of the British Empire, enlisted as a private in the Sixth Battalion of the Mobile Guard, attached to the second army of the Loire, under Gen. Chanzy. He did not take part in any actual fighting, but participated in the horrors of that winter retreat in January, 1871, when after three days' fighting the second army was badly defeated at Lemaus.

With the French army he saw none of the pageantry of war, only its grimness and suffering and the awful effects of incompetency and mismanagement. General Chanzy's great herd of men, retreating in desperate confusion through snow and ice—indeed a miniature retreat from Moscow—was in a most battered and deplorable and pitiable condition, and Kitchener then learned, by practical demonstration, what lack of organization really meant.

A PANORAMA OF DEFEAT.

He saw forty miles of railway rolling stock blocked on the while line from Laval to Rennes. He saw the highways blocked with all the broken down impediments of a defeated army, famished horses perishing by the wayside; exhausted, barefooted soldiers often falling on the snow to die there; whole companies, occasionally entire battalions, going rationless, because suppplies could not be bought up. He beheld the fatal effects of lack of discipline, and learned how hopeless was the chance of an army, however brave, that would not submit to proper control.

Quite different is the other pictures. The saddest and most pathetic figure in England today is undoubtedly General Sir Redvers Buller. Fallen from his pedestal, the laurel wreaths plucked from his brow, this hero of a hundred fights, who, when little more than a boy, won the Victoria Cross at the sword's point, is now denounced in most unmistakable terms by both press and public.

Yet Buller was a general who was sent out to South Africa with a great flourish of trumpets, who said he would take the Boer capital, Pretoria, before Christmas, that was, in two months from landing, who condemned the tactics of his fellow-officers, who tried to throw the blame of Spion Kop on others, when Lord Roberts said he ought to have been there himself. This, too, is one of the men who have been [illegible] the past training of the British [illegible] cer.

YESTERDAY'S STORM

Hale-Stones as Big as Marbles—Street Flooded and Cellars Inundated

The hail and thunderstorm which came up yesterday afternoon about 2.30, although only of half an hour's duration was a very severe one while it lasted. The rain was unusually heavy, while the hail stones which accompanied it were as big as large sized marbles. The lightning, which played all around the town, without actually crossing it, was exceedingly vivid, and of the most destructive nature. From a strong reflection seen in the country to the west it would seem that some building had been struck and had taken fire. On George street the cesspools were taxed to their utmost capacity and found wanting, for in a very short time a destructive torrent of dirty water was rapidly flowing from north to south, carrying with it many light articles of a moveable nature, including small boxes and bundles of lath.

The sidewalks from Hunter to Simcoe streets were completely submerged and the adjacent cellars inundated. Clerks had a busy time fighting the insatiable stream, which threatened every moment to invade their stores. The Times block escaped the flood as its sidewalk and that just opposite are unusually high. The grading at this particular point of George street worked like a charm yesterday afternoon.

A farmer below the locks reports that he had three windows smashed by hail stones. The crops in Otonabee are all flattened down and similar destruction has probably been done to the crops wherever the storm passed over.

Thomas Wickson, a young man 23 years of age, belonging to Ennismore, is reported to have been struck by lightnng and instanly killed at Port Hope during the storm of yesterday afternoon. Wickson was working with a team on the Grand Trunk Railway when the deplorable accident occurred. The body will be shipped to Peterborough today. Deceased was the son of a widow woman, who will have the sympathy of the whole community in her affliction.

SAVES BABIES' LIVES

This is the fatal season for the babies. They die off in thousands from common summer complaints brought on by faulty dieting. Your baby, dear mother, should be fed on nourishing and life-giving Lactated Food. If you would have your baby plump, strong and happy, begin to-day with Lactated Food. It perfectly agrees with the weakest stomach. When all other foods fail, Lactated Food saves the baby's life.

BUSINESS MEN'S EXCURSION

Nearly One Hundred Took In Yesterday's Trip

Nearly one hundred of the professional and business men of the town took in the fifth annual excursion yesterday afternoon, held under their auspices. The steamer City of Peterborough left the wharf at 1.30, and after a three hours' sail reached Jubilee Point, where they spent several hours very pleasantly; notwithstanding the rain which fell in torrents, and which preveented their going to Idyl-Wyld as was intended.

Among those present were Messrs. Richard Hall, A. W. Cressman, G. W. Hatton, Dr. Amys, D. Hughes-Charles, Dr. Bradd, T. Brightman, W. H. Robertson, E. Brown, Joseph Armstrong, W. Bunton, M. F. Cobb, A. L. Davis, Mayor Denne, E. A. Peck, J. J. Lundy, John E. Belcher, Chas. Stanley, R. B. McKee, R. Gliddon, Dr. Gray, Adam Hall, L. M. Henry, R. Hicks, W. H. Hill, J. B. Oke, M. Wilson, Dr. Pentland, W. J. Green, A. J. Munro, John Crane, Dr. King and others.

Mr. Joe Halpany, Peterborough's clever entertainer, accompanied the excursion, and kept the party in thorough good humor. The piano was kindly loaned by Mr. Stanley.

The party arrived home at 11 o'clock. Just before leaving the boat a vote of thanks was tendered those who were instrumental in getting up the excursion and also to Mr. Halpenny for his entertainment and to Mr. Stanley for the use of his piano.

RARE CHANCE TO INVEST

American Cotton Company's Sale of Debenture Bonds

We call the attention of investors to the announcement of the American Cotton Company in this issue of The Times. The people identified with the Company is a sufficient guarantee of the safety of the proposition. They include some of the strongest men in the United States, Hon. Cornelius N. Bliss, ex-Secretary of of the Interior, and one of the most conservative and ablest men in New York. He, with Mr. Cannon, of the Fourth National Bank, and Mr. Case, President of the Company, dictate the policy of the management. Mr. Case was formerly a partner with Mr. Andrew Carnegie, of the Carnegie Steel Company, prior to its consolidation with the United States Steel Company, at which time, of course, Mr. Case and his other partners retired from active business. Mr. Case is one of the ablest business men of the day. Mr. Wm. C. Lovering, Vice-President, is at present Congressman from Massachusetts at Washington, and has for years been interested in the cotton mills of New England. Mr. Tener, Vice-President and Treasurer, was also a partner with Mr. Carnegie.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 15, 1902.

UNCLE SAM'S BIG DAY

The 4th of July in Uncle Sam's country sounds like the story of one of Napoleon's campaigns. It is bloody, and neither age, sex nor condition has mattered.

It is impossible to get absolutely correct figures. Some of the little Fauntleroys who have lost fingers, and who will get through life with half the quota of eyes originally alloted to each individual, failed to report.

The total is 31 killed and 2,949 wounded, many of whom will die later.

The figures are worth digesting. Perhaps the people of that country may learn what not to do next year.

Toy pistols injured 432. Once there was a toy pistol that made a good deal of noise with the assistance of a paper cap. That was some years ago. Now it is possible to purchase a gun that looks like a Texas .44, and is almost as fatal in the hands of a youth who doesn't know enough to properly burn punk.

The firearms list of injured aggregates 443. Most of them were young men, and a large percentage of fools—just plain idiots. If the notion to shoot came to one of those fellows in a crowded street car, it is safe to bet that he'd let out a yell and bang away. If he hurt somebody he would promptly apologize. It is hard to regret that the list is 443, for diseases of this variety are educational. Fireworks hurt 731 and powder 422.

You can't tell what a boy will do when he has a chance and is intoxicated with the Fourth of July spirit.

Once there was a boy with a head that bulged like a Hubbard squash. He inherited a love for chemistry from his grandfather, and his mother used to tell the callers about it. He knew that H2O stood for water, and also rolled oats, and he dug out of a book a recipe for making gunpowder. He mixed charcoal, saltpeter and sulphur, stirred it, rolled it and messed it, and his mother became very proud. "Willie is so sensible," she told a neighbor over the back fence. "He would not spend a penny for fireworks this year, and he is making his own gun powder."

On the morning of the Fourth this bright boy, who knew more about chemistry than the corner druggist, dropped a double handful of this home-made powder into the kitchen stove to see if it was really correctly proportioned. It was.

He blew the kitchen into the potato patch, and the pantry over the barn. It scared his mother into nervous prostration and left him seven fingers out of a possible ten.

The hired girl and stove never did come back.

Learning and horse sense are distinct kinds of knowledge and the powder list, 422, backs up the assertion.

The accident list in Philadelphia, 439, makes all other cities look cheap. The Quaker City doesn't wake up over once a year, but when she does awaken it is in time to put in a hurry call for ambulances.

Kansas City had quite a day and 26 were injured. In New York the strict police regulations cut the list to 73. Kankakee, Ill., and Oshkosh, Wis., divided honors with 13 each. Others were Elgin, Ill., 26; Rochester, 30; Albany, 25; Detroit, 35; Cincinnati, 53; Chicago, 111; Boston, 200, and a list as long as your arm accounts for the rest of the 2,969.

It can be cut down by stricter rules governing the sale of explosives and the exercise of more common sense

Botha, DeWet & Co., have laid down the sword, but the former has announced their intention to take up the pen. They are arranging, Botha says, for the publication of an official history of the war from the Boer side, "written by himself, De Wet, and others." This is interesting and reveals these mobile Boers as versatile artists. There is probably good money in this project for both writers and the publishers who may have the good fortune to get the copyright. Wonder if the "others" include W. T. Stead?

OUR TRADE OUTLOOK.

Interesting Letter from Judge Dean of Lindsay

The following letter, addressed to the Lindsay Post, will prove interesting reading for the Peterborough people:—

Sir,—I went north one day last week and was as far afield as the pretty village of Minden. While at Kinmount, waiting to be driven over I learned some facts about the creamery there which the people of the country generally should know. While listening to young Mr. Graham's talk it did not occur to me to write this, or I would have got all the statistics as to the quantity of butter they make and how much money they pay their patrons; but this fact which practically covers the whole subject came out: "The farmers get more money for their cream than the cheese factories return them for their whole milk, and they have all their skimmed milk to raise their calves upon." This solves the problem of present profit from their cows combined with raising all their stock. It assures the prosperity of all farmers in the back country within reach of creameries and it widens greatly the areas to be served as compared with cheese factories. The expense of delivering the cream is a mere bagatelle compared with that of delivering the milk. The bulk and weight are not more that 15 per cent.; the milk must be gathered every day, the cream once in three days so that a team will gather cream for nearly twenty times as many cows as it will milk.

Mr. Graham's territory is by no means confined to points which can be reached by teams. The railway brings him cream which is gathered and delivered at every station from as far south as this side of Fenelon Falls and as far north as Haliburton and as far east as Gooderham. He said that the day before, over a ton of cream came to them by rail alone. This of itself represented about 550 pounds of butter. The railway charges a fixed rate of fifteen cents a hundred pounds and returns the cans free.

There is much more money for the settlers in stock-raising and butter-making in Haliburton than there has ever been in forest products and would add to the prosperity of Lindsay; but I really fear that this is by no means sure. We have the trade of our north country. Shall we hold it without effort against all comers?

I was about to add that whatever brought prosperity to our interland while it will never suppport a dense population such as crowds the southern townships, independence and comfort wait an industry and thrift for a much larger population than now occupies it.

Peterboro has almost limitless water-power which is developed for it by the canal and it has added to this the vast power of the Burleigh Falls, while Lindsay has looked supinely on. The town that has the command of water power in these days of electrical transmission of power is sure to grow as a manufacturing centre to the limit of that power as witness the great cereal works now going up in Peterboro. That town is to take rank, before many years, among the best half-dozen second-class cities of Ontario.

Peterboro now proposes to send out a radial system of electric roads. So soon as one of these reaches Bobcaygeon, our decline will begin. But it is not merely the trade coming from that neighborhood that we would lose. As soon as Peterboro annexes Bobcaygeon by electric road it will be continued to Kinmount and Minden. That country is full of strong streams and the land is so broken up that a stream carrying a few hundred horse power can be used over and over again, so as to develop thousands of horse power within a few miles. Electric roads can be built almost without grading. Unlike steam locomotives their motors run up hill and down dale with ease. The ideal conditions for electric roads are all present out there.

With quick and cheap connection with a large city the trade of the back country would gravitate to it. "To him that hath shall be given, and from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath." is as sure today as when the words were first spoken.

I have long thought that our only chance of keeping the trade of our own back country, lay in keeping Peterboro out of Bobcaygeon; and I am now more convinced with it that ever.

If the Pontypool road were built Peterboro would not invade our territory, but that enterprise is hung up. Is Lindsay stricken with paralysis. In any case its future cannot for want of motive power compete with Peterboro's, but it should at least act upon the principle, "What we have we hold." Yours truly,

W. W. DEAN,

Lindsay, July 8, 1902.

COPPER AT THREE AND HALF CENTS A POUND

George A. Treadwell Mining Company

27 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK. JEROME, ARIZONA.

Capital - - - - $3,000,000.

VALUE OF SHARES $10.

In a suit recently tried in the New York courts it was proved from the books of the United Verde Copper Company and the sworn testimony of the bookkeepers that the cost to that company of producing copper was only three and a half cents a pound, not counting the gold and silver values, which—allowed for—reduced the cost to a still lower figure.

Nowhere outside the Verde Copper Belt in Yavapai County, Arizona, is copper produced in quantities for less than twice this cost.

The United Verde has about two hundred acres on the north end of the Belt and the George A. Treadwell Company has several times as much in the central and southern parts of the Belt. The conditions along the whole Belt are entirely similar. We already have three mines developed—the Cliff, Brookshire and Iron Queen—one of which, the Cliff, seems to be larger and better than the United Verde, and the other two at least approach it in magnitude and value, while we have several others, including Badger, Pastime, Green Monster and Spoke and Stonewall, which, though less developed, are equally promising.

Professor Treadwell believes we have at least half a dozen United Verdes within the broad and extensive limits of our holdings.

As soon as our smelter plant which is now in process of erection, is completed, we can certainly produce copper as cheap as our rich neighbor on the north.

The United Verde for several years has produced one-tenth the copper of the world. When our plants are fully installed we expect the Verde Belt to produce one-half the copper of the world, and the George A. Treadwell Mining Company will be prepared to do more than its full share.

Before investing in copper in unproved localities, consider the stock of the George A Treadwell Mining Company, named after the great pioneer and explorer of the Verde Belt and owning the largest and best aggregation of properties on it.

The price of the stock is $11 a share. Make checks payable to The order of the company and send them to 27 William Street New York

Curiosities of Book Sales.

Commenting on the phenomenal sale of some recent novels, a correspondent of the "Book Buyer" writes interestingly of notable books that years ago were popular, but since have become practically unknown. He says:

There was once a very popular preacher who wrote many books, and for every one there was a large demand on the day of publication. But most of them passed out of print while he was still living, and I doubt if a single one of them is now kept in stock by any bookstore. Not many years ago appeared a book which the laboring classes and the tenement-house population bought so eagerly as to run the sale into the hundreds of thousands, because they thought it showed how an equal distribution of all property might be brought about. Now it appears to be dead. Helper's "Impending Crisis" attained a sale of 140,000 copies, forty years ago, which was as great an achievement as half a million would be to-day. That was because of its bearing on burning political questions and the fact that it was systematically attacked in Congress. Now you can occasionally find a stray copy of it in a second-hand shop. Tourgee's "Fool's Errand," twenty years later, reached about the same circulation. For purposes of comparison, this and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" would seem to be closely analogous. But while the "Fool's Errand" has almost, if not quite, gone out of circulation, Mrs. Stowe's great novel, thirty years older, still sells largely in several editions, and at many libraries is called for more frequently than any other book. Mrs. Stephens' "Fashion and Famine" was the best selling novel of its day, and three translations of it were published in France. But to-day it is difficult to find a copy of it anywhere except in the lumber-room of a public library. Another example may be seen in the sudden popularity and subsequent deadness of "Robert Elsmere," the author of which is still writing successful books. Were it not that it might seem like telling tales out of school, something could be said of certain books that have begun life with a phenomenal sale, which has stopped suddenly and unaccountably, as if at some mysterious signal.

For the reverse of the picture, the most notable example is afforded by "Ben Hur." This book had no sale worth mentioning for a year after its publication, and was considered dead. Now it is said to have attained a circulation surpassing that of any other American novel, with the single exception of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Someone might prepare a curious and entertaining article on three classes of books in light literature: 1. Those that have had an immediate large sale, and have then gone to oblivion. 2. Those that have had no sale at first, but afterward have met with large success. 3. Those that have been popular at the start and never lost their popularity. The first class would be the largest. Probably the second class would be the smallest. Two that would shine in the third are the "Autocrat at the Breakfast Table" and "Reveries of a Bachelor."

The Making of Anagrams.

Apropos the renewal of the Shakespeare-Bacon controversy, an article by William Sheppard in the "Era" on the making of anagrams is enlightening. "A correspondent has asked me," says Mr. Sheppard, "to furnish him with some good anagrams on the names of famous people. He further informs me that he has spent a good deal of time trying to make an acceptable anagram on the United States, and has failed to do so. With reference to this failure, I would remind him that he must not be discouraged. The task he has attempted is an enormous one. United States has just a dozen letters. Now, mathematicians will tell him that a dozen letters will admit of seven thousand and twenty-nine millions (7,029,000,000) of possible transpositions. Old Camden has vividly described the vexation of soul undergone by anagrammatists when oft-repeated effort, with an oft-repeated approximation to success, have finally resulted in loss of time and labor: 'Some have been seen,' he says, 'to bite their pens, scratch their heads, bend their brows, bite their lips, beat their board, their paper, when they were fair for somewhat and caught nothing herein.' Again, let him comfort himself by the reflection that no one has yet succeeded in making a good English anagram on United States. Anagrammatists have been forced to fall back upon the more fluent and manageable Latin. It has been discovered that the letters forming United States may be transposed into the following Latin words:

In te deus stat. "God stands in thee."

Inde tutus stat. "Hence thou standest safely."

Dentatus est. "He has teeth," the "he" evidently referring to Uncle Sam.

Desiste, nutat! "Hands off, he shakes!" a sentiment which may have been applicable in 1861, when it was made, but is now, thank Heaven, without meaning or point.

Siste, nudat te. "Stop, he strips thee," which might be revived to-day by the Anti-Imperialists in their warnings to our new subjects in Cuba and the Philippines.

A te desistunt. "They keep off from thee," which is exactly the attitude which the anti's wish the United States to assume towards Cuba and the Philippines.

In Desperation.

The European king sighed and stirred uneasily. "My subjects," he exclaimed, "are getting so enlightened, so imbued with the ideas of democracy, that they no longer fawn upon me, toady to me. There's only one thing for me to do to relieve this monotony. I must visit America."—"Town Topics."

A Phenomenon of Sleep.

He had come on her dozing in a hammock, and when she woke up she accused him of stealing a kiss. "Well," he said, "I will admit that the temptation was too strong to be resisted. I did steal one little kiss." "One!" she exclaimed, indignantly: "I counted eight before I woke up."—"Household Words."

TOLD HIS AWFUL SECRET, THEN DIED

Confession of St. Louis Man Clears up Mystery

After Ten Years Battle With Conscience E. E. Shannon, Tells of Murder, and Suicides

St. Louis, July 11.—After 10 years battling with a conscience that day and night tortured him, E. E. Shannon aged, 25 years, of Winstanley Park, East St. Louis, confessed to his wife a crime committed ten years ago, and had long puzzled the authorities of Clayton, a small village in Montgomery county, Ohio, then committed suicide.

Shannon's death revealed the secret that he had carried so many years, and cleared away a murder mystery that

Four lives paid the penalty of a game of cards engaged in by young men of Clayton.

Two men were killed in the fight over the game, a third was legally executed for the murder of the first two and a fourth, Shannon, found relief in death from the burden on his conscience of being responsible for the death of the other three.

When a boy of 15 years Shannon engaged in a game of cards with a friend and two other young fellows. All of the youths were drinking. Shannon won, and was accused of cheating by two of the party. A fight followed, and Shannon drew a revolver and fired several shots, killing te two fellows who had attacked him.

Leaving the bodies in an out-of-the-way place, where the tragedy occurred Shannon and his friend fled. Shannon left Ohio, and became a wanderer over the country.

His friend remained behind and paid the penalty of loyalty to his frien with his life. The young fellow wa arrested for the murder of the two men whose bodies had been found lying near the gambling table. He was convicted. He went to the scaffold and died without revealing Shannon's name.

Shannon learned of his friend's death through the newspapers, and haunted by the crime he had committed, fled further from the scene. He wandered over the greater part of the west, doing odd jobs here and there, but never remaining long in one place.

When the Spanish war broke out Shannon, reckless of his life, joined the engineering corps, hoping that he might find death in fighting for his country. He served through the entire war without receiving a scratch, and was discharged.

He sought his family, hoping to find relief from his tortured conscience among his relatives. He married and determined to settle down in East St. Louis and lead a quiet, retired life, in hope that he might in some way atone for his crimes.

But his conscience gave him no peace, and life became a burden. He determined to end his life and find peace from the pangs of conscience that had made his life miserable. Going to a drug store he purchased a bottle of chloroform, telling the druggist he wanted it to make a liniment. Carrying the drug which was to end his life Shannon went to his home.

Just before retiring Shannon told his wife of the awful crime that had weighed him down for so many years. He told her all the terrible details, and how he had been tormented by his conscience, and had in vain sought to forget the deed, but that the blood of the men seemed ever before him, and that he had determined to put an end to a life that was so full of remorse and fear.

His wife quieted him, and assured him that she would help him to try and forget the past, and making him promise that he would not take his life, she fell asleep.

Shannon waited until he was sure his wife slumbered, then quietly took some bedding out on the front porch and wrapping his head in a sheet, saturated the sheet with chloroform.

A PLAGUE IN UTAH

Grasshoppers are one dollar a bushel in San Pete County, Utah. They are in myriads, and darken the sun for an area of 1,800 square miles. Starvation stares the people in the face, owing to ravages of the pest. Sections of soil under microscopic test show seventy-six grasshopper eggs deposited in a piece only two inches square. This is the situation in an entire mountain-wall valley, including fifteen prosperous towns, having a combined population of 20,000 people. The grasshoppers are everywhere that they can crawl or fly, and have destroyed the wheat and oat fields, and will soon strip the grasses and trees of every sign of vegetation. Great dusty clouds hang over the green spots, and gently wave in the mountain winds. Suddenly the living mass drops to the ground, and the vegetation is no more. The average daily harvest, of men and women, ranges about thirty bushels of hopping, squirming and jumping insects. These are held in "gunny sacks" and measured or guessed as to quantity, and the money paid without a murmur. Business men and farmers have contributed to a fund for the extermination of the hoppers and have all the people they can secure at work picking them from the grain fields. When a collection of sacks is made, the mass is burned on the streets, amid the shouts of young and old, gathered around the bonfires. San Pete County is one of the richest agricultural sections of the state. It is often referred to as "the granary of Utah" because of the immense crops of wheat, oats and barley harvested. It occupies one great irrigated field, sixty miles long and thirty miles wide, surrounded by snowbound mountains of the Wasatch Range on the east side and the Ouirrh spurs on the west. It stands at an altitude of 6,000 feet, and is noted for its fertile soil.

The Love Letters of a Christian Scientist.

My Beloved Prince of the New Thought—I have been wondering today if our exchange of gifts seems as beautiful to you as it does to me. Most lovers exchange rings, but how much more your betrothal gift to me really means! The thought that you have given me your well-studied and dog-eared copy of Science and Health with a Key to the Scriptures, and that I have given you my copy of the Mother's Words, thrills me to the heart—or would, if there were any reality in matter. (Heart would come under the head of matter, wouldn't it? And matter is reflected, of course, from mortal mind, which is evil.)

Do you remember the day, darling Vibration of the Mind Universal, that we sat together planning what we should represent at the Lamar's Book Party? It seems but yesterday! We decided that you would wear goggles and your college cap and gown, for you were to represent Science, and I, Health (trusting to my red cheeks, to treating the guests for Intelligence, and to silent affirmations that I was Health), to reveal the name of our book—the Mother's Book—and our Engagement! (Do you know, Beloved, they say the Mother has demonstrated an immense fortune out of her Words—really, three dollars and fifty cents to give for them is something fierce, isn't it?) Well, we were just finding a way to represent the Key (by putting ourselves in touch with the Way Universal), when your mother came in and asked the day of the month, and apologized for addressing us in English, adding sarcastically that she didn't speak Christian Science! Ah, my Own, I have to vehemently affirm that I am one with Love Omnipotent, Omnipresent, Omniscientific, every time I think of your mother. I begin each day by treating myself for Love and Non-resistance, and yet I must say your mother is without exception the most antagonistic old party I ever met! But then she is your mother—our mother—and All is Love, and You are All—or almost All.

I hope my gift with a Key to the Scriptures will arrive safely and bring you the kisses I entrust to its wise care. How dear are the Mother's Words! Do you like kisses? Yours, with a Key to the Scriptures, would I could wear at my heart! It was so sweet of you not to select as the first manifestation of your Individual Love, some vulgar thing to dazzle the world, such as a grand piano. I would so much prefer having you simple, adorable Radiator of Hope, like Wisdom. Hold me in your Thought, as I hold you in mine—even as Thought (the Universal Mind)—holds us both to its breast! And come in to tea soon—soon.

P. S.—You remember, Bobby, don't you, Beloved? The poor child has such a frightful claim of superfluous flesh—actually, the neighborhood boys call him "the fat boy of the circus," but he is getting strongly in accord with the Principle of Life and will yet demonstrate his Freedom. Yesterday, Bobby was walking along with Ralph Hughes, when an unenlightened little street urchin yelled, "Hello, Skinny! hello, Skinny! hello, Skinny!"

"Smash him!" suggested Ralph.

"Not on your life!' said Bobby. "He is giving me a Treatment!"

Isn't it touching to see such Belief in the Power of the Word as this child has? Did I tell you that we have given up the claim of mice? Yes. We are now entirely free from them!—Ethel Shackelford in "Life."

Chimmie Fadden on Company Promoting.

"I see by de poipers where a company dat is going to make birch-bark canoes—or is it go-carts?—by machinery, offers stock for toity-tree cents a share which is sure to pay one hundred per cent. on one hundred dollars a share. Dis proves how wonderful is de metods of modern finance. But dat is not what most excites my fancy. De same company says de same stock will be forty-seven cents in tree days, a dollar and six-bits in ten days, and will sell for two or tree hundred dollars inside of six monts. Dat being so, sir—and of course dey would not say so if it was not—I is filled wit astonishment dat dey lets de public in at toity-tree cents!"

"Dey may be philantropists," says Miss Fannie.

"I am not sure," says Mr. Paul. "De only ting sure about 'em is dat dey is not in jail; and a man out of jail may be anyting. Den dere is de oil companies wit spouting wells, pipe lines, and railroads, who is selling stock easy wort seven hundred dollars a share for from four to twenty cents. As de poet says, 'I often wonder what de vendors buy one-half so precious as de stuff dey sell.'"

"Mostly, dey buys advertising space," says Whiskers, and den he near falls out of his chair laughing at his joke.

England's Royal Guests.

It is expected that more royal personages will be in London at the coronation than England has ever before seen together. When Victoria was crowned not a European court sent a representative with rank higher than ambassador extraordinary; but in the years between that coronation and her Jubilee the Queen fortified England against another such slight by becoming grandmother to most of the ruling monarchs of Europe. The accommodation of so much royalty is giving the royal host some anxious thought. London has no such assortment of colossal royal palaces as most of the great European capitals. Marlborough House and Buckingham Palace will not lodge comfortably any more than the privileged close relations of the King and Queen. It is said that a large hotel near Buckingham Palace has been taken for the King's guests, and well advised noblemen have placed their London houses at King Edward's disposal. After the coronation [illegible] of the great country houses of England for [illegible] throughout the length and breadth of the [illegible], as well as in London, and the amount of money that will be [illegible] during the season is [illegible]

Mainly About People.

"There was a witty fellow out in a Michigan hospital," says Representative William Alden Smith, "who had to be fed on a daily diet of egg and sherry. His physician asked him how he liked it. 'It would be all right, doctor,' he said, 'if the egg was as new as the sherry and the sherry as old as the egg.'"

It is related that once, when the Earl of Lauderdale was at dinner with King Charles, he remarked to the King: "There is a good saying, that fools make feasts and wise men eat them." "There is another as good," replied the Earl of Shaftesbury: "wits make jests and fools repeat them;" and the King advised Lauderdale to make sure of his man in future.

During the recent street car strike in St. Louis, Professor Hyatt, the weather observer, was about to get on a car, when a member of the strike committee stepped up to him and asked if he intended riding on the car. The professor replied that such was his intention. The striker sought to persuade him not to ride, but he started to get on the car. "Well, if you ride on that car we will withdraw our patronage from you," said the striker. "I don't care whether you patronize me or not. I'm in the weather business," replied Professor Hyatt, and he entered the car.

In a Georgia justice court a colored witness was asked to name the time a difficulty occurred. "Hit was in fodder pullin' time, suh," he replied. "You don't understand me," said the judge. "I mean, what time was it by the clock?" "Dey warn't no clock dar, suh," said the witness. "Well, by the sun, then?" "Now," exclaimed the witness, triumphantly, "sence you hes come right down ter business I'll tell you plain: Ef de sun had been a-shinin' hit would er been 'bout two hours en a half by sun; but es de sun didn't show his face 'tall dat day I couldn't say fer sartin dee what time hit was!"

At the funeral of a lawyer of state reputation, who lived and practised in a town not far from Philadelphia, and who was known among his friends as an unbeliever, an eminent gentleman from Philadelphia reached the house after the minister had begun the sermon. Not knowing how far the service had progressed, he accosted a well-known Quaker of the town, who was a friend of the deceased, and who was noted for his great sense of humor, and, leaning over his shoulder, asked in a whisper: "What part of the services have they reached?" To which the Quaker, without a smile, replied: "Just opened for the defence."

A story of poor Aurelien Scholl, who lately joined the majority, gives a good idea of the caustic humor which made him an oddity among French writers. At a celebrated cafe—not, I think, the Maison Doree, though he was at one time a great supporter of M. Verdier's, alas! moribund establishment—he was offered a Burgundy, which was praised by the host as "true velvet," but had, in fact, become a little sharp with age. "Yes," said Scholl, after tasting it, "velvet, but with pins in it!" Soon after came a Bordeaux, said on the same authority to be "the most generous wine in his cellar." "It is," was this time the verdict, "for it has given away all its good qualities!"

Magistrate Devoy, in the Myrtle Avenue Court, Brooklyn, recently had four darkies who were caught in a gambling raid before him. The first of the lot to be brought to the bar was an undersized man, with a comical face, as black as night. The dialogue between the magistrate and the prisoner created some merriment in the court. "What is your name?" enquired the magistrate, sternly. "Mah name's Smiff," replied the darky. "What is your profession?" "I'se a locksmiff by trade, sah." "What were you doing when the police broke into the room last night?" "Judge, I was pursuin' mah profession. I was makin' a bolt for the door." "Officer," said the magistrate, with a merry twinkle in his eye, "lock Smith up."

The late Sol Smith Russell had three young nieces living in the West, of whom he was very fond. On one occasion, so the story goes, he took the youngest of them for a walk and bought her some candy on the agreement that it was not to be eaten until they reached her home. They started, but before they had gone far the little girl proposed, "Let's wun!" Her uncle declined, and there was long pleading, all to no purpose. Finally, the little girl stopped, knelt down on the pavement, and offered up the petition: "Dod, please make Uncle Sol wun." It was simply a question of my losing my dignity, or her losing her faith in God," said Mr. Russell, in relating the incident, "so we ran as fast as we could for home."

Patronage.

The impressionist had finally sold one of his creations. A brother artist who had arrived, or, as we say, "got there," not only persuaded one of his own customers to buy a painting by the less successful man, at a good figure, but got him an invitation to visit the patron's house to see the picture as it hung on the wall.

It was a painting of a sky, a bridge and a stream, and as they stood before it the purchaser fairly exhausted his vocabulary of art in expatiating on the naturalness of the water and the poetic beauty of the sky. The man who had done the painting smiled and smiled, but at the same time mopped beads of perspiration from his brow. Finally he got his friend into the hallway and there exploded.

Modern English.

A Washington lady, who is so fond of her home that she stays in it sometimes all the year, would [illegible] "Lippincott's Magazine," by a conventional friend, in unconventional language.

"I know that you usually wintered here," she said, "but I was astonished to hear that you had summered here."

"I have not only wintered here and summered here," replied the unfashionable one, "but I will astonish you still further when I tell you that I always fall here and have sometimes springed here."

When Victoria Was Crowned.

In the Marquis of Lorne's "Life" of Queen Victoria there is a chapter on the coronation now quite interesting in view of the much-discussed ceremony which is to take place in London in June. The former Governor-General's description of the pageant is too impressionistic to be very effective, but the following account of the ceremony, given by Lady Wilhelmina Stanhope, one of the trainbearers of the Queen, who later became the Duchess of Cleveland, is very amusing. She writes:

The Queen looked very well and was perfectly composed. She wore a circlet of splendid diamonds, and was dressed in gold tissue, over which was fastened a crimson velvet mantle, bordered with gold lace, and lined with ermine, with a long ermine cape, which very ponderous appendage we were to support. . . . We were all dressed alike, in white and silver. The effect was not, I think, brilliant enough in so dazzling an assembly, and our little trains were serious annoyances, for it was impossible to avoid treading upon them. We ought never to have had them; and there certainly should have been some previous rehearsing, for we carried the Queen's train very jerkily and badly, never keeping step properly, and it must have been very difficult for her to walk, as she did, evenly and steadily, and with much grace and dignity, the whole length of the Abbey.

The Abbey itself was a beautiful coup d'oeil, as we marched up amid thunders of applause and handkerchiefs and scarfs waving everywhere. The Queen acknowledged her reception very graciously. I think her heart fluttered a little as we reached the throne; at least, the color mounted to her cheeks, brow, and even neck, and her breath came quickly. However, the slight emotion she showed was very transient, and she stood perfectly motionless while the archbishop, in almost inaudible voice, proclaimed her our undoubted sovereign and liege lady. . . .

The burst of applause in the Abbey when the crown was placed on her head, and the sight of all the peers and peeresses crowning themselves at the same moment, was really most impressive, and in the midst of the cheering Handel's magnificent anthem, "The Queen Shall Rejoice!" thundered in. After this the Queen was enthroned, and we took up our station on the steps of the throne during the homage, and amused ourselves with watching Lord Surrey, the treasurer of the household, dispensing medals in the midst of a most desperate scramble, and nearly torn in pieces in the universal excitement. The pages were particularly active, and some of them collected ten or twelve medals apiece.

I saw little of the homage. The Duke of Wellington was prodigiously cheered. Lord Rolle fell down, and was carried away by two strong peers. . . . After the homage, we returned with the Queen to the chapel, where her mantle—now a purple one—was fastened on, and we waited for three-quarters of an hour for the procession to form in the same manner as on entering the Abbey.

The Queen complained of a headache from having the crown very ceremoniously knocked by most of the peers—one actually clutched hold of it; but she said she had guarded herself from any accident or misadventure by having it made to fit her head tightly. She had, besides, to bear the heavy orb and sceptre across the Abbey; but when she reached the robing-room, she disembarrassed herself of them, unclasped her mantle, took off her crown, and having got rid of all her royalty, sat down on the sofa and amused herself. We, too, were allowed to sit down for the first time.

But her day of fatigue was not yet over, for she had to entertain one hundred persons at dinner in the palace.

The Duke of Wellington had a great ball at Apsley House, two thousand persons having been invited, the cabinet ministers gave state dinners. Illuminations, fireworks, a fair in Hyde Park, and free admission to the theatres were provided for the gratification of Her Majesty's subjects in London. There was no accident of any importance, except in one case, where a balloon made a bad descent. The House of Commons voted $250,000 on account of the coronation, a very small sum when compared with the large amounts given for similar ceremonies abroad. A number of peers were created or raised a step in the peerage, among these being the father of General Lord Methuen, and twenty-nine baronets, among them Lytton Bulwer and William Herschell.

Mystifying the Audience.

At the first production of Augustus Thomas's dramatization of Richard Harding Davis's "Soldiers of Fortune," at New Haven, Robert Edeson, the star, made the first speech to the cheering Yale boys. Then there were calls for Richard Harding Davis, author of the novel, and Augustus Thomas, who had dramatized it. A large, smooth-shaved man, who tallied with the descriptions of the novelist, appeared and thanked the students for their kind reception of his book in play form, said he hoped it would awaken new interest in the book, enlarging its sale, and that he would like to have Mr. Thomas dramatize his latest novel, "In the Fog," which name he impressed upon possible buyers. About a third of the audience knew that the man who had represented himself to them as Davis was really Mr. Thomas. The rest saw the joke when Mr. Davis came out and said: "Of course this reception is very gratifying, but I don't think my dramatization of Mr. Davis's story is particularly good. But then, to a man who has written a play like 'Arizona,' that has been [illegible] all over America, and recently was praised by the King and Queen of England, dramatizing a novel by a mere Richard Harding Davis seems [illegible] and trivial."

A ROYAL WEDDING IN MONTENEGRO

IMPORTANT POLITICAL MATCH

An Event of Considerable Interest to the People of the East

Special to The Times.

Vienna, July 12.—A dispatch from Cettinje says: The simple folk of the Black Mountain are rejoicing today after their own peculiar fashion, and the welkin is resonant with the sharp and stunning reports of rifles, muskets and revolvers. Old and young, men and boys, gather in street and village, and on the mountains, and by the crack and pink of fire arms give expression to their joy as long as ammunition lasts. In the afternoon and evening, when the cartridges are spent, they will gather in front of the royal palace, a term which gives an adequate idea of the modate farmhouse occupied by the Montenegrin royal family, and there they will shout their zivios, and even plunge into the measured excitement of the national dance, the kolo.

The cause of these popular rejoicings is to be found in the fact that tomorrow Prince Mirko, second son of the Montenegrin ruler, will marry Mlle. Natalie Constantinovitch. Prince Mirko has inherited the beaty of his mother, considered, not only in her youth, but even now, the handsomest woman in the land. He is a tall young man of 24, a typical Petrovitch, and very accomplished. His tastes run to music (he composes and plays well) and bacteriology. He has a large palace near Podgorica in the fertile valley of the Zeta, of which province he is the voivoda or duke.

His bride is just 17, tall, slender and a blonde. At home she is known as Lily. Prince Mirko met her only a few months ago in Vienna, and fell in love at once. Her father, Colonel Constantinovitch, saw much service under Prince Alexander of Battenberg.

Marriage is a peculiar institution in Montenegro, and it is to be hoped that the fair bride will not be subject to the same humiliating customs as are the rest of her sex in the little mountain principality. When married, a woman may not sit at her husband's table when he has guests, but must take her meals alone. He passes her by as a stranger, or, if after some days of separation, they in the kitchen. If he meet her in the street in public, she will not dare to greet him with a kiss on the mouth, but in token of subjection she will kiss twice above and below the elbow the arm he thrusts out to her in condescension. It is true, however, that the position of women of the better class is improving, for there is already a college, presided over by a Russian lady, in Cettinje, and the daughters of the rich attend. But they are few, and their privileges without precedent.

Politics in Montenegrin Wedding

Paris, July 12.—Much interest is manifested here in the marriage of Prince Mirko of Montenegro and Mlle. Natalie Constantinovitch, which is to take place tomorrow.

It was believed at one time that the young Prince would persist in his desire to wed Laetitia Bonaparte, widow of the Duke of Aosta. But reasons of state prevailed, and the handsome young Prince was induced to give up the Duchess Laetitia, who, by the way, was fifteen years his senior.

From a political point of view this union with Mlle. Constantinovitch is a far better match. In fact, the marriage tomorrow will mark a definite point in the history of the races of the Balkan peninsula. There are five States which have in this century been carved out of the Ottoman Empire, one of them Roumania. Greece and Bulgaria are governed by foreign dynasties closely connected with the great reigning families of Europe. Only Servia and Montenegro are governed by native dynasties, neither of which was related to the imperial families of Europe until the comparatively recent weddings of the Princess Helene of Montenegro with the young King of Italy, and of the Crown Prince of Montenegro with the Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz. Having strengthened his position by these alliances the astute Prince Nicholas, ruler of the principality, looked out for a consort for his second son, and at the same time with an eye on the future prosperity of his country. During recent years he has often cast an eye across the barren mountains of his own principality to the fertile plains adjoining. He would like nothing better than to see his son Mirko ruling over a neighboring kingdom so desirable as Servia. Circumstances strengthened Prince Nicholas' hopes. For is not Servia unaccountably cursed as regards an heir to its throne? Queen Draga is childless. The principal Servian pretender, Karageorgevitch, an old man and a bookworm, prefers not to leave his quiet library in Lausanne to rule over chaotic Servia. His two sons have been educated for a military career in Russia. Still another pretender, Prince Alexander Karageorgevitch, prefers Paris to Belgrade. Therefore Prince Nicholas believes, not without apparent reason, the day is approaching when there will be a greater Servia controlled by two of his sons. The alliance of Prince Mirko with a daughter of one of the most popular families of Servia certainly seems to strengthen the situation. The young Montenegrin prince, indeed, may find the future made for him in less time than his father had dared to think, for the report comes that King Alexander's throne even now is tottering and Servia may soon be searching for a new and more popular ruler.

LIGHTNING'S WORK

Says the Norwood Register of the 10th—"Although no fires occurred in this section, reports of the damage done by the storm on Monday last are numerous. Lightning struck the brick school house at South Dummer, tearing off about two-thirds of the roof and levelling the gable on the south end even with the side walls. W. D. Stevenson's and John Barfens' barns struck but did not ignite. W. J. Kidd had a brood sow killed; Richard Girven, Dummer, horse killed in the stable; Wm. Brown, Asphodel, cow killed in field; Mrs. Alex. Patterson, horse killed, Edward Hore, Asphodel, steer killed, John Fitzgerald, Hastings Road, cow killed. W. J. Broadworth, of Marmora, also had a cow killed by lightning a few days ago.

Increased the Capital

Lakefield News: Mr. J. M. Kilbourn, President of the Lakefield Cement Company, returned from Owen Sound on Tuesday, where he has been attending a special meeting of the shareholders of the Company. The capital of the Company was increased from $500,000 to $1,000,000, and $100,000 of the increase was at once subscribed by the directors. The company has arranged for the lease of the water power at Dam No. 3, Lakefield division of the Trent Canal, and will at once let the contract for putting in the concrete work required for housing and installing the necessary water wheels. Negotiations are going on for the supply of the necessary cement plant. Some of it indeed is already ordered from the Krupp Works, Magdibourg, Germany. The intention of the company is to increase the output to a thousand barrels per day, which they think is as much as the limited market will stand at present, especially in view of the several large plants now about to commence operations. It would appear that with the greatly reduced price a very large output is necessary to afford any profit for the manufacturer. The company's Monarch brand has already caught in the market in a remarkable way, the demand for it being considerably greater than the company can supply. Their traveller has been called in and his services discontinued.

A LIVING FAITH.

SERMON BY

GEORGE H. HEPWORTH.

He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief, but was strong in faith.—Romans, iv., 20.

The difference between the man of faith and the man of no faith is practically the difference between paradise and purgatory.

A man does not need to believe many things, just enough to give him a safe anchorage in stress of weather. Long creeds are tiresome, and the longer they are the more tiresome they become. As spiritual helps they are of very little value. If a man's theology consists of a few simple propositions there is small chance of his having a controversy within himself, whereas a complicated creed introduces many points of doubt.

If a man believes in little else than an honorable life, but believes in that at all hazards, and stands by it in all emergencies, he will make a good citizen, a loyal friend and cannot miss the approval of God. Such a man could not go to any other place than heaven, even if he wanted to, for he does not belong in any other locality. In like manner, if a man believes only in the law of gravitation, but believes in that with might and main, he will not put up a building that is likely to tumble down and bring him ruin. What he does build will be strong and solid. It may not be specially ornate, but it will last.

It is better to be absolutely sure of one essential thing than half sure of a dozen things. And so I venture to say that if a man is thoroughly convinced that he is in a world governed by law, and that behind the law is the Lawmaker, that right is everlastingly right and wrong always wrong, he has a sure clew to lead him through the intricacies of life, its bereavements, its poverty, its hardships and the strange change which comes when he falls asleep at last. The whole of religion, all that is necessary to keep him in the high road to heaven, will lie like a panorama in full view. A few certainties, and after that he may speculate as much as he pleases, for his many speculations will not interfere with his few certainties.

The difficulty with the man who has no distinct belief is that he is not a safe guide for himself. He is not only afloat, but adrift. There is nothing he can depend on, very little of that patience and resignation which make things easy and a good deal of that rebellion which makes them hard. He has more responsibility for himself than he can carry, and keeps watch on the bridge night and day, not knowing that there is a captain at the helm.

I can speak with confidence concerning this mental attitude, because in my younger years I passed into and through some of the more radical phases of doubt. The sky was not very blue in those days, and I got very little out of life. I was compelled to be honest with myself, and was therefore as miserable as I was honest. When at length I found good holding ground my anchor chain made merry music as it sought the solid bottom. I wanted little, but I wanted that with a yearning inexpressible, for there is a desperation in feeling that you are a stray waif in a strange world, and that you are certain of nothing but uncertainty. One cares very little what he does when there is no God visible and no heaven to go to. With the grave as the miserable terminus of our journey, one grows selfish and discontented. On the other hand, with a horizon line stretching beyond sundown, one is careful what he does, because to-morrow he may be sorry.

A good, plain, square religion which everybody can understand, which appeals to the common sense of mankind, to the logic of the business man, and the research of the philosopher, is the only thing to set this old world right and keep it right. You are bound for a port on the other shore, and you must govern yourself accordingly. There must be no death in our thoughts, for that is fatal to the development and discipline of the higher nature. Nothing makes a man so large, so generous, so unselfish or so noble as a belief in immortality, and immortality must therefore be a fact or the universe is a huge deception. There must be another world somewhere in which these crooked things shall be made straight and these mysteries explained. Surely there will be a chance in some more favorable clime for us to make another effort in the light of a larger intelligence. We must also be able to look forward to a reunion after the hard separations which carry our dear ones into the light before the dark.

With such a faith vouchsafed by the Christ and by the longings of human nature we can bear and forbear, because the hour of rest is not far off. There is much more than this to believe if we have time to investigate, but it will serve our purpose.

night," I exclaimed in bitterness. "To-night, because I am the most miserable creature in all this miserable world, you have commanded."

"You think that the reason? You think that makes the difference? Well, what does your opinion of me matter? All that signifies is that you should be saved and then protected. Will you get into this cab now? If you are afraid of me, I will tell the man where to drive and let you go alone. But I warn you that I will follow and watch that you take no unfair advantage of such liberty."

I hesitated. "You—surely do not mean what you said about the police?"

"I swear that I do mean it."

"Very well."

I got into the cab. Leaning out I was on the point of saying, reckless of consequences, that I would go to an hotel where I was known, when suddenly everything reeled and turned black, and then—then the world ceased to exist for me for a little while.

After a time—I do not know how long—I began dimly, dreamily to remember that there was an I. But I remembered nothing else, nothing at all of what had happened. I thought that I had been asleep, and I felt an extreme disinclination to wake up.

"Oh, see, sir, her eyelids are trembling!" said a woman.

"Use the sal volatile again," directed a man's voice, which I seemed to know.

It was this which convinced me that I must rouse myself. With an effort I opened my eyes, to look straight up into a face that brought back a whirling rush of recollections. Once more I was in the Lyceum Theater glancing carelessly about, my gaze concentrating at last on the features of a man which appeared strangely dependable. Once more the thought was in my mind: "He would be a good man to ask if you needed help." Why, he had helped me twice! It was curious that I could remember occasions, but not the ways. Then everything flashed back to me.

I was in a plain room, not large, but stately compared to those I had known of late in Easel street. The walls were lined with books in dark bindings, that absorbed the light which came from a tall, green-shaded student lamp standing on an open desk. Near this desk I was lying in a deck-chair extended to its full length, while above me bent the face I knew and another face that was strange.

The latter wore round spectacles that gave the eyes a surprised look, and it had a quaint little nose which turned up in such a comical manner that I found myself smiling.

"How did I come here?" I asked, in a low, tired voice.

It was the man who answered.

"In the cab. Just as I was waiting for your decision to know whether I was to go with you or to follow, you settled the question by fainting. So I brought you here, because I knew that Mrs. Jennett would take good care of you. And when I am sure that you are quite well I will go away."

Somehow my heart sank at the last words. I did not want him to go away—though I took myself instantly to task for the feeling.

"You're as pale as a little ghost, miss," said Mrs. Jennett of the turned-up nose. "Drink this, won't you? I've been making it hot."

She held a cup to my lips, and I drank some chocolate, which tasted better than anything I had ever tasted before. I could feel the blood begin to flow more warmly through my chilled veins.

"And your clothing is soaked through and through, miss," went on Mrs. Jennett. "Would you be offended if I should offer you some things of mine till your own can be dried?"

"Of course not," I protested. "You are very kind. But I can't stay here to trouble you. I must be going soon."

"We'll talk about that again to-morrow," said she. "If you're strong enough to come to my room, I'll make you comfortable inside ten minutes."

She slipped an arm behind my shoulders, and lifted me up. But, as I tried to get on my feet, I discovered that I was not half as strong as I had hoped. Sparks fell in a shower before my eyes; I turned giddy, and would have sunk back again—for Mrs. Jennett was a little woman and could not give much help—had not the man caught me in his arms as if I had been a baby.

"Open the door," he said. Mrs. Jennett ran to obey, and before I could speak I found myself being carried upstairs. Another door was opened, and I was deposited in an easy-chair, near a clean, white bed.

"Lucky this was my day for changing the linen," I heard the little woman exclaiming. "Now everything's all ready for her just as it is."

"How do you feel?" asked the man, looking at me. In saving me from a fall and catching me in his arms to carry me here from the room below his coat-sleeve had been pushed back. As he spoke he pulled the white cuff and dark brown sleeve into place, his left arm still bared from above the wrist. My eyes fell upon it, and I gave a loud, startled cry.

"What is it? Have I hurt you?" he asked, quickly. By this time he had rearranged both sleeves, and, seeing it no more, I could hardly believe in the actual existence of the strange thing which I had caught sight of for an instant.

In my astonishment I had sat up, and continued to stare at him, my lips apart.

"Mrs. Jennett, make haste with the sal volatile!" he exclaimed. "I'm afraid that she will faint again!"

But I gently pushed the sal volatile away when it was obediently presented to my nostrils. I could speak now.

"No, no," I said. "I'm not ill. But ——" And I looked straight up into the man's anxious face. "Tell me who you are?"

He laughed. "I ought to have told you that before," he replied. "But, you see, I had so little chance. My name is John Bourke."

"Yes, miss," proudly broke in Mrs. Jennett. "And he's the John Bourke. Oh, you may scowl and shake your head, Mr. Bourke—but only fancy her not knowing."

To be continued,

The Sense of Humor.

He was an ordinarily mild and inoffensive little gentleman who had lived for many happy, uneventful years in farther Chelsea, when a volume of theatrical anecdotes came into his hands. In this he read of delicious practical jokes played with unfailing success by Vivier and Sothern, and of how that great comedian, J. L. Toole, brought confusion to a baker's shop displaying in the window a sign, "Families supplied," by requesting that three girls and a boy should be sent round as soon as possible.

"This," he said, "is the exercise of true wit." Then he went out, still chuckling.

In farther Chelsea, where custom is drawn by halfpence from the needy, stands an eating-house which endeavors to attract the hungry by pasting on its front this dubious message, "Everything as nice as mother makes it."

"The very place," said the little gentleman, and entered.

"I can have a meal?" was his first query.

"Yes—straight through," said the woman behind the counter, pointing to an inner partition of the shop.

"Any everything as nice as mother makes it?" he asked.

"That 's in the window."

"But how nice does mother make it?"

"Jim," said the woman, calling into space, "here's a cove wants to know how nice mother makes it," and she laughed.

"Garn," came a beery voice; "must be balmy on the crumpet. Turn 'im out."

Nothing daunted, the little man went on: "Supposing she doesn't make it at all nice? Supposing she makes it very nasty, what then?"

No answer.

The woman went on frying onions, but her eye gleamed.

"What if I don't remember any mother? What if she never made anything at all? What if—"

He got no further, but found himself thrust violently through the door to the pavement outside, while a voice admonished him: "'Ere, you, don't come interfering 'ere—if yer wants a sausage and mashed, say so. If not, get out." And as he retreated hastily, though with dignity, the voice followed faintly: "Bedlam—that's the place for the likes of you—Bedlam."

The discomfited little gentleman had walked nearly a mile before his recovery was completed by a sign, hung over a boot shop, which caught his eye. "Wear Parkinson's Boots," ran the legend.

The little man fairly leaped into the shop.

"Why?" he asked, in mild enquiry.

"Beg pardon, sir," said the assistant who had hurried forward to greet him.

"Why should I wear Parkinson's boots?"

"Because they are the best, sir. We use nothing but the best leather."

"What's the matter with my own?"

The assistant glanced down.

"Uppers want mending and heels leveling, sir. Do you a perfect boot for fifteen shillings."

"But supposing Parkinson's don't fit me?"

"We keep all sizes, sir."

"Yes, but I don't know that I care about wearing another man's boots."

"Of course, sir, if you prefer to go on buying boots like those you've got on; but," with a deprecatory smile, "we can turn you out a much better article for fifteen shillings."

"But my name is Pettigrew, and I don't think it would be legal for me to wear Parkinson's boots—it looks like robbery."

"Robbery?" said the assistant sharply. "Our prices are as low as they can be for sound wearing qualities. If there's nothing further to-day, sir," holding open the door, "good morning!"

"Some people," said Pettigrew to himself, as he waited for his homeward 'bus, "have no sense of humor. I wonder how Toole managed it?"—"Punch."

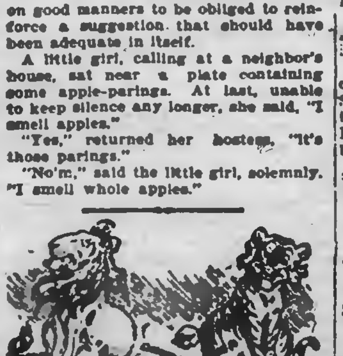
A Keen Sense of Smell.

One of the sorrows of childhood is the slowness of some older people to take a hint. It is often quite a strain on good manners to be obliged to reinforce a suggestion that should have been adequate in itself.

A little girl, calling at a neighbor's house, sat near a plate containing some apple-parings. At last, unable to keep silence any longer, she said, "I smell apples."

"Yes," returned her hostess, "it's those parings."

"No'm," said the little girl, solemnly. "I smell whole apples."



RECENT FICTION.

Wild Animals that have known me.—From 'Life.'

Is the Novel Dying?

Science and the stern reality of life are bound to destroy the novel. It is out of harmony with the scientific and materialistic spirit of the age. The more industrial and strenuous a nation is, the fewer novelists has she; only the backward, the passive, the visionary peoples produce great novelists. The fable, the national tale, the folk-song, have died. Why not the novel? It, too, is subject to the law of evolution. It has seen its acme, its highest point, and is on the decline.—"Novoye Vremya," St. Petersburg.

Unrewarded Solicitude.

Hostess (to guests, who have come to spend a few days)—We're so glad you've been able to come, Mrs. Gushington; but I do hope we are going to have better weather, or I'm afraid you won't enjoy yourself much. Miss Gushington—Oh, but, my dear Lady Boreham, we didn't come here to enjoy ourselves. We came to see you.—"Punch."

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by the Times.

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is 'phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed. Times.]

—Hail stones as big as a fifty cent piece were seen to fall yesterfay.

—The contemplated changes in the Lakefield train service have not yet been announced.

—Four days without any rain, but yesterday, the fifth, evened things up somewhat.

—Mr. Dan. Foley, the popular manager of Jubilee Point Hotel, reports a splendid season's business.

—The men who have the contracts for street watering have evidently struck it rich this season so far.

—Want a hammock of the best quality and value in town? Come to Times Book store for it.

—The excessive rains during the last few weeks have made the water in the river unusually high this season.

—The Water Lily came up to Peterborough yesterday morning, and left for Idyl Wyld.

—Two cases of diphtheria on Romaine street are reported, one of which has been removed to Nicholls Hospital.

—Handsome boxes containing 25 sheets of paper and envelopes to match, good quality, and in all the latest shades for only 20 cents at the Times Bookstore.

—Only a few more of those extra value lacrosse sticks left, and no wonder, because the price is less than half for the same stick in other stores. Times Bookstore, Market Block.

—Boys who bathe in Jackson Park are likely to get in trouble. Several boys were up at the Police Court yesterday charged with this offence.

—Many visitors from Port Hope and Cobourg spent Sunday at Gore's Landing, Rice Lake. The season at this charming spot has opened well.

—Minnie Crossley appeared at the Police Court yesterday morning to answer the charge of keeping a house of ill-fame. She was remanded until next Tuesday morning.

Peterborough.

—The local members of the Coronation contingent, who returned home Sunday, say they had a very interesting trip. They think, however, that the Dominion government should have allowed them more than two shillings a day. The Australian and Figi Islands contingents were paid five shillings a day.

—Peterborough subordinate union sent a deputation to Toronto on Saturday, when the annual convention of Iron Moulders of North America in session there, took a day off, and conducted a grand tournament of sports and games at Hanlan's Island.

—Port Hope business men will likely adopt the weekly half-holiday plan during July and August. In Orillia between 350 and 400 clerks and merchants have petitioned the council to pass a by-law to the same effect, and the gentlemen who presented the request pointed out that it was not fair that four o' five "kickers" should have the power to baulk the wishes of the majority.

—The high water is seriously interfering with Mr. Burnet's contract of building the new dam at the lower lock. The water swept away part of the coffer dam, and destroyed the work of about three weeks' preliminary preparation for concrete work, which was to have begun today. The foundations of a steam pump were unsettled and the pump fell into the excavation. Mr. Burnett has suffered considerable loss and deserves sympathy on account of his hard luck.

On Sunday Mr. Louis Craig, who liver over W. H. Wrighton's store, met with a serious accident through the careless handling of a revolver. His sister-in-law, Miss Paterson, picked up the revolver and playfully remarking that she would shoot him, pulled the trigger. The revolver happened to be loaded with a blank cartridge, and was held so close to the face of Craig that his left eye was severely injured. Dr. McCullough has not much hope of saving the eyesight.

A Great Sufferer Cured

Mr. Benjamin Dillon, of Leeds, Ont., was cured of muscular rheumatism by Polson's Nerviline, and says: "I feel my duty is to proclaim Polson's Nerviline as an infallible cure for rheumatis.; it cured me after thirty years' suffering, and nothing I know of can equal its penetrating power. Nerviline simply has no equal in quickly relieving and curing rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica and lumbago. A trial will convince any one. Price, 25c.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to furnish the paper with items of a personal and social nature either by 'phone or in writing.—Ed Times.]

—Mr. Thos. Birrie returned to Stony Lake yesterday.

—Dr. and Mrs. Bradd have returned to town from Stony Lake.

Mr. J. Barry of the Toronto News staff is in town on his vacation.

—Miss Lillie Simons has returned to St. Mary's Hospital, New York.

—Mr. A. H. Stratton is spending a few days with his family at Boschink.

—Ald. Shortly came down from Stony Lake yesterday to attend the funeral of the late Thos. Morrow.

—Mrs. James Irvine, of Michigan, is the guest of her sister-in-law, Mrs. D. Oliver, Ashburnham.

—Mr. P. Lancaster, editor of the Havelock Standard, was in town yesterday and gave The Times a call.

—Miss Jennie Reroy, of Peterborough, is visiting her aunt in Marmora for a few weeks, for the benefit of her health.

—Miss Letta Harner and Misses Minnie and Maud Coo left yesterday afternoon for "Pleasant-View" the residence of their aunt, Mrs. R. W. Allen.

—R. Wor. Bro. W. H. Walkey, D.D. G.M. left yesterday morning to attend the Masonic Grand Lodge at Windsor.

—Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Manning, Mrs. A. C. Herridge and children, Miss M. Graham and Miss Ida Lee went up to Stony Lake this morning. They occupy Croly's cottage.

—The many friends of John Matheson, who was injured at the Wm Hamilton Co's works last week, will be pleased to learn that he is progressing satisfactorily at the Nicholls Hospital.

—Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Winch and their daughter, Mrs. Pentland and family, went up to Stony Lake this morning to spend the summer at "Yarrow Brae." Mrs. C. H. Winch, of Montreal, accompanied them.

COOL BODIES

Made By Appetizing Food

You can feel as "fit as a Lord" in hot weather if you eat sensibly. If you aren't entirely happy in hot weather, suppose you quit your way and try ours.

Take a cold sponge bath, dress leisurely, and sit down to a breakfast of Grape-nuts and Cream, a little fruit and a cup of Postum Food Coffee. Don't fear, you won't starve; on the contrary, that "Lordly feeling" will take possession of you by lunch time.

Grape-Nuts is a concentrated food and contains as much nourishment as bulky body-heating food like meat, potatoes, etc. Its crisp daintiness will appeal to your palate, and the result is a very marked difference in the temperature of the body, and the certainty of ease and perfect digestion.

Quit coffee; it unnaturally stimulates the brain and nerves, heating the body and causing an uneven temper; use Postum Food Coffee, has a charming flavor when properly made, and does not affect the nervous system, but assists the brain to work with ease and clearness.

Experience and experiment in food and its application to the human body has brought out these facts. They can be made use of and add materially to the comfort of the user during the hot weather.

Look through the recipe book in each Grape-Nuts package for delicious puddings, entrees, salads and desert.

A NARROW ESCAPE

John Reese Barely saved Himself from Drowning at the Locks

The water in the river is unusually high for this time of the year, and the rotter slide at the locks, which is so serviceable to canoeists under normal conditions, is now exceedingly dangerous. It is very hard to make his point just now owing to the high water and strong current, and canoeists should avoid running any risks. Mr. John Reese, and employe of the Canadian General Electrical Works, had a narrow escape yesterday morning when attempting to run the slide in the usual way. The strong current caught his canoe and whirled it over the boom, smashing it into atoms. Reese managed to seize hold of a cable stretched across the river from a derrick used in constructing the new dam, and thus saved himself from being carried away in the angry waters and in all probability drowned. Reese managed to get ashore and is to be congratulated on his narrow escape. It is to be hoped that canoeists take warning from his thrilling experience.

Laid at Rest

The funeral of the late Mr. Thomas Morrow left the family residence, 170 Edinburgh street, yesterday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock and proceeded to the George street Methodist church where a funeral service was held. Interment took place in the Little Lake Cemetery.

Fatally Injured

—Mr. Jas. Sullivan, Weller street, died last night from injuries received while working on a scaffold on the Schneider building on George street, which was formerly occupied by Mr. Pete Simons. His death came as a shock to his wife and family. He was a well known and highly respected citizen of the town. He was 50 years of age and a member of St. Peter's T.A. S., the members of which are requested to meet in their hall at 9 o'clock tonight to make arrangements with regard to the funeral.

Three Bottles of

Paine's Celery Compound

Wrought a Glorious and Happy Cure That Astonished a Whole Community

In the ranks of sick and diseased sufferers, many men and women have become hopeless because of the failures of physicians and their medicines.

We would have all such dejected and despairing mortals take comfort this very day. We would impress upon them the blessed truth—Paine's Celery Compound is abundantly able to save and cure. A multitude of people saved from disease and death have given strong and incontrovertible testimony that Paine's Celery Compound can save even at the eleventh hour. Mr. F. Finter, Ottawa, Ont., tells of his terrible condition, his failures with physicians, and of his wonderful cure by Paine's Celery Compound. He writes:

"For four years I endured terrible agony and misery owing to pains in my head and chest. Life was a burden to me, and no mortal could describe my sufferings. I was treated by doctors, and used many patent medicines, but nothing gave me relief until I used your Paine's Celery Compound. I thank God for the day it was brought to my notice in the Ottawa papers. I have taken three bottles of the medicine, and to-day I can truly say that I feel like a new man. I will recommend the remedy whenever I have the opportunity, as it is the best ever given to sufferers."

Took Paris Green

A physician was hastily summoned on Sunday to the corner of Cambridge and Walnut streets, where Mrs. Kimball was found to be in a precarious condition, she having taken, either by mistake or purposely, a dose of Paris green. Under skilful medical treatment, however, Mrs. Kimball has been brought out of danger. No reason is known why she should attempt to poison herself, and it is thought the occurence must have been accidental.

Resolution of Thanks

The following resolution was unanimously carried by a standing vote of the Orangemen on their return from Lindsay:—"That the thanks of the Orangemen of the County of West Peterboro' are due and are hereby tendered to Mr. F. W. Miller and the members of his Band for the excellent music provided on the 12th July." We thank Mr. Miller for his great kindness and for the trouble he went to to procure music for the Orangemen and also congratulate Mr. Miller on his success in organizing a band for the 12th July notwithstanding the contemptible means resorted to by some members of the other Band to prevent members playing with him. We would request Mr. Miller to organise and Independent Band, and pledge ourselves to give him every assistance and support possibile so that in future the citizens of Peterboro' will not be held up by any combination.

"That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to every Lodge in the County so that the members will know that Mr. Miller has been a true friend to the Orange Associaton."

—Mr. Dan. Foley, the popular manager of Jubilee Point Hotel, reports a splendid season's business.

—The men who have the contracts for street watering have evidently struck it rich this season so far.

—Want a hammock of the best quality and value in town? Come to Times Bookstore for it.

—The excessive rains during the last few weeks have made the water in the river unusually high this season.

—The Water Lily came up to Peterborough yesterday morning, and left for Idyl Wyld.

—Two cases of diphtheria on Romaine street are reported, one of which has been removed to Nicholls Hospital.

—Handsome boxes containing 25 sheets of paper and envelopes to match, good quality, and in all the latest shades for only 20 cents at the Times Bookstore.

—Boys who bathe in Jackson Park are likely to get in trouble. Several boys were up at the Police Court yesterday charged with this offence.

—Many visitors from Port Hope and Cobourg spent Sunday at Gore's Landing, Rice Lake. The season at this charming spot has opened well.

—Minnie Crossley appeared at the Police Court yesterday morning to answer the charge of keeping a house of ill-fame. She was remanded until next Tuesday morning.

—The local members of the Coronation contingent, who returned home Sunday, say they had a very interesting trip. They think, however, that the Dominion government should have allowed them more than two shillings a day. The Australian and Figi Islands contingents were paid five shillings a day.

—Peterborough subordinate union sent a deputation to Toronto on Saturday, when the annual convention of Iron Moulders of North America in session there, took a day off, and conducted a grand tournament of sports and games at Hanlan's Island.

—Port Hope business men will likely adopt the weekly half-holiday plan during July and August. In Orillia between 350 and 400 clerks and merchants have petitioned the council to pass a by-law to the same effect, and the gentlemen who presented the request pointed out that it was not fair that four or five "kickers" should have the power to baulk the wishes of the majority.

—The high water is seriously interfering with Mr. Burnet's contract of building the new dam at the lower lock. The water swept away part of the coffer dam, and destroyed the work of about three weeks' preliminary preparation for concrete work, which was to have begun today. The foundations of a steam pump were unsettled and the pump fell into the excavation. Mr. Burnett has suffered considerable loss and deserves sympathy on account of his hard luck.

On Sunday Mr. Louis Craig, who lives over W. H. Wrighton's store, met with a serious accident through the careless handling of a revolver. His sister-in-law, Miss Paterson, picked up the revolver and playfully remarking that she would shoot him, pulled the trigger. The revolver happened to be loaded with a blank cartridge, and was held so close to the face of Craig that his left eye was severely injured. Dr. McCullough has not much hope of saving the eyesight.

A Great Sufferer Cured

Mr. Benjamin Dillon, of Leeds, Ont., was cured of muscular rheumatism by Polson's Nerviline, and says: "I feel my duty is to proclaim Polson's Nerviline as an infallible cure for rheumatis.; it cured me after thirty years' suffering, and nothing I know of can equal its penetrating power. Nerviline simply has no equal in quickly relieving and curing rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica and lumbago. A trial will convince any one. Price, 25c.

—Mr. A. H. Stratton is spending a few days with his family at Boschink.

—Ald. Shortly came down from Stony Lake yesterday to attend the funeral of the late Thos. Morrow.

—Mrs. James Irvine, of Michigan, is the guest of her sister-in-law, Mrs. D. Oliver, Ashburnham.

—Mr. P. Lancaster, editor of the Havelock Standard, was in town yesterday and gave The Times a call.

—Miss Jennie Reroy, of Peterborough, is visiting her aunt in Marmora for a few weeks, for the benefit of her health.

—Miss Letta Harper and Misses Minnie and Maud Coo left yesterday afternoon for "Pleasant-View" the residence of their aunt, Mrs. R. W. Allen.

—R. Wor. Bro. W. H. Walkey, D.D. G.M., left yesterday morning to attend the Masonic Grand Lodge at Windsor.

—Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Manning, Mrs. A. C. Herridge and children, Miss M. Graham and Miss Ida Lee went up, to Stony Lake this morning. They occupy Croly's cottage.

—The many friends of John Matheson, who was injured at the Wm Hamilton Co's works last week, will be pleased to learn that he is progressing satisfactorily at the Nicholls Hospital.

—Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Winch and their daughter, Mrs. Pentland and family, went up to Stony Lake this morning to spend the summer at "Yarrow Brae." Mrs. C. H. Winch, of Montreal, accompanied them.

COOL BODIES

Made By Appetizing Food

You can feel as "fit as a Lord" in hot weather if you eat sensibly. If you aren't entirely happy in hot weather, suppose you quit your way and try ours.

Take a cold sponge bath, dress leisurely, and sit down to a breakfast of Grape-nuts and Cream, a little fruit and a cup of Postum Food Coffee. Don't fear, you won't starve; on the contrary, that "Lordly feeling" will take possession of you by lunch time.

Grape-Nuts is a concentrated food and contains as much nourishment as bulky body-heating food like meat, potatoes, etc. Its crisp daintiness will appeal to your palate, and the result is a very marked difference in the temperature of the body, and the certainty of ease and perfect digestion.

Quit coffee; it unnaturally stimulates the brain and nerves, heating the body and causing an uneven temper; use Postum Food Coffee, has a charming flavor when properly made, and does not affect the nervous system, but assists the brain to work with ease and clearness.

Experience and experiment in food and its application to the human body has brought out these facts. They can be made use of and add materially to the comfort of the user during the hot weather.

Look through the recipe book in each Grape-Nuts package for delicious puddings, entrees, salads and desert.

A NARROW ESCAPE

John Reese Barely Saved Himself from Drowning at the Locks

The water in the river is unusually high for this time of the year, and the rotter slide at the locks, which is so serviceable to canoeists under normal conditions, is now exceedingly dangerous. It is very hard to make his point just now owing to the high water and strong current, and canoeists should avoid running any risks. Mr. John Reese, and employe of the Canadian General Electrical Works, had a narrow escape yesterday morning when attempting to run the slide in the usual way. The strong current caught his canoe and whirled it over the boom, smashing it into atoms. Reese managed to seize hold of a cable stretched across the river from a derrick used in constructing the new dam, and thus saved himself from being carried away in the angry waters and in all probability drowned. Reese managed to get ashore and is to be congratulated on his narrow escape. It is to be hoped that canoeists take warning from his thrilling experience.

Laid at Rest

The funeral of the late Mr. Thomas Morrow left the family residence, 170 Edinburgh street, yesterday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock and proceeded to the George street Methodist church where a funeral service was held. Interment took place in the Little Lake Cemetery.

Fatally Injured

—Mr. Jas. Sullivan, Weller street, died last night from injuries received while working on a scaffold on the Schneider building on George street, which was formerly occupied by Mr. Pete Simons. His death came as a shock to his wife and family. He was a well known and highly respected citizen of the town. He was 60 years of age and a member of St. Peter's T.A. S., the members of which are requested to meet in their hall at 9 o'clock tonight to make arrangements with regard to the funeral.

Three Bottles of

Paine's Celery Compound

Wrought a Glorious and Happy Cure That Astonished a Whole Community

In the ranks of sick and diseased sufferers, many men and women have become hopeless because of the failures of physicians and their medicines.

We would have all such dejected and despairing mortals take comfort this very day. We would impress upon them the blessed truth—Paine's Celery Compound is abundantly able to save and cure. A multitude of people saved from disease and death have given strong and incontrovertible testimony that Paine's Celery Compound can save even at the eleventh hour. Mr. F. Finter, Ottawa, Ont., tells of his terrible condition, his failures with physicians, and of his wonderful cure by Paine's Celery Compound. He writes:

"For four years I endured terrible agony and misery owing to pains in my head and chest. Life was a burden to me, and no mortal could describe my sufferings. I was treated by doctors, and used many patent medicines, but nothing gave me relief until I used your Paine's Celery Compound. I thank God for the day it was brought to my notice in the Ottawa papers. I have taken three bottles of the medicine, and to-day I can truly say that I feel like a new man. I will recommend the remedy whenever I have the opportunity, as it is the best ever given to sufferers."

Took Paris Green

A physician was hastily summoned on Sunday to the corner of Cambridge and Walnut streets, where Mrs. Kimball was found to be in a precarious condition, she having taken, either by mistake or purposely, a dose of Paris green. Under skilful medical treatment, however, Mrs. Kimball has been brought out of danger. No reason is known why she should attempt to poison herself, and it is thought the occurence must have been accidental.

Resolution of Thanks

The following resolution was unanimously carried by a standing vote of the Orangemen on their return from Lindsay:—"That the thanks of the Orangemen of the County of West Peterboro' are due and are hereby tendered to Mr. F. W. Miller and the members of his Band for the excellent music provided on the 12th July." We thank Mr. Miller for his great kindness and for the trouble he went to to procure music for the Orangemen and also congratulate Mr. Miller on his success in organising a band for the 12th July notwithstanding the contemptible means resorted to by some members of the other Band to prevent members playing with him. We would request Mr. Miller to organise and Independent Band, and pledge ourselves to give him every assistance and support possible so that in future the citizens of Peterboro' will not be held up by any combination.

"That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to every Lodge in the County so that the members will know that Mr. Miller has been a true friend to the Orange Association."

THE RELENTLESS MARCH OF RUSSIA

The Only Danger of a European War is Through Russia's Policy

HER GREAT AMBITION MUST BE CURBED

Her Eyes Are Once More Fixed on Constantinople—The Menace to the Peace Of the World

Special to The Times.

New York, July 15.—It has become one of the main duties, if not the chief, of the statesmen of the world who deal with foreign affairs to watch and retard as they can the growing greatness of Russia. Temporarily checked in Manchuria, we now hear of her threatening attitude toward the Scandanavian peninsula. And there are not wanting signs that she still stirs uneasily toward Constantinople, for deep in the heart of every Russian autocrat for the past thousand years has been the ambition to emulate their predecessor, the renowned Oleg, who hung his shield in derision on the gates of Byzantium.

Up to within comparatively recent times European statesmen seem to have been singularly blind to the growing threat of Russia. Here and there a warning voice was raised, but it was a voice crying in the wilderness. In the formative period of the empire, when Europe might have taken warning by the unscrupulous ambition and land hunger which the new nation boldly proclaimed as its fundamental policy, and when it would have been easy by concerted action to have set limits to its southern and western expansion, Russia was not regarded as worthy the attention of great statesmen and as a country sufficiently held in check by Mongol raids, futile Polish invasions and the occasional nibblings of the Teutonic Knights.

Even after the Muscovite power had assumed something of its present gigantic proportions, a pitiful desire to annex a new province or incorporate a new city within their boundaries caused the nations of Europe to shut their eyes to the northern menace. The modern policy of "buffer states," which has been pursued in the erection of the kingdoms Roumania and Servia, and the principality of Bulgaria by the European concert, and in the maintenance of the independence of Afghanistan by the British, and of the integrity of Corea by Japan, would have saved Poland and checked the slow and ceaseless Russian prowl into Central Europe. And Sweden — the country which now finds herself face to face with a fate from which only outside intervention can save her — Sweden, from the time the bear cub first growled and showed his claws, should have one settled foreign policy to which al lothers were made subservient—and that the curbing of Russia. Instead; we see her a great and powerful military nation, squandering her resources of men, money, warlike valor and soldierly genius in mingling with the quarrels of Central and Western Europe.

Gustavus Adolphus elected to strut for a brief time across the stage of the Thirty Years' War as the "the Protestant hero" and die on the field of Lutzen rather than to consecrate all his genius and devote all the power and resources of his country to the sole object of beating back Russia from the Baltic. That "last of the Vikings," Charles XII., did indeed make a gallant stand against Russia, and paid the penalty for the neglect of his predecessors at the disaster of Pultowa. But even he dissipated his resources and his energies by mingling with the affairs of Central Europe, dreamed of the imperial crown of Germany, and died an ally of the Czar. Even as late as 1813 we see the French private of marines, Bernadotte, masquerading as King of Sweden forming an alliance with the Czar, and sending his troops to fight the battles of the nation which had shorn Scandinavia of her possessions and power, and was already planning her complete annihilation. For centuries Sweden has been blindly drifting upon the peril which now menaces her, preparing the way for her own obliteration from the map of Europe. With France and Russia in close alliance, she can ultimately be saved only by the vigorous, concered action of the other nations.

The menace to Sweden is immediate, but perhaps Russia will not force the issue now; perhaps not for many years. Her designs are plain; she makes no effort at concealing them; but she can afford to wait for the times of their accomplishment. In that great Russian policy inaugurated by Ivan the Terrible and elaborated and impregnated with force and direction by Peter the Great, a few years' delay is only the pause of the soldier by the wayside to readjust the weight of his accoutrements.

EFFORTS TO BREAK GREAT COAL STRIKE

A Chance for the Termination of the Present Crisis

THURSDAY'S GREAT MEETING

The Convention Either to Take a Stand for the Opposite Course—A Crises will be Reached

Special to The Times.

New York, July 15.—A Times' reporter was informed yesterday by a man in a position to know the facts that should the Indianapolis convention of soft coal miners decide next Thursday not to order a strike, but instead should authorize a general assessment in aid of the anthracite strikers—as most of those interested now believe will be done—steps will at once be taken by the operators to break up the strike with as little delay as possible.

The anthracite operators will set about this, it was learned, by opening (and beginning to operate as many mines as they can easily handle with the force at their disposal. If necessary they will combine forces to operate such important mines as are necessary.

A representative of the New York, Ontario and Western Railway Company who was asked about this proposed plan, said to the reporter:

"The miners are doing nothing and we are doing nothing until after the convention. It is possible that a general strike of bituminious miners may be ordered, but this is very improbable. In case such an improbable thing happens and the order is obeyed the industries of the whole country will soon be tied up and something will have to break.

"In that case if we cannot get our own men to work we will then start mining with any men we can get and will test the constitutionality of the law by which miners must be licensed by inspectors before they are allowed to go to work.

"It is more likely, however, that the convention will simply endorse the strike assess its members and appeal to other branches of organized labor for contributions to keep the anthracite strikers going. In that case we will open collieries with our own men as fast as we can put them at work.

"It may be necessary for several companies to get together to open a certain colliery if any single company cannot get enough miners to work it. In such a case that will be done. We will protect the men who do go to work. If the strikers interfere with the men and if there is rioting, the militia will be called out and I think that will soon end the strike."

A BRIGHT FUTURE FOR BOER COLONIES

The Burhers Flocking in Thousands Back to Their Homes

A NEW ERA FOR SOUTH AFRICA

The County Admirably Adopted for Stock Passing Peace and Plenty for all

Special to The Times.

London, Jult 15.—The burghers of the Transvaal and Orange River colony are flocking back to their ruin-homes to begin life anew. Their numbers will soon be swelled by the return of some thousands of the men who, for two years or more, have been living in widely scattered prison camps in India, St. Helena, Bermuda and even in Portugal, where the fighters caught in Portuguese East Africa have been kept at England's expense. Few of them have anything left except the plains where their flocks and herds lived. The humble Boer farmhouses, with their thatched roofs and the cluster of outbuildings that sheltered the black help were nearly all destroyed. The Boers are going home with tents, rations and equipment provided by their conquerors to enable them to make a new start. Seed and live stock are given to the many who have lost their all. They are pioneers again as their fathers were when they drove out the Matabeles to make new homes in the wilderness.

Nevertheless the material prospects of the Boers were never brighter than they are to-day. The great lack of South Africa has always been men to develop its resources. The natives still outnumber the whites, seven to one. The larger development has been wholly within the past thirty years. There has been scarcely any progress in manufacturing industries because the whites have been too few in number to develop the natural products of their country.

But it is now understood that the British Government has decided upon an extensive scheme of State-aided immigration into South Africa. There is room for some millions of industrious white settlers. The country needs them if its resources are ever to be properly developed; and in a large part of the former Boer republics, as well as in Rhodesia, nearer the equator, the table-land rises to an altitude that insures an almost European climate. The heat in these highlands is much less than in Natal, which is much farther from the equator.

The Boers cannot fail to share in the benefits that the new era in South Africa will confer. Four million sheep were grazing, before the war, on the plains of the little Orange Free State. The best wheat lands in South Africa are in the southern part of the Orange River Colony, and neighboring Basutoland. The high veldt of the south Transvaal, 4,000 to 6,000 feet above the sea, is particularly adapted for horse and sheep culture and vegeables, which, before the war, were brought by ox teams, from three to four days' journey, to feed Johannesburg. The broad plains of the middle veldt, from Pretoria to the Tropic of Capicorn, are a vast cattle range. The Witwatersrand is now preparing for a larger development than ever before; the new era of manufacturing will dawn; and the Boer farmers will have the best markets they have ever enjoyed for their live stock, wool, hides, wheat and vegetables. The world will rejoice in the prospect of peace and plenty for the sturdy Dutch settlers who truggled so gloriously gainst overwhelming odds.

FAREWELL PRESENTATION

Miss Sara Hamilton, Mark St. Sabbath School is Honored

Miss Sarah Hamilton, the popular and efficient teacher of the young men's Bible Class in Mark street Sabbath school, is leaving for Winnipeg, for an extended holiday for the benefit of her health, hence on Monday evening, July 14, a large number of the members and friends of the school gathered at her home to bid her farewell, and to spend a social hour before her departure.

During the evening, an address was read by the secretary of the school, Miss Lillie Kindred, and Miss A. Dawson, on behalf of the school, presented Miss Hamilton with a handsome ring. Rev. C. L. Thompson also made a few remarks, expressive of the high esteem in which Miss Hamilton is held by all connected with the Mark street Sabbath school.

After Miss Hamilton had appropriately replied, refreshments were served and a pleasant social hour was spent, after which the company departed, each wishing Miss Hamilton a safe and pleasant trip.

The address was as follows:

"Ashburnham, July 14, 1902.

To Miss Sara Hamilton, Mark street Sabbath school, Ashburnham:

Dear Miss Hamilton,—A few of your many friends and fellow workers have met this evening to bid you farewell on the eve of your departure to the west, to wish you a safe and pleasant journey, and to express the hope that before long you may return to us fully restored to health and strength.

We cannot allow you to depart, however, without expressing our appreciation of your services as teacher of the young men's Bible Class in our Sabbath school, and we ask you to accept this slight token of the esteem in which you are held by us all.

Our prayer is that God may still bless you, and that He may continue to use you in furthering the interests of His kingdom, wherever you may be.

Signed on behalf of the school,
Rev. C. L. Thompson, Pastor.
M. W. Matchett, Superintendent.
F. Taylor, Assistant Superintendent.
Lillie Kindred, Secretary Treasurer.
A. Dawson, Teacher Ladies' Bible class.

CHAMBERLAIN TO STAY IN COLONIAL OFFICE

London Times Says He Has Not Yet Accomplished the Task He Has Undertaken

Special to The Times.

London, July 15.—The Times says Mr. Chamberlain has not thought of leaving the Colonial Office, as the work he has undertaken for the welfare of the Empire is by no means yet accomplished. Mr. Chamberlain, The Times declares, has put his hand to the plow for the construction of South Africa and other colonial problems, and is quite content for the present to prosecute his task to its completion.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach determined that paper says, to retire from the Chancellorship of Exchequer for personal and not political reasons two years ago, and only abandoned his intention for the time at the Marquis of Salisbury's instance Sir Michael Hicks-Beach will retain his office for the present, and it will not be necessary for Balfour to find a successor for him until after the parliamentary adjournment next month.

OUT OF CONSERVATIVE HANDS.

The most significant portion of the Duke of Devonshire's speech in the House of Lords yesterday in which he assumed the leadership of that legislatve branch, was his distinction between the great majority of this House, who for a long series of years followed the leadership of Salisbury, and the political sect to which the Duke himself belongs. His Grace thus emphasizes the fact that he considers that Liberal-Reunionists still have a separate existence from the Conservative party and also that the leadership of the Upper House has now passed out of Conservative hands. This distinction between two branches of the party in power is not commonly made in the public mind these days, and Rosebery's expression of mild surprise at the stress laid by the Duke of Devonshire on a line imperceptible to the unpracticed eye was as telling as his classification of himself as representative of those less bound by party than Earl Spencer, who had just spoken by the Liberals. The lords devoted forty-five minutes to graceful tributes to the Marquis of Salisbury, all of which were worth hearing, and the scene was, as Rosebery, said, peculiar to the British Parliament.

CHAMBERLAIN'S GROWING POPULARITY.

London, July 15—A despatch from Berlin says public opinion finds it difficult to believe that the state of Salisbury's health made his immediate resignation imperative. It is even suggested that the resignation was accelerated by the fear, lest, if there were any delay, Mr. Chamberlain's popularity should assume such proportions that it would not be possible for King Edward to select any other successor to Salisbury that the Colonial Secretary.

A GREATER POWER THAN EVER.

London, July 15.—A Vienna correspondent says it is fully realized that in matter affecting the British Empire's foreign relations, Mr. Chamberlain will be the leading spirit in the Cabinet to a greater extent that ever.

LACROSSE.

The Y.M.C.A. and Athletics will play on the Nicholls Oval tonight.

The Port Hope Lacrosse Club has arranged for a special rate from Peterborough to Oshawa on Saturday July 19th, of $1.05, leaving here on the regular noon train, and returning on a special the same evening. No doubt a large number will see the match as it should prove exceptionally hard fought now that the teams are in shape.

The T.A.S. lacrosse teams have been receiving valuable information at the hands of Fred. Lynch, who has been coach for the boys the last week. Lynch figured on the New Westminster team that played against the Shamrocks.

The Hastings lacrosse team would like to arrange a game with one of the Peterborough teams.

BASKETBALL.

The Y.M.C.A. Brownie Basket Ball Team, met last night at the building to reorganize for the coming season. Messrs. Sanford Hall and Gordon Miller were unanimously re-elected to their old positions as manager and captain respectively of the team. The Brownies will be early in training, and under the able direction of their energetic manager should eclipse the enviable reputation they gained last season as "one of the two best boys teams in Canada." The following players comprise the team. G. Miller, captain; N. Miller; G. Ferguson, R. Hall, H. Daly and A. Boucher.

BASEBALL.

The Cobourg World contains the following item that may be of interest:

To the Editor of the Cobourg World—

Dear Sir,—The Roseneath baseball club accepted an invitation of the Peterborough League team to play at Peterborough last Saturday, and notwithstanding the wet weather and being anxious to redeem their defeat of June 25th at Jubilee Point, they took the boat for Peterborough. The game was played at Nicholls Park. Both teams agreed to play five iinnings at least, and as many more as possible, as the Roseneaths had to catch the boat. Roseneath went to bat and scored 2 runs in their first innings This was all they got. Peterborough was an easy mark for Dawe's curves, as they were unable to do anything with him and only scored one run in fourth on an overthrow. Dawe struck out five and allowed three hits, while McCorry struck out three and allowed six hits. Both teams played a good game in the fied. The game progressed well for five innings, when on account of lack of time Roseneath had to leave to catch the boat—and here Peterborough showed its mean, contemptible spirit, and refused to pay the $10 they agreed to give to Roseneath, and they had to journey home without it. This is the second season that Roseneath has been used dirty by Peterborough, and it will be the last as apparently Peterborough is keeping up its old reputation of doing the dirty act, especially when defeated. Roseneath is looking forward to a game with the Independents of Cobourg, when they expect to meet men.

CRICKET.

The Toronto team defeated the team which R. B. Rogers collected by a score of 109 to 50.

THE STORY LIBELS THE KINDLY ESKIMOS

That Reported Killing of Andre, and Aeronaut

THERE IS NO "FIERCE TRIBE"

On the Contrary the the Eskimoes are Everywhere a Mild, Tender and Amiable People

Ottawa, July 11.—Dr. Robert Bell, acting director of the Geological Survey Department, writes to an evening paper as follows: "I read with surprise the telegram from Winnipeg, which stated that Rev. Richard Farles had brought from Fort Churchill further news of the reported killing of Andre and his companions by a tribe of 'fierce Eskimos' some three years ago. The story, as given in the telegram, is vague and unlikely. As one who had several years acquaintance with the Eskimos on both sides of Hudson Bay and Straits, the Northern Labrador, and Baffin Land, I place no confidence in it. There are no 'fierce Eskimos' in any of these regions. On the contrary, the Eskimos are everywhere a mild, timid, and amiable people, and they are always delighted to meet with white men, and they invariably treat them kindly. The regions indicated has been recently traversed by Mr. Hanbury, Mr. Jas. Tyrell, and Archdeacon Lofthouse and these gentlemen would have been sure to have heard of the killing, if it had ever occurred. If the Eskimos brought any fragments of scientific instruments to Fort Churchill last year they probably belonged to some of those lost by Mr. Hanbury or Mr. J. B. Tyrrell.

"The statement that 'the savage Eskimos fell upon and literally chopped them to pieces with their harpoons' is in keeping with the rest of the story. The locality of the supposed tragedy is far inland. The Eskimos do not carry their harpoons away from the sea coast, and any person who has seen one of these implements knows that they could not be used for chopping.

"The alleged want of success of the missionaries among the Eskimos is as incredible as the story about Andre. These people accept the teachings of the missionaries with great readiness, and those of them who have heard the Gospel teach it to others of their tribe, so that Christianity is now widely spread among them."

When Fishing is Good

Mr. A. Warne writes the Times from Harwood, as follows An east end wind is a poor fishing wind. Fish go against the wind and against the current. Thunder stops the fish biting. It is not a good sign to see the fish jumping. A good place for maskinonge is what the Indians call a nash-kong,—end of a rice bed. On a dark day use a silver bait, and on a bright day use a brass one. The Indians are beginning to use double spoons. One secret of successful fishing is to keep your hooks sharp. The best bait for bass is frogs or craw fish or eel flies. A ripple on the water is favorable to maskinonge fishing. The fish bite best while it is threatening to rain and when it is raining. In certain parts of the lake the fish will not be biting at all on a certain day, but in the other parts of the lake they will be found to be biting. The best times to try for maskinonge are at 9 o'clock in the forenoon between 1 and 2 in the afternoon and for a couple of hours up to sunset. Black bass will bite well after sunset.

THE WEST INDIES WANT AID FROM BRITAIN

Otherwise There is Talk of Seceding and Joining the United States--Chamber of Commerce Strained to Almost the Breaking Point

Special to The Times.

Kingstown, Island of St. Vincent, Saturday, July 12.—At an important public meeting held at Port of Spain, Island of Trinidad, on Friday, July 11, largely attended by sugar planters and others, there was an interesting discussion of the sugar crisis in the British West Indies, and the inadequacy of the means offered by the Imperial Government for its amerliration. Edgar Tripp, of the Chamber of Commerce, said the loyalty of the West Indian colonies had been strained to almost the breaking point, and it was "small wonder if their wistful longing should be turned to that great republic in the north that knows so well how to protect its own and foster the industries of its citizens."

This sentiment is shared by many people in the West Indies, but the press generally deprecates the expression of such views.

PROF. DAVIES' PUPILS

Their Success in the Conservatory of Music Examinations

We congratulate Prof. Davies on the success which his pupils have met with in the examinations in pianoforte playing which were held in Peterborough on Thursday last, by Mr. A. S. Vogt, professor at the Conservatory of Music, director of the Mendlessohn choir, etc. and Lindsay was the local centre for the examinations in singing and voice production, conducted by Dr. Ham, F.R.C.O., of the Conservatory of Music and St. James Cathedral, Toronto. The results just received show that the whole of the nine candidates prepared by Mr. Davies were passed, seven taking honors. The lits is as follows:

Intermediate piano (3rd year) —Miss Eva Bradd Peterborough; Miss Ethel Clark, Peterborough; Miss Ethel Tully, Peterborough; Miss Florence Thompson Ashburnham; Miss Jessie Anderson, Hastings; Miss Lizzie Wilson, Hastings.

Intermediate singing and voice production— Miss Nellie Davies, Peterborough., 1st class honors.

GRAND TRUNK DOUBLE TRACK

The Hon. Mr. Tarte Says That It Will be Done

In speaking to a press representative in Toronto, Hon. Mr. Tarte said, when asked if the Grand Trunk proposed to abandon Portland:

"Well, yes, perhaps, they may. Mr Hays understands the question thoroughly and has taken it in at a glance and the Great Northern may soon have a fleet. It means that midland will become a great port if the Grand Trunk doubles its track from Midland to Peterborough, where the two roads centre, and what we are trying to do in our department is to work with the railways and waterways in harmony. Some people seem to have got a wrong opinion of the Canadain Pacific and treat it as a enemy to the country. This great company is no enemy to Canada, and that idea is nonsense, and we are trying to work with the railways in building up the public highways of the country."

Bride's Gift Worth $1,300,000

Lenox, Mass., July 14.—The wedding presents received by Mr. and Mrs. W. B. O. Field, who were married here on Tuesday, numbered 175. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. D Sloane, the parents of the bride, gave her a diamond and ruby collar and butterfly valued at $100,000, besides a house on Fifth avenue, New York, and a lot for a country house near Elm Court. Frederick Vanderbilt gave two dozen gold plates. A gold table service was the gift of Mrs Whitelaw Reid. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt gave the bride a large sapphire surrounded by twelve large diamonds, set as a brooch. Henry Sloane, the bride's uncle gave her a silver loving cup which he bought in London. Harry Payne Whitney's gift was a gold and silver teaset. It is estimated that the presents are worth $1,300,000

BRITISH TARIFF AND SOUTH AFRICA

The staff correspondent of the London Times in Vienna wrote to that paper on June 4, concerning the preparations being made by the Continental nations to capture the trade of South Africa. "It has long been evident to all who follow the progress of opinion among the European commercial and industrial classes," says the correspondent, "that there would be a rush on the new South African market by the manufacturing States of the Continent as soon as the much-maligned British Government had, by the conclusion of the war, opened up the Boer countries to foreign trade and enterprise." Even in easy-going Austria, it seems, syndicates are being formed to take advantage of the opportunities offered at England's expense. The Germans, of course, are the most energetic and the most to be feared as rivals. The German manufacturers have their home market preserved to them, and they can send their goods to South Africa by subsidized steamships, and, if necessary, slaughter them there to get a hold on the market. English trade will be unable to compete on equal terms.

These points the Times correspondent mentions, and he then very naturally puts the case in this way: "It may be fairly asked, however, whether it is just and reasonable that the British manufacturers and working classes, who have been subjected to a heavy extra burden of taxation in consequence of the late war, should be further handicapped by such unfair competition. This question is all the more pertinent, as the severest competition is to be expected precisely from that great European nation which confessedly claims at one day depriving England of her maritime predominance, and which, in the meantime, is doing its utmost to damage the commercial and industrial position, as well as the political prestige of the German Empire."

Put in this concrete way and in reference to a country which the British public has just been spending millions of money and thousands of lives in preserving or acquiring, the weakness and unfairness to itself of the policy of the Manchester school must come home to the British nation. The process of education is steadily going on and the South African situation is certain to greatly accelerate it. Already in the case of the sugar slaughter in the English market by the Continental countries to the detriment of the English refiners and the sugar growers of British Colonies, English public opinion has supported the Government in its decision to impose countervailing duties wherever bounties are continued. The Times correspondent regards this as a precedent which might well be followed in view of the situation in South Africa. There is little doubt that a majority of the English people will share this opinion. The Times, at least, gives it prominence under the title of "Foreign Competition in South Africa." The portion of the article dealing with this point may be quoted in full:

"It is perhaps worth considering whether the excellent precedent furnished by the successful action of the British Government in the matter of the sugar bounties which has caused serious searchings of conscience among Continental exporters, may not be capable of extension. The application to the annexed African provinces, at least during the period of their administration by the Crown, of the same fundamental principle of compensating by countervailing duties for all unfair advantages acquired by the exporters of foreign States would seem calculated to have a beneficial influence not only on the entire trade of the Empire, but also on the promotion of closer relations between its outlying parts. The latter circumstance should not be overlooked in view of the obligations of the Mother Country to the Colonies, which might be disposed to resent what they would possibly regard as a sacrifice of their interests to political opponents and commercial rivals. The justice of the principle underlying the demands of the British Government in the sugar question has been reluctantly admitted by the Continental States concerned. It is not easy to see what sound objection they could raise against its application to other commodities, the manufacturers of which, by means of the Cartel system, fleece the native consumer in order to export goods at what is practically less than cost price. The argument drawn from the commercial treaties would have even less force than before, as the Transvaal and Orange Free State did not form part of the British Customs territory at the time they were concluded. Under the British flag they constitute, to all intents and purposes, a new market in which all are free to participate. Surely it is only fair that the outsiders who profit by this fresh field of commercial enterprise should contribute a trifle towards the cost of opening it up."

In this paragraph will be found the sound principle of self-defence and also the strongest argument for Imperial preferential trade arrangements. English opinion must come to accept both the principle and the argument. The Liberal papers in this country which are still presenting the out-worn doctrines are hopelessly behind the times.

IN SPECIAL SESSION

Town Council Gives a Grant of $100 to the Consumption Sanitarium — Town Does Not Want No. 4 Dam.

The Town Council met in special session Saturday evening, when there were present His Worship, Mayor Denne, and Aldermen Corkery, Roger, Morrison, McGregor, Batten, Clinkscale, Best and Rush.

The committee of the Whole Council reported as follows:

1. That the path across Central Park, from the north-east corner to the south-west corner, be graded with cinders and put in proper condition.

2. That a grant of $100 be made to the Free Consumption Sanitarium on condition that the town have the privilege of having it applied on account of any patients sent from Peterborough on the recommendation of the Central Charity Board.

3. That the Clerk be instructed to write to the Minister of Railways and Canals and state that as the town has just taken over the waterworks at a cost of $230,000, it is not at present in a position to undertake the large expenditure necessary to develop the power at Dam No. 4, on the Peterborough Lakefield section of the Trent Canal, and therefore the town waives its claim as a prior applicant to the surplus water at the dam in favor of any applicant, who will develop the power and transmit it to Peterborough.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

M. A. MORRISON,
Chairman.

The report was adopted as read, and the Council then adjourned.

15 Tons Smelting Ore, average $80.00 (less transportation and smelting charges $10.00, $70.00 being low average.... Profit $1,050

$2,900 PER DAY, 350 DAYS

This is over 20 per cent. on the capital $5,000,000 at par, and at present selling price of 75 cents per share amounts to over 27 per cent. The above is one-third of the capacity. Full capacity—600 tons in 24 hours—would make these figures three times as great. Total amount to be raised fully guaranteed. This investment upon these terms is worthy the careful consideration of all those having sums to invest. WRITE FOR PROSPECTUS.

Stock Par Value $1.00 Now Selling at 75 Cents

We trust that you will appreciate the fact that THE GREGORY BUELL CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING and MILLING COMPANG is a going concern, the properties having produced $2,000,000 in the past under unfavorable circumstances. The present consolidation, by operating fourteen mines through one shaft, makes possible an enormous saving in operating expenses doing away with thirteen engineers, firemen, etc., a great reduction in fuel and many other points too numerous to mention.

With the vast additional ore bodies now being developed by tunnels and cross-cuts, when completed, assures the management that, on a calculation based on one-third of their capacity, they can earn 25 PER CENT. per annum upon the investment.

Bear in mind that the mill is built, a large part of the machinery is in place and that the Company is absolutely free from all debt. We consider this, after a most careful examination by us, a gilt-edge investment. We cannot recommend this too highly, and trust that you may appreciate the advantages as we do.

COPPER AT THREE AND HALF CENTS A POUND

George A. Treadwell Mining Company

27 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK. JEROME, ARIZONA.

Capital - - - - $3,000,000.

VALUE OF SHARES $10.

In a suit recently tried in the New York courts it was proved from the books of the United Verde Copper Company and the sworn testimony of the bookkeepers that the cost to that company of producing copper was only three and a half cents a pound, not counting the gold and silver values, which—allowed for—reduced the cost to a still lower figure.

Nowhere outside the Verde Copper Belt in Yavapai County, Arizona, is copper produced in quantities for less than twice this cost.

The United Verde has about two hundred acres on the north end of the Belt and the George A. Treadwell Company has several times as much in the central and southern parts of the Belt. The conditions along the whole Belt are entirely similar. We already have three mines developed—the Cliff, Brookshire and Iron Queen—one of which, the Cliff, seems to be larger and better than the United Verde, and the other two at least approach it in magnitude and value, while we have several others, including Badger, Pastime, Green Monster and Spoke and Stonewall, which, though less developed, are equally promising.

Professor Treadwell believes we have at least half a dozen United Verdes within the broad and extensive limits of our holdings.

As soon as our smelter plant which is now in process of erection, is completed, we can certainly produce copper as cheap as our rich neighbor on the north.

The United Verde for several years has produced one-tenth the copper of the world. When our plants are fully installed we expect the Verde Belt to produce one-half the copper of the world, and the George A. Treadwell Mining Company will be prepared to do more than its full share.

Before investing in copper in unproved localities, consider the stock of the George A Treadwell Mining Company, named after the great pioneer and explorer of the Verde Belt and owning the largest and best aggregation of properties on it.

The price of the stock is $11 a share. Make checks payable to The order of the company and send them to 27 William Street New York

German Court Martial.

A court-martial which has aroused an amense amount of interest in Germany has been brought to an end. For over a year two non-commissioned officers named Marten and Hickel have lain under the charge of having murdered their commanding officer, Captain Von Krosigk. The trial, which has just ended in their acquittal, was the third to which they have been subjected. Late in the afternoon of January 21, 1901, Captain Von Krosigk was shot dead by an unknown hand through an embrasure in the wall of the riding school, where he had been superintending the riding exercise of some of his troopers. The murdered officer had a reputation for extreme severity in his dealings with his men, and had at least on one occasion been punished for exceeding the legitimate dictates of military discipline. The elaborate investigations which were instituted at Gumbinnen and which were partly conducted with the aid of a detective from Berlin laid bare the whole domestic economy and the daily life of the barracks. They showed that among those who had suffered most from the excessive harshness of Captain Von Krosigk was the non-commissioned officer Marten, as well as his father, a senior sergeant who had formerly served in Von Krosigk's squadron, but had obtained a transfer to another in order to escape the persecution to which he had been subjected by that officer. Hickel was the brother-in-law of the younger Marten and was involved in the suspicion which fell upon him, as he had been in Marten's company a few minutes before the murder. Both in the former trials and in that which, lasting ten days ended recently the evidence was chiefly furnished by dragoons of the squadrons who attempted, so far as their somewhat hazy memories served, to give an account of what they had observed during the half-hours and even the minutes which preceeded and followed the crime. One witness maintained that he had seen Marten near the carbines' stand a few minutes before the murder, while another had seen two persons with stiff caps like those of non-commissioned officers near a peep-hole in the door of the riding school. On the other hand, Marten and Hickel, it was proved, had both been in the house of the parents of the former no later than ten minutes before the fatal shot was fired.

At the first trial last June Marten and Hickel were both acquitted. At the second trial in August Hickel was acquitted, while Marten was condemned to death, an attempt to escape from a military custody which according to his own account, was almost intolerable, having weighed heavily against him. The Supreme Military Court, however, quashed the second verdict in the case of both of the accused, on the ground of a technical flaw in the proceedings. The final trial brought to light no fresh evidence of importance but the sensation excited by the case had apparently inspired a number of uneducated people to come forward with stories equally sensational, but unsupported by any corroborative testimony. Thus a woman in Gumbinnen declared that on the afternoon of January 21 she had heard a shot fired in the barracks and had immediately afterwards seen in the moonlight two civilians running out of the gates. It was proved, however, that on that evening the moon did not rise till three hours later than the hour of the murder. A good deal of evidence was adduced regarding previous attacks under cover of night upon the house and the property of Capt. Von Krosigk and it was testified that he himself had attributed these outrages to civilians.

The close of the final trial was rendered dramatic by a declaration made by Marten on the invitation of the Court. He said:—

"I only ask leave to say as a last word in my defence what I feel in my inmost heart. To my great grief I have heard the prosecutor propose that punishment should be inflicted upon me. The whole nation must know, and I declare with a loud voice—as sure as there is a God in heaven I can swear from the depth of my heart that I am innocent. My words are no mere phrase, they are the very truth. At the close of the investigation the Kriegsgerichtsrath said to me: "If You are condemned you can appeal to the mercy of his Majesty.' If I were guilty I should be ashamed to ask mercy of my Kaiser. I have always been heart and soul a soldier, like my father. Now I am only a shadow of what I was, and I have been dragged through the mire before the whole world. I ask the Court to give me justice."

In declaring its verdict the Court admitted that there were strong grounds for the suspicion which had been entertained regarding Marten and Hickel, but that, on the other hand, part of the circumstantial evidence was utterly untrustworthy and part of it of doubtful accuracy. There was nothing to show that the enmity of the Marten family against Captain Von Krosigk was of such a deep-seated and permanent character as to have driven the younger Marten and Hickel to commit this terrible crime.

Whitewash in the House.

There is more virtue in whitewash for the poultry house than most people are willing to credit. There are two ways to apply whitewash to a poultry house. One is with a brush and the other with a spray pump These pumps are obtainable almost anywhere now, and are the best implements for putting on whitewash. The sides and ceiling of the poultry house should be given an application of whitewash. The roosts and nest boxes should not be neglected. The whitewash should be of the consistency of thick cream, and it will be found a good plan to put some kerosene in each pailful. Mites can be killed and lice will not survive where a frequent and thorough application of whitewash is given. One can put on some old slip of a garment, an old hat and with a spray pump can in a few minutes have a good application of whitewash that will make everything sweet and clean. What falls on the floor will make a good floor itself when mixed with the hard dirt or coal ashes, or of whatever material the floor is made.

The Passing of the Horse.

Very early in the development of electric traction it was predicted that the use of the horse would ultimately decrease and perhaps disappear. Electric traction has now, however, been brought to a high degree of perfection, and yet the horse is still with us. Notwithstanding this, statistics show, we are assured editorially by the "Electrical Review" (April 19), that the horse is going—slowly, perhaps, but none the less surely. Says this paper:

"Some interesting statistics lately published by our lively French contemporary, 'La Locomotion Automobile,' show that in Europe the horse is rapidly disappearing in the various large cities. For example, in Paris the total number of horses in 1901, according to a municipal census of these animals, was 96,698, while this year it is only 90,796, a falling-off of about six per cent. In London, in the same period, the equine population has decreased ten per cent., while in Berlin, Vienna, and even in St. Petersburg, the same falling-off exhibits itself. This is partly due to the new trolley-roads, and very largely to the numerous and continual increase in the number of automobiles used both for pleasure and business.

"In this country the supersession of the horse by the trolley-car has been absolutely astonishing in its extent. Probably to-day in New York there are not more than two-thirds as many horses employed as were used twenty years ago. So far, the automobile appears to have made no great inroads into the horse business, and it is likely that the extension of the use of automobiles will have to wait upon the growth of more scientific ideas regarding street-paving and road-making. However, the decadence of the horse is upon us, and his disappearance may be looked for sooner or later.

"As certainly as anything can be predicted the progress of engineering advance will totally extinguish the horse as a beast of burden. We may look forward with certainty and satisfaction to the day when cities at least will be horseless and when we will be removed from the tyranny of this animal, which has imposed upon us stone-paved streets, unending dirt, and, curiously enough, the house-fly—an insect dependent upon the existence of stables for its birth and breeding. What the future of the horse will be is hard to say. It is likely that horses will continue for centuries to come to be used as instruments of sport and pleasure, but the day of their emancipation from hard labor in the streets and roads is not far distant."

Earthquakes and Causes.

One of the most disastrous earthquakes of recent times is that reported from Russian Transcaucasia. The town of Shamaka has been practically destroyed, only a dozen houses being left standing, while a population of 26,000 has been rendered homeless. The number of fatalities is as yet unknown. Over 300 bodies had been recovered at the latest accounts.

To the student of seismic phenomena, says the San Francisco "Chronicle," the interesting and suggestive feature in the Shamaka earthquake is that it has occurred in the neighborhood of the Baku oil district—the most productive field in the world, not excepting that of Beaumont, in Texas. It is, furthermore, a section of the world which has hitherto been exempt from these phenomena. The scientific enquirer will naturally search for a cause, for cause and effect go together in the scientific analysis of all phenomena. Is the great natural oil reservoir tapped by the oil wells of Baku, on the shores of the Caspian Sea, located under the site of Shamaka, and has the tremendous drain of mineral oil from the same caused a void and a subsequent shrinkage in the earth's crust in that neighborhood? The enquiry is not far-fetched. It is usually assumed that water takes the place of the oil withdrawn from the measures, filling the vacuum created by the latter's withdrawal, but if the water, being more tenuous, should find an independent vent elsewhere, the vacuum created by the draining of the mineral oil would remain, and a shrinkage of the unsupported crust of the earth would naturally follow sooner or later.

It has been suggested that the tapping of the oil measures in the southern part of California has relieved the mineral oil-bearing formations from the pressure of the gas created in them, and the possible subterranean gas explosions produced by excessive pressure, and thus removed one of the supposed causes of earthquakes in that section. There may be nothing in the theory, but it has been observed that the Los Angeles district has been notably exempt from seismic disturbances since the oil measures were tapped and vent given to the gases generated in them. Likewise, the theory that the Shamaka earthquake was due to the drain on the petroleum reservoirs in the Caucasus by the Baku wells may be entirely at fault. But the two phenomena seem to invite the attention of the scientist, and open a new field for the study of seismic disturbances.

Bees in War!

We do not know that bees have ever been recognized as among the accessories of war, but there is an old army story current in the Southern States of a party who were out scouting or foraging, probably both, one morning, and saw a much larger party of the enemy's cavalry riding down on them. It was useless to retreat across an open plain, for the horses could go faster than they, while to surrender meant a fate but little better or perhaps a little worse than death. They gathered behind a wall or embankment, resolved to sell their lives as dearly as possible, when one of their number spied a stand of beehives a little way behind them. Quickly he communicated his idea to his comrades, and enough ran back to each to seize a hive and throw it over the wall in front of them. Very quickly those bees were at work as busily as if they had been sworn into the service, and while the riders might have faced them, the horses would not, but were soon in full retreat a half mile away. Some of the boys got stung in trying to send missiles more powerful than bee stings after the enemy, but they all reached camp again soon without needing the surgeon's care.

KITCHENER A HERO, BULLER A BYWORD

London, July 14.—Despite the great interest in the King's progress back to health, his future movements, the date of the coronation, the rowing carnival at Henley, and the magnificent coronation bazaar, the prominent figures in the public eye have been two generals who commanded the British forces in South Africa. But in what different light they stands!

Kitchener, the triumphant organizer, a stern, unbending, silent man of iron deeds; Buller, domineering, bluff, hail fellow well met, boastful headstrong, a wilfully blind man, now shown to have been devoid of every qualification to command men or himself. To one the Empire extends the heartiest welcome; the other she tries to forget.

In view of London's enthusiasm over Lord Kitchener of Khartoum, the man of Egypt and South Africa, the British Empire's foremost soldier, it is interesting to recall the fact that the first uniform worn by him was the blue blouse and red trousers of the French army.

LEARNED BY DEFEAT.

To the lessons taught by the French defeat of 1870-71 can be traced the dominant characteristic of Lord Kitchener's method. His belief in and insistence upon absolute discipline and perfect organizations have given him success where others have failed.

Lord Kitchener was not quite twenty years old, and was living in picturesque Dinan when the dark days spread over France. Fired by an impulse, which he said at the time he was unable to resist, the future fist soldier of the British Empire, enlisted as a private in the Sixth Battalion of the Mobile Guard, attached to the second army of the Loire, under Gen. Chanzy. He did not take part in any actual fighting, but participated in the horrors of that winter retreat in January, 1871, when after three days' fighting the second army was badly defeated at Lemans.

With the French army he saw none of the pageantry of war, only its grimness and suffering and the awful effects of incompetency and mismanagement. General Chanzy's great herd of men, retreating in desperate confusion through snow and ice—indeed a miniature retreat from Moscow—was in a most battered and deplorable and pitiable condition, and Kitchener then learned, by practical demonstration, what lack of organization really meant.

A PANORAMA OF DEFEAT.

He saw forty miles of railway rolling stock blocked on the while line from Laval to Rennes. He saw the highways blocked with all the broken down impediments of a defeated army, famished horses perishing by the wayside; exhausted, barefooted soldiers often falling on the snow to die there; whole companies, occasionally entire battalions, going rationless, because suppplies could not be brought up. He beheld the fatal effects of lack of discipline, and learned how hopeless was the chance of an army, however brave, that would not submit to proper control.

The effect of these early experiences upon Lord Kitchener's military methods cannot be too highly estimated.

Quite different is the other pictures. The saddest and most pathetic figure in England today is undoubtedly General Sir Redvers Buller. Fallen from his pedestal, the laurel wreaths plucked from his brow, this hero of a hundred fights, who, when little more than a boy, won the Victoria Cross at the sword's point, is now denouced in most unmistakable terms by both press and public.

Yet Buller was a general who was sent out to South Africa with a grecat flourish of trumpets, who said he would take the Boer capital, Pretoria, before Christmas, that was, in two months from landing, who condemned the tactics of his fellow-officers; who tried to throw the blame of Spion Kop on others, when Lord Roberts said he ought to have been there himself. This, too, is one of the men who have been [illegible] the past training of the British officer.

THE KING WILL REVIVE TRIPLE ANOINTING.

Mediaeval Ceremony Abandoned by William IV and Queen Victoria to be Restored

Special to The Times.

London, July 14.—Many medical men still declare the King not to be eble to stand the fatigue that he must necessarily be called upon to undergo at the coronation. There is great talk about cutting the ceremony very short, but at the very least, it will take two hours. Enquries are being made as to the origin of the golden canopy which is held over the Queen during a certain part of the coronation ceremony. It is stated that years ago the Queen had always to be stripped to the waist for the anointing of the breast and the golden canopy was held over her during this somewhat embarassing ceremonial. Needless to say, the Queen is now only anointed on the head. It is stated in good authority that the King will revive at his own special command, the triple anointing which was dispensed with by William IV., and Queen Victoria. A puncture has been made in the King's robe to allow the anointing of the breast.

SALISBURY'S GREAT FEAT.

London, July 14—In an editorial today, the Times, after recounting some of Lord's Salisbury's chief claims to the gratitude of the British people, says: "Another achievement of Salisbury has been the steady building up, in circumstances of no small difficulty, of the excellent understanding now subsisting between this Empire and the United States. That has been the chief work of his last years in office, and it is a fitting crown for a life of successful and honorable service devoted to the highest interests of the British people."

FRENCHMEN ADMIRE KITCHENER.

Paris, July 14—Weeks ago many French papers were insulting Kitchener, and making him Great Britians scapegoat and the butt of their anglophobia. Now they have discovered unsuspected merits in him saying that perhaps he is not yet sufficiently appreciated by his countrymen. Nearly all the papers recall Kitchener's service when he enlisted in 1870 in the second army of the Loire, and risked his life for France. For the concentration camp system he is no longer held responsible. It is said he simply obeyed orders, which he regretted.

AUSTRALIA'S NEW GOVERNORR.

London, July 14.—The appointment of Col. H. McCalmont as Governor-General of Australia is being discussed. Some months ago he was approached unofficially regarding it, but since then he has heard no more about the matter. It is quite on the cards that Mr. Chamberlain may in the course of a few days, have something to say to McCalmont, because naturally before a man accepts such an appointment he wants to know something about ways and means and such like matters. Until last night Col. McCalmont knew nothing. His appointment would be a very popular one, not only in this country, but in Australia, judging from what one hears among the colonials now here. He is not only enormously rich, but a capital sportsman, and what is known as a downright jolly good fellow. A peerage would of course be conferred on him for it would never do to allow a commoner to succeed a long roll of peers. The colony would expect it as well. There have been rumours about Lord Brassey being apppointed but that is absolutely incorrect. I happen to know for a fact that he would not accept. He is quite tired of holding office out of England having done so for such a very long time.

A Great Future for Canadian Northwest

Minneapolis, Minn., July 14. — The long talked of grinding of Canadian wheat in bond in Minneapolis began yesterday morning. At 10 o'clock a United States revenue store-keeper took his stand at the receiving desk of the Humbildt mill and the first carload of grain was shoveled into the chutes and the grinding was begun.

It is impossible at present to tell what effect the grinding of Canadian wheat here will have on the local market, but it is not thought it will have any marked effect for a few years. The development of the Canadian wheat fields is rapidly going on, and soon their immense yield will affect prices in foreign markets.

It is thought that when that time comes the Minneapolis millers will have to take some action towards having the tariff reduced or the laws governing grinding in bond changed in order to successfully compete with Canadian millers.

WHAT OLD LONDON IS LIKE AT NIGHT

INTERESTING HISTORICAL FACTS

In Connection With the Seven Edwards of Royal Name - London by Gas Light

From our own Correspondent.

London, July 7.—London promises to be a greater magnet than ever for American tourists this year. For those who will make the trip for the first time ther will be so much to see that it will be difficult to know where to begin. After all, when the fixed show places, such as the Tower, Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's, and the National Gallery, have been duly visited, the American visitor will enjoy nothing more, by night or by day, than the ever shifting panorama of the city streets.

This is the real workaday London. You will always remember the Tower and the Abbey, but you will also remember these busy street scenes and perhaps think of them oftenest.

There have recently been received from London some remarkable photographs, reproduced from the New York Herald today. They are remarkable in more than one respect. First, in their artistic importance, and, second, in conveying not alone a mere picture of the streets, but through the process of printing in tints, a sense of atmosphere. There are views of Trafalgar square, that busy centre where the tides of humanity pour from the Strand, Pall Mall, Northumberland avenue, Whitehall, and St. Martin's lane, the focal points of London.

If you are lucky enough to reach one of those little "islands" in the middle of the driveway with your life, you can stay there for half an hour to advantage, and do nothing but look about you.

STREAM OF CABS.

Out from the Strand pour the cabs and buses by the hundreds. From morning until far into the night there is a steady stream of vehicles. You admire the "bobby" who holds up his right hand and stays this rush of horses, vehicles and humanity. You look up to the left and see old St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, and nearby you see a sign reading, "American bar," a distinctly English institution seldom patronized or understood by Americans. Then you see the National Gallery, not particularly imposing from an architectural standpoint, the Nelson monument and the lions.

Toward the early morning hours, when there is a temporary lull in the traffic and fog has settled over London, you can still stand in this old square and watch the lights flickering through the the moisture. It is not precisely an exciting pastime, but it affords ample opportunity for reflection.

Then again, there is a bit of newer old London that always interests the American traveler—the Victoria Embankment. Skirting the north bank of the Thames from Westminster bridge to Blackfriars' bridge, it is a scene of unceasing interest.

THE LIFE ON THE RIVER.

The interest is not alone in the beautiful tree lined driveway, but in the opportunity to view the life and color on the river. You can see the noisy, dirty little passenger steamers puffing along in their cumbersome way through the muddy waters and unending shipping. If you are of a curious turn of mind it will interest you to know that what is now the Victoria Embankment was once covered by the tide twice a day, and was not nearly as attractive a place as it is today.

At night on those occasions when the house is sitting and the lights are twinkling from the windows and reflected in the damp pavements beneath or in the river the houses of Parliament are particularly picturesque. You have doubtless have heard the sounds of "Big Ben" tolling in the clock tower long before you have arrived on the scene.

The reflection that Westminster hall a part of the ancient palace of Westminster, and which now forms the vestibule to the houses of Parliament, was begun by William Rufus, son of the Conqueror, in 1097, will add considerably to the poetry of the occasion.

CROWNING THE EDWARDS.

The postponed coronation of King Edward VII., with its rich promise of civil pomp, regal pageantry, and royal splendor recalls with considerable impressiveness the interesting epoch of English history when centuries ago the last one of the luckless Edwards to precede the present King was escorted through the streets of London, a pale, sickly youth in his tenth year, to receive the crown which made him ruler in name of the English domains.

The crowning of Edward VI. was marked by no such ceremony as will mark the official assent the the throne of the present King of England. His father, King Henry VII., died rather unexpectedly on January 28, 1547, and a month later the frail youth upon whom the royal mantle fell was conducted to the Tower of London, and there proclaimed King.

Edward VI. had no royal pageantry marching before him or trailing at his sides and heels when he proceeded through London on the brief journey at the end of which he was to be declared a ruler. Mounted upon a magnificent white horse, with soldiers, armored and bristling with the accoutrements all about him, the youth proceeded to the tower and was anointed and then King Henry's will was read. Under it sixteen executors were named to exercise the power of the crown during Edward's minority. To assist these executors in cases of doubt a second council of twelve persons was also nominated, so that while Edward became King in name, he was in reality divested of every bit of authority which went with the office. During his brief reign, which lasted but six and a half years, he exercised practically no control over public affairs, and he was prevented from showing what sort of dominion he might have exercised had the reigns of government been placed entirely in his hands by death which came to him before he had completed his sixteenth year.

At the time of Henry's death England was at peace, but within a month after the accession of Edward a state of active hostility with Scotland was approaching because of the attempt of the Duke of Somerset to secure the union of England and Scotland by bringing about the marriage of Edward and Mary, the Scottish child queen. In less than a fortnight after Edward's coronation an open breach occurred and England and Scotland were at war. A reign thus begun could scarcely have but one termination, and throughout the six years Edward occupied the throne England was torn by interior religious and civil strife, which was only surpassed by the turmoil going on on the outside.

Edward died July 4 1553, and there were some suspicions that his death had been hastened by Northumberland.

For the most part the Edwards have gone down into the English history as a luckless, unfortunate line of rulers. Beginning with Edward I., who was crowned king on August 2, 1274, their individual reigns have furnished continuous epochs of war, strife and tragedy. The first Edward was stabbed in three places with a poisoned arrow by an infuriated Turk, in 1272, before he acceded to the throne, yet he survived to carry on one of the most active periods of warfare in English history. He was a great general and statesman, yet his reign was far from being successful.

Edward III. was crowned on February 1, 1327, after his father had been dethroned, and his reign had a sad and gloomy close. He lived to see his empire in France virtually overthrown and the vast expenditures incurred in carrying on this warfare burdened his subjects and produced general discontent. By 1376 his mental faculties were in a state of decay and parliament virtually robbed him of the helm of state. He died in 1377.

Edward VI. was the second son of Richard, Duke of Norfolk, and after a siege of fighting was proclaimed King on March 4, 1461. His was the most successful reign on the line, and, although his name is tarnished by several acts of cruelty, he did without having done anything particularly worthy of note or calling for criticism of extraordinary severity.

The tragic death of Edward V. is a well known historical fact. He fell a victim to the scheming Richard, Duke of Gloucester, and with his brother were murdered in the Tower. The two youths were smothered under pillows while they were asleep.

Big Buildings.

St. Peter's is the biggest building in the world. St. Paul's could be placed inside the great cathedral at Rome without blocking up the way through. St. Peter's stands on an area of two hundred and forty thousand square feet, with a front four hundred feet broad and a length inside of six hundred feet. The cost of building the cathedral was three and a half millions sterling—exactly the same sum as was spent on the British Houses of Parliament, and five times as much as the cost of St. Paul's. The Vatican, which can hardly be called a single building, has eleven thousand apartments, approached by two hundred staircases; and there is a mystery in Madrid which has twelve thousand windows and doors. But they can hardly be called single buildings, and, bearing this distinction in mind, the biggest building in the world is the Church of the Pope at Rome.

The builders of the Old World were more ambitious than our own. No such theater has ever been built in the modern world as the Coliseum, with its diameter of six hundred and fifteen feet, its height of one hundred and sixty-four feet, and its seats for a hundred thousand people. No wall has ever been built to equal the great wall of China, which runs thirty feet high and twenty-four feet thick for twelve hundred miles; and the Pyramids remain the wonder of the world in the twentieth century as in the first. Ancient Egypt had twelve palaces each with three thousand rooms; and the walls of Nineveh ran for a hundred miles a hundred feet high and wide enough for three chariots to drive abreast along the top.

"Young Never-Grow-Old."

The war has not as yet developed much pathetic poetry. It is not till the clatter and blare of the march is past that the cry of the mourner reaches the ear. Perhaps among the first-fruits of the harvest of poetic sorrow may be counted a short poem in "Longman's" by Mrs. Fleming. It is simply entitled "Spion Kop." Two stanzas may be cited out of five, all of which will go home to many a mother's desolate heart:

Young Never-Grow-Old, with your heart of gold,
And the dear boy's face upon you;
It's hard to tell, though we know it well,
That the grass is growing upon you.
Flowers and grass, and the graveyard mould,
Over the eyes of you, Never-Grow-Old,
Over the heart of you, over each part of you,
All your dear body, our Never-Grow-Old. . . .

Never-Grow-Old, your curly head
Will never streak with gray;
Young Always-Young, your springing tread
Will never pass away,
The morning glory of your eyes
Will light you now and ever;
You keep your boyhood in the skies,
The other side the River:
River that flows by the City of Gold,
River of Healing, dear Never-Grow-Old.

The story is told of the present Archbishop of Canterbury that, upon a candidate for ordination essaying to read a chapter of the Bible before him to test his elocutionary powers, he was stopped with the abrupt comment, "Ye're inaudible!" "But, my lord," said the discomfited youth, "I've read the lesson in a big church, and been told that every word could be heard." "Who told ye—a lady? Are ye engaged to her?" The candidate owned the soft impeachment. "Then, don't believe a word she says—until ye're married to her," was the ungallant reply.

"A farmer ought to read a great deal, just the same as any other business man."

"Yes," answered Farmer Corntossel. "It keeps me so busy posting up on railroad rates and the tariff that I'm sometimes afraid I won't have time to raise the stuff to send to market.—Washington Star.

A Shower of Ice

Fenelon Falls Gazette—About 2.30 p.m. on Monday a shower of ice fell between Rettie's staton and Baddow, in the township of Somerville, and lasted for about five minutes. It was not ordinary hail, but pieces of ice of various shapes and sizes, some of the "chunks" being heavy enough to break down garden vegetables and to give horses such stinging blows that they galloped around the fields as if they had been struck with whips. Even hail in July is very unusual, but showers of genuine ice are of as rare occurrence as four-and-a-half ounce eggs.

An Opportunity

Mr. E. Phelan has instructed Mr. Hagart, auctioneer, to sell by public auction on the premises, corner of Park and Gilmour streets, on Thursday, 17th of July next, that desirable residence formerly occupied by Mr. T. F. Matthews. The lot is 90 x 45 (two fronts) and the house is a solid brick structure, complete with all modern improvements, and recently repaired and papered throughout. Terms easy. For particulars see either Mr. Phelan or Mr. Hagart.

A Girl of the People

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

Author of "The Barn Stormers," "Fortune's Sport," "Miss Nobody," "Her Royal Highness," "Lady Mary of the Dark House," etc.

I knew no more now than I had known before, since the name of John Bourke suggested nothing. All my thoughts were concentrated, however, not on what I heard, but what I had seen. He guessed this, and his eyes questioned mine in a puzzled way.

"Why did you cry out and suddenly ask for my name?" he demanded. "Don't tell me if you would rather not," he hastily added. "But——"

"I would rather tell!" I spoke on the impulse of curiosity, keen as the stab of a knife. "I cried out because—I saw something strange on your arm. A heart-shaped scar."

CHAPTER XIII.

John Bourke and a Lady.

John Bourke's face changed under my eyes. A slow flush rose to his forehead, and he slightly compressed his lips with an expression which was like the involuntary wince of a stormy, yet sensitive nature beneath an unexpected blow.

"Do you think that so strange?" he said. "I have got used to it. I have had it for a long time. But at present there's something much more important to think about than the scar on my arm; which is, for Mrs. Jennett to get you into dry clothes. It is late, and you are very, very tired. I shall leave you for to-night, and to-morrow morning, perhaps, you will let me call and see how you are."

I felt abashed, as if I had been guilty of an unwarrantable impertinence. He had spoken courteously and kindly, but it was plain that the subject of the heart-shaped scar was forbidden. I was more curious than ever; it even seemed to me that I had a right to my curiosity, if he knew all. But I instantly determined that I would not again ask questions.

"Good-bye; and thank you for all you have done," I said, meekly.

At the door he turned. "Promise me one thing before I go. That you will not leave this house until you have seen me again."

"I do promise that," I responded, after an instant's hesitation.

"And I trust you—entirely." Then he was gone.

Mrs. Jennett ministered to all my physical comforts. I was given a delicious hot bath, that drew the aching out of my tired body; I was put into a lavender-scented, old-fashioned nightgown of coarse linen, and at last I was tucked up in bed.

"Could you eat anything before you go to sleep, my dear?" enquired the little woman. "A wing of cold chicken, now, and a glass of wine?"

The suggestion was irresistible. I tried to say: "Yes, if you please," without a tell-tale, greedy eagerness. But I had had nothing to eat all day save the one thick slice of stale bread on which I had gloomily made my breakfast.

She bustled promptly away, and I was left alone to think, my thoughts roving back over the day which had been so crowded with events that its beginning appeared to have been years ago. After Waterloo Bridge, this waking was like a resurrection, and it seemed the more strange that almost the first thing I saw in the new world should be—the heart-shaped scar.

Though I had been permitted to look at it but for a second's time, I could see it still as if printed in colors in the air. In size it was slightly smaller than the mark I had such good cause to remember on Lady Cope's arm, or that other which had belonged to the old mystery and created a new one as well. It was of a less deep pansy-purple than its prototype, but otherwise it appeared to be the same. As I pondered, marveling at the strangeness of the coincidence (which must be far more than a mere coincidence), Mrs. Jennett came back. And when I had eaten the chicken and sipped the port, my brain grew blurred with sleep. I remember nothing more, until I awoke in the morning.

At first I thought that I was quite well again, but I soon found out my mistake. I had taken a feverish cold, and though I tried to get up, I was ordered back to bed by Mrs. Jennett. My head ached so dully and my brain felt so weary that I had not the energy to oppose her, or even the desire to ask questions. A doctor was called in, and afterwards sent medicine, which I reluctantly swallowed. For three days and nights I lay in bed, and sometimes I think I must have been slightly delirious, for I heard myself saying words over which my mind had no control, and I saw Mrs. Jennett's face as through a mist, regarding me oddly. But at last the burning heat in my veins and the throbbing in my temples died away. I felt strangely peaceful, though very weak, and Mrs. Jennett said that, if I liked, I might be dressed in a wrapper and lie on the deck-chair in Mr. Bourke's study.

"Mr. Bourke's study!" I echoed. "Why—does he live in this house?"

"Oh, deary me, didn't you know?" exclaimed the little woman. "Then I suppose I've put my foot into it again."

"He said he would take me to his relatives, when I told him that I had no one to go to," I explained, wondering how much of my story—as John Bourke knew it—Mrs. Jennett had heard. "Are you a relative of his?"

"N—ot exactly," she faltered. "I think he's nearly as badly off for people of his own as you seem to be. But I'm just as fond, and proud of him, too, as if I were his mother. And she'd be a lucky woman if she was alive to-day!"

"So he brought me to his house!" I reflected, aloud.

"Oh, now, don't you be thinking, my child, that he's done anything imprudent from your way of looking at it, or anything you might ever have to regret. He's too wise for that, and too good. The house is my house, and he's my lodger, you might say, if that doesn't sound disrespectful or impertinent after all he's done for me."

"Is he in his study?" I asked, rather abashed.

"That he isn't. He's not been inside the house, except to call and ask after you (which he's done twice every day) since the evening you came. He went that night to an hotel, and there he is at this moment."

"I've driven him out of his home, then!" I cried.

"He wouldn't like to hear you say that. And it isn't the way he feels about it, my dear. Why, if you'll excuse the expression, since you've been getting better, he's as happy as a child with a new toy. But there! I'm just hindering you. You'd be better off downstairs. It will amuse you, looking at some of his books. Besides, there's something waiting for you in the study that you're sure to like."

My curiosity thus stimulated, I hastened the process of bathing and dressing, Mrs. Jennett acting as maid, brushing and braiding my hair in a great wavy plait down my back. As she flatteringly exclaimed over its length and thickness, I watched her moving hand that wielded the brush. It was a very pretty brush, with a silver back, and there was a comb to match, which surprised me a little, for all Mrs. Jennett's other belongings, so far as I had seen, were as plain as they were neat.

"Now, don't think me an extravagant old body!" she ejaculated, seeing the direction of my eyes. "These things aren't mine. Mr. Bourke bought them the morning after you came, and told me I was to use 'em for you. The big cut-glass scent-bottle on the table there, too, with the eau de Cologne I put on your forehead when you were so bad; that was his thought. And see here. Your own underthings are ready for you again, but, man as he is, he said to me: 'She has nothing loose and comfortable to wear when she's getting better. I'll send something in.' I could have offered you a wrapper, but it would hardly have been fit for a beautiful young thing like you. Which was what he had in his mind, I expect, though he wouldn't risk hurting my feelings by saying so. Now, what do you think of this?"

Mrs. Jennett opened a drawer, whisked something out, threw off a loose layer of tissue-paper, and with pathetic delight held up a garment of white, soft satin and lace.

"Bought at Liberty's," she exclaimed, almost in awe. "The name was on the box. What do you think of it?"

"That—that Mr. Bourke ought not to have done this," I stammered, on the verge of tears.

Mrs. Jennett's quaint, rosy apple face straightened into lines of distress.

"Oh dear!" she ejaculated. "Perhaps I oughtn't to have told you. He didn't say not, that I can remember, but I daresay he took it for granted I'd have sense enough to keep it to myself."

She, too, was almost crying. My first impulse had been to refuse to wear the elaborate tea-gown which I owed to a stranger's charity, but her grief disarmed me. I knew that any slight put upon her idol (it was easy to see that John Bourke was that) would hurt her far more than the cruellest insult to herself. So, much against my will, I let her help me into the garment, reminding myself that at worst it was only borrowed, and determining to fight out my grievance with the man for myself.

In my palmiest days I had possessed nothing more beautiful, and I experienced a very curious sensation in wondering if he had used his own taste in the selection, troubling himself so much for me.

On the deck-chair in the study, where I had awoke to a new world the other night, were three or four ruffled silk cushions of pretty pale tints, which I was sure had not been there before. But this time Mrs. Jennett was the soul of discretion, if there were a secret which she might have betrayed. She merely pointed to a great bunch of white lilac in a vase on the table, saying:

"Those are for you, my dear. From—from Mr. Bourke and me."

Then, before I could answer, she had begun bustling about the room, drawing down the blinds so that the light did not come into my eyes as I reclined on the big chair, and asking me what books I would like to have from the shelves.

There certainly seemed a magnificent collection to choose from. Everything worth reading which I had ever heard of, and many, many learned-sounding books which I never had heard of, lined the walls.

I had no wish to read. I was reckless, though not as unhappy as I ought to have been after breaking with my past so ruthlessly at Waterloo Bridge; and my strongest desire was for Mrs. Jennett's companionship.

I wanted her to talk to me; and deep down under the surface of my thoughts I knew exactly on what subject I desired her to talk, though by no means did I confess this openly to myself.

I begged her to bring her sewing, or some sort of work, and sit with me, which she cheerfully consented to do, after giving a few instructions to her maid-of-all-work, whom I had not yet seen.

At first I vaguely intended to angle for information, without letting her understand what I was about; but it occurred to me that this would be a dishonorable mode of procedure, and I blushed at myself for having entertained it. Because, no matter what mistakes Mr. John Bourke had made in his tactics, he had behaved generously and—I believed—meant chivalrously by me.

"Do you think Mr. Bourke would mind my asking you a few questions about him?" I hesitatingly began. "You know, perhaps, how it was that—he brought me to you?"

"I only know that he saw a lady almost fainting, and that she was too ill to tell him anything much about herself, so he thought she would be better off with me than at a hospital," said

The White Star Line.

It is not perhaps generally known that the White Star Company, whose accession to the Morgan pool created so deep an impression in England, run New Zealand and Australian lines of steamers. For many years the Australian trade was carried on by the company's fleet of sailing vessels. These were sold, and replaced by a line of five steamships running between Liverpool and Australian ports, via the Cape, viz., the Afric, Medic, Persic, Runic and Suevic. The New Zealand service dates from 1883. Three vessels are employed, and each of them makes the voyage round the world twice or thrice a year. The steamers in this service are the Gothic, Delphic and Ionic. They are specially fitted for dealing with the frozen mutton trade. The White Star also owns a Pacific line worked by the Occidental and Oriental Steamship Company of San Francisco. The Gaelic, Coptic and Doric are the White Star ships in this branch. They run between San Francisco, Yokohama and Hong Kong. The remaining vessels of the White Star Line are exclusively employed on the Atlantic. The service is double—a fast passenger and mail service and also one for cargo and cattle. Below is given a complete list of the steamships hitherto owned by the White Star Line, all of which have been built by Messrs. Harland & Wolff.—

Improve the Brood Mares.

We think the great reason why so many ordinary horses are bred on the farms comes from relying wholly upon the stallion and paying little attention to the character and breeding of the mares. In horses uniformity is worth money in any market, especially in those of good class, whether they are heavy draughts or carriage teams, and you cannot get uniformity in the produce except through kindred blood. You cannot breed a mare or Percheron and trotting blood and other with coach, Clydesdale and trotting blood, to the same stallion, and get a pair of matched colts. Nature will not belie herself, and she has declared so often and emphatically that "like produces like," and what you sow so shall you reap, that it is useless to attempt longer to do the impossible.

So, the first thing a farmer should do when he starts raising horses is to get brood mares of the class he wants, and with more or less of the blood of the breed he proposes breeding them to—the more the better. This will be found equally advisable whether he proposes raising draughts, carriage horses or roadsters. And such mares should not be matched haphazard, but after careful examination of the stallion and his breeding, and of some of the colts if possible. But do not condemn a stallion because he gets some poor colts until you examine their dams. As a rule, you will find most of the trouble is with the mares, not the horse, although, of course, there are worthless stallions of all breeds.—Michigan Farmer.

Summoned His Father.

An immaculate-looking boy about twelve years of age, clad in a good Eton suit and snow-white collar, once appeared in the witness-box of a London Police Court, according to a recently published volume of reminiscences.

"Please, sir, I want a summons."

"Against whom?"

"My father, sir."

"What has your father done to you?"

"Please, sir, he has assaulted me."

"That was very wrong of your father. Why did he do so?"

"Please, sir, he said that I had been rude to my sister."

"Did he, though? Yes, you can take a summons."

"Please, sir, how much will it be?"

"Two shillings, my little man."

"Please, sir, I am under twelve. Can't I have it half price?"

"Oh, no, my boy; we have no half prices here."

"But I have only one shilling, sir."

"Then you must go and get another before your summons can be issued."

They thought they had done with him, but no; in a short time the boy came back with another shilling, and the summons was issued. One day therefore father and son appeared in court. The father, a portly, well-dressed man, was boiling with rage, and could scarcely restrain himself while the boy gave evidence and told how his father had beaten him.

"Has your father ever assaulted you before?" the Magistrate asked. "No, sir, this is the first time." "I am sorry for that," said the Magistrate, "because I am going to dismiss the summons—on one condition only, and that is, that your father takes you home and gives you a double dose of what he gave you last time." And, turning to the father, "and mind you do it, sir."

"I will cheerfully carry out your Worship's instructions," the father said.

"Having formally organized," said the President of the new woman's club, "we must now discuss the aim of our society."

"Better call it 'object,' if it's a good one," said the rude man who really had no business there. "A woman's 'aim' is notoriously bad."—Philadelphia Press.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by the Times.

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is 'phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed. Times.]

—The officers of the 57th Regiment are to meet this evening at their headquarters.

—The City of Peterborough carreid the Sunday School of the Baptist church to Jubilee Point yesterday.

—The new elevator for the Cereal Company will be completed in about a month. About 150 men are employed.

—The Presbyterian and Church of England Sunday Schools of Millbrook will run a union excursion to Gore's Landing on Tuesday of next week.

—A special meeting of the Ashburnham School Board will be held on Friday evening, July 18th, to discuss Manual Training and Domestic Science.

—Handsome boxes containing 25 sheets of paper and envelopes to match, good quality, and in all the latest shades for only 20 cents at the Times Bookstore.

—On Sunday last a girl named Harriet Kimball took a dose of Paris green, and nearly died from the effects of it. She resides at the corner of Cambridge and Walnut streets.

—The confectionery and bakery business of Lane & Co., George street, will be sold by public auction on Wednesday next at 10 o'clock a.m.

—The following members of the local Masonic Lodges have gone to Windsor to attend the Grand Lodge, which is in session in that city—Messrs. W. H. Walkey, Geo. I. Rossel, R. J. Munro, W. Stocker, R. E. Wood, F. D. McKay, Dr. Greer, Rev. W. L. Armitage and Dr. Shaw, Keene.

—The Monetary Times says:—Mary E. Lane, Baker and confectioner, Peterboro, trading under the style of Lane & Co., has been in that business over five years, and originally invested $1,500 cash in the same. This her kind father presented her. Evidently she has not benefitted as much as she might by the gift for she was obliged two months ago to mortgage her stock for $1,200. An assignment has since been made.

—It is not often that a book so commends itself to the thought of the reader that he will, at his own expense, place a thousand or more copies where those who need its teachings will come in contact with it. Such, however, is the case in the instance of "What a Young Man Oought to Know" one of the Purity Books in the Self and Sex series by Sylvanus Stall, D.D., issued by the Vir Publishing Company of Philadelphia. Mr. J. J. H. Gregory, of Marblehead, formerly a member of the Massachusetts Senate, has placed a copy of this book in every Young Men's Christian Association library where it was not already out he shelves. Where they had a Junior Association, and were without a copy of "What a Young Boy Ought to Know," he also donated a copy of that book from the same valuable series.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Struck by Lightning

During the thunderstorm on Tuesday of last week the residence of Mr. Joseph Byers, South Monoghan, was struck by lightning. The bolt did little damage. A man named William Martin, a peddlar, who was entering the house, received a severe shock but was not permanently injured.

Logs Broke Loose

During the high wind on Wednesday a boom belonging to the Dickson Company broke and let about 2000 logs loose. They passed over Dickson's dam, and down into the Little Lake where they became mixed with Mr Alf. Macdonald's logs. The loss will be considerable.

Died at the Hospital

There passed away yesterday morning at Nicholls Hospital a respected resident of Peterborough, in the person of Mr. Edward Harris. The deceased was 64 years of age and was a son of the late James Harris, coal merchant, Bicester, Oxfordshire Eng. Twenty-two years ago he married the eldest daughter of Mr. George Harris, Cambridge, Eng. He carried on a successful butcher business in Clapham, London., for some time, but coming to this country 18 years ago, and settling in Peterborough, he met with reverses, four of his children dying here. His remaining children are Gilbert, Beatrice, Wallace and Lillian. Mrs. Harris also survives him. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon, from the family residence, 73 Albert street to Little Lake Cemetery.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING

T. Hickson, of Ennismore, Instantly Killed on Monday

During Monday's terrific thunder storm a bolt of lightning struck and killed T. Hickson, of Ennismore, who had taken refuge under a tree while working on the double tracking of the Grand Trunk railway at Port Hope. The deceased had gone to Port Hope on July 1st with his team, and was only 26 years of age. Mr Crough a chum of the deceased, also from Ennismore, who was with the deceased at the time, also received a severe shock. The bolt tore down the apple tree. Mr. Crough, though severely shocked himself, ran to his friend and found him senseless but with the heart still beating, which it continued to do until five o'clock when death ensued.

Strange to say there were no marks on the body, save that the hair on the chest was singed. The electricity followed the watch chain to the pocket and drilled a tiny hole in the rim of the face which holds the crystal. The watch, however, was not injured apparently, as it continued running.

The remains were sent to Peterborough where they arrived yesterday morning, and were conveyed to the home of the deceased's parents in Ennismore.

The funeral will take place today. The Times extends its sincere sympathy to the stricken relatives.

A SAFE MINING PROPOSITION

The Gregory-Buell Consolidated Gold Mining and Milling Company—Rare Chances for Canadian Investors

Elsewhere will be found the advertisement of the above company, which speaks for itself. The proposition is one that appeals to the good, sound, common sense of investors. The property owned by the company is one that is sure to develop big things in the near future, and investors will make no mistake in placing their order for shares at once.

The past production of the various properties composing the Gregory-Buell group, the property of the Gregory-Buell Consolidated Gold Mining and Milling Company, is conservatively estimated at two million dollars ($2,000,000), the production from the Buell Shaft alone being known to have been at least one million dollars ($1,000,000) taken from above a depth of 500 feet from the surface and lateral drifts of about 200 feet east and west of the shaft. At least another one million dollars ($1,000,000) has been taken out of the other properties of the group above 300 foot level.

From an adjoining tract of ground, about ten (10) acres in extent, but worked deeper, on the same hill, comprising the Gregory-Bobtail Fisk group, the books of the First National Bank, and the Rock Mountain National Bank, of Central City, and other similar reliable documentary evidence, show that sixteen million dollars ($16,000,000) worth of mineral has been mined.

The property of the Gregory-Buell Consolidated Gold Mining and Milling Company consists of: (1) The Kip Lode, United States Patent No. 72; (2) The Buell-Leavitt Mill Site No. 75; (3) The Eleth Lode, U. S. Patent No. 37; (4) The Elliott Lode, U. S. Patent No. 77; (5) The Union Lode, U. S. Patent No. 878; (6) The Vulcan Lode, U. S. Patent No. 590; (7) The Gregory Second, U. S. Patent 607; (8) The Gregory Second Lode, U. S. Patent No. 679; (9) The Vasa Lode, U. S. Patent No. 203; (10) The Cube Lode, covered by Town Site Patent, but mineral rights owned by Gregory-Buell Consolidated Gold Mining and Milling Company, and all the town lots, except one piece of ground 25 feet by 100 feet on the south side of the Buell shaft, on which piece of ground the surface rights are excepted, but the mineral rights have been conveyed to the company.

This property is situated at the foot of the historic Gregory Gulch on the base of Gregory Hill and on the main thoroughfare connecting the two towns of Central City and Black Hawk, which are only a mile apart. Black Hawk Station is one-half mile away and thirty-six miles from Denver.

The property of this company has already produced $2,000,000, within 500 feet from the surface there is now practically in sight another $1,000,000 worth of mineral ready to be taken out; while below the 500 feet the veins and values continue downward indefinitely, for, in all probability, at least an additional 1,500 feet.

As before stated, with an average output of 200 tons per day, a profit of $1,000,000 per annum can be looked for, showing 20 per cent per annum on par value of the $5,000,000 capital of the company. The extent and character of the ore bodies known and believed to exist indicate that the property can be operated on this basis for an indefinite number of years to come.

Last, but not least, the management of the company consists of well known, experienced, competent and honorable men.

Of the total 5,000,000 shares of the company, 1,000,000 shares have been placed in the Treasury as a reserve sinking fund, and the unsold portion of 1,000,000 shares are offered for a limited time at 75 cents pershare. Par value $1.00 each, full paid, non-assessable.

The company reserves the right to advance the price at any time.

From every point of view, and taking all things into consideration, this is one of the most attractive, yet conservative, opportunities ever presented from Colorado, with ever probability, if not certainty, that purchasers of stock at the present price will realize handsome returns on the investment, both in the shape of dividends and enhanced value of the stock.

Further particulars may be had from Messrs. Etting and Peterson, fiscal agents, 500 Land Title Building, Philadelphia, P.A.

THE NEW SKATING RINK

Meeting of Those Interested Held in the Council Chamber Last Night

The meeting of the stockholders of the proposed Peterborough Skating Rink Company, held last night in the Council chamber was not largely attended. Different sites for the proposed building were discussed and a lot on Brock street, owned by the Bradburn estate, on which they have an option of 30 days, met with the approval of those present.

It was moved by Mr. J. S. Knapman, and seconded by Mr. Metheral that Mayor Denne and Messrs F. Matthews, A. H. Stratton, G. W. Hatton, R. H. Kells, Dr. Wightman and J. Hamilton be a committee appointed to take necessary steps to procure a charter for the company, and report at the next meeting of the stockholders.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Hamilton and Rutherford, that the Bradburn estate be asked for an extension of the option on the lot on Brock street —Carried.

The meeting adjourned.

FRED RICE TO DIE TO-MORROW MORNING

The Horrible Crime For Which He Is to Pay the Death Penalty

PROMISING YOUNG LIFE WAS DESTROYED

A University Student, He Becomes a Member of a Set of Crooks and Murderers

Special to The Times.

Toronto, July 16.—The Cabinet having declined to interfere, Fred Lee Rice, one of the most desperate criminals with which the Canadian authorities have had to deal in many years, will pay the penalty of his misdeeds on the gallows to-morrow. The condemned criminal is an Illinois man, a former resident of Champaign and a student of the University of Illinois.

The crime for which he is to be executed was the outgrowth of a less heinous offense, the robbery of a bank, for which Rice and three confederates had received sentences of 21 years' imprisonment. Rice and his companions formed a gang of the most notorious and daring porch-climbers on the continent. Their field of operations was co-extensive with the continent. Wherever there was opportunity for plunder they went. They did not confine their operations to porch-climbing. Highway robbery, burglary and forgery were among their accomplishments, and for many years they baffled the efforts of the police to effect their capture. Originally the gang was composed of Rice, Frank Rutledge, a Canadian, and Frank Stewart. All were desperate characters, shrewd in their methods, skilled in the arts of the confidence man and utterly without fear. They made their headquarters in Chicago, but conducted their operations principally in other cities, returning to Chicago to dispose of and divide their plunder at stated intervals.

Rice was reared on a farm in the vicinity of Champaign and when he entered the college of literature and arts of the University of Illinois in 1888 he was a quiet, retired, country boy, whose refined manners and handsome face made him popular among the co-eds. Like many country boys, freedom from parental restraint, which he enjoyed at the university for the first time, had a serious effect on his morals, and in his second year he was known as one of the wildest men in the university. His evident large-heartedness and kindly disposition made him friends among both faculty and students, and it was a long time before formal notice was taken of his actions by the board of administration. Finally, however, it was found necessary to expell him.

Soon after he left the university he became associated with the gang of which he is now the only survivor. He was the cleverest of the lot and in most cases leader in criminal exploits. He was called the forger, the scholar, the "poet" of the nefarious aggregation. He looked like a clergyman and had a gift of eloquence that astonished many a pleader. It was characteristic of him that he was the only one of the gang that ever attempted diplomacy. Cornered, he never offered to kill, but, preferring soft words, secured for himself the best of treatment in an extremity.

Frank Stewart, well known as a Chicago thief, was the first of the gang to die. He was killed in an attempt to escape after a Chicago hold-up. Jones was the next to pay the price. Rutledge committed suicide by dashing himself from the gallery of the Toronto jail to the stone-paved court thirty feet below. The crime for which the gang were arrested and convicted was the robbery of a bank at Aurora, Ont., from which they secured about $50,000. On information received from Toronto police the entire gang were arrested in Chicago. Extradition proceedings were stubbornly fought in the courts, but the culprits eventually were brought back to Canada, where, after trial, they were sentenced to 21 years' imprisonment. After their preliminary hearing they were committed for trial. While being taken back to jail in a carriage in charge of Constables Stewart and Boyd a well dressed man sprang from the sidewalk near the jail and ran alongside the carriage. He gained the open window and tossed in a soft felt hat. This fell in the lap of Rutledge. Jones grabbed it and shook out three loaded revolvers. He grabbed one and Rice and Rutledge took the other two. All three were handcuffed together, but this did not prevent quick action on their part. Jones shot Constable Boyd dead. Constable Stewart was fired on a dozen times, but not hit. The prisoners got out of the carriage, gained the street and jumped aboard a passing trolley car. Jones thrust his revolver at the head of the motorman and ordered him to send the car ahead fast. The motorman refused, shut off the current, detached his controller and beat Jones on the head with it. Constable Stewart by this time had gained the rear end of the car, and he shot Jones through the arm. Other officers arrived on the scene and the three men were recaptured. Jones was taken to a hospital and his arm amputated. He died from shock and loss of blood and without an expressed regret for his career. Rice and Rutledge were returned to jail, and shortly afterward, while exercising in the gallery, Rutledge took the leap over the railing which ended his life almost instantaneously. Rice was then tried for his part in the killing of Constable Boyd. His family and friends came to his rescue with funds for his defense, but despite all efforts on the part of his counsel he was found guilty after a short trial and given the extreme penalty. Every means known to the law has been exhausted in his behalf without avail and tomorrow morning at an hour not yet made public, he will mount the scaffold.

THE GREAT STRIKE IS NOW FOREMOST

The Big Convention Meets To-Day to Decide the Matter

"TO STRIKE OR NOT TO STRIKE"

That Will Be The Question It is Thought That Peace May Prevail—If a General Strike Be Ordered Business Will Become Paralyzed

Special to The Times.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 16.—"To strike or not to strike?" This is the vital question to settle which delegates are pouring into Indianapolis from almost every coal mining district of the country in readiness for the great convention which assembles tomorrow in response to the recent call of President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers of America. If the convention reaches an affirmative decision it will mean, so say the official of the miners' organization, that 450,000 men will lay down their picks, not to resume work until their brethren in the anthracite field of Pennsylvania have obtained their demands. A decision not to strike will mean at the very least the breaking of the back-bone of the miners' struggle in Pennsylvania and a serious blow to organized labor in general.

In the settlement of this "lady or the tiger" question there is a conservative element among the union miners that is strongly pronounced in favor of the convention taking a compromise course. It would be better say the leaders of this element, for the convention not to declare a strike outright, but to delegate to the executive board of the United Mine Workers' the power to call out the men on general strike at their discretion. This, it is pointed out, would give the advantage of a delay before the final card is played, while at the same time not detracting from the moral support given by the unions throughout the country to the Pennsylvania strikers. It is further argued in support of this course that it would help greatly the financial end of the struggle as it would enable the soft coal miners still at work to devote a large part of their earnings to the anthracite strikers and enable the latter to continue their strike indefinitely or until a successful issue was reached. Although President Mitchell has so far refrained from expressing an opinion on the subject of the convention and the proper course for it to pursue, it is said by those intimately associated with him that he would prefer to have the convention delegate to the executive board the power to call the strike, rather than have the issue brought to a climax at once.

Meanwhile the delegates are pouring into Indianapolis from all directions, and about the headquarters of the United Mine Workers they are to be seen in groups today discussing the situation the latest news from the Pennsylvania field and the probable outcome of the struggle. For the most part they are extremely reticent so far as public utterances are concerned, and it is a difficult matter to ascertain how they stand with regard to the main question. Enough can be gleaned, however, to warrant the forecast that the convention will not declare a strike by an overwhelming majority, and if a strike is called at all, it will be in the face of considerable opposition. Illinois Ohio, Indiana, and Iowa will hold the majority of the delegates. In three of these States at least satisfactory conditions prevail at present. The men are working under a yearly agreement and are enjoying concessions which it has taken years for them to gain. Such contracts, it may readily be believed, are not to be lightly broken. Michigan, Kansas, Kentucky, Missouri, Tennessee, and one or two other states will be represented in the convention. It is not known exactly how their delegates stand on the strike question, but it is unlikely that their numerical strength will be sufficient to influence the decision to any great extent. The States of Maryland, Colorado, Washington, Montana, Indian Territory, Arkansas, New Mexico and Texas, and one-half the soft coal district of Pennsylvania, are not organized, but there are small unions among them, and some have sent delegates to the convention.

When the convention assembles in Tomlinson hall at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning and the roll is called by Secretary Wilson, it will be answered by as fine a body of men as ever attended a labor gathering. Fifteen hundred in number, they represent the brains and sinew of the miners unions. While undoubtedly there are agitators among them, for the most part they appear to be a conservative lot of men. Whatever decision is reached it will be after intelligent discussion of the question from every view-point.

Opinions expressed by those already on the field indicate a general hope that whatever action is taken may be by a good solid majority as as to leave no doubt of the feeling of the miners throughout the country. It is feared that if a strike were declared by a slight majority it would create such friction that a split in the union would ensue, and it is the fear that President Mitchell has had ever since the anthracite miners said they wanted a national strike.

On the other hand, the advocates of a general strike are determined to leave no stone upturned in an effort to bring the convention to an affirmative decision and by a large majority. They argue that a defeat in Pennsylvania would be a crushing blow to unionism, and that in order to retain the present strength of the miners and soft-coal men, as a matter of self-preservation, must join in the strike and make the struggle of the Pennsylvania miners their own.

HORSE AND WAGON FELL 114 FT

Peculiar Accident at the Stone Quarries Near Niagara Falls

Niagara Falls, July 15.—A peculiar and altogether unprecedented accident happpened at the stone quarries at the Devil's Hole on Saturday. As a result of this accident John Bellinger had a narrow escape from serious injury and possibly death; he had a wagon demolished, and may lose a horse.

Bellinger, who is a contractor, went to the quarries, with a one-horse wagon for the purpose of getting some stone. In order to reach the quarries it is necessary to drive down the incline close to the edge of the bank. Bellinger turned around, and then began to load the wagon with stone. When he had finished he whipped up his horse and started up the hill.

The load, however, was too heavy for the horse, and before any measures to prevent it could be taken the wagon began to drag the horse back down the hill. Bellinger tried to save his rig, and when the horse finally was dragged over the edge of the precipice, he almost went with it. Rig and horse dropped to a ledge fully 114 feet below, and many feet above the Gorge road tracks.

When men clambered down they were astonished to find the horse grazing, with no worse injuries than a few bruises and cuts. The wagon was broken to pieces. Yesterday a large number visited the horse and took a look at the distance it fell. They claim it hit a tree about half way down, and thus broke the fall. The owner will most likely bring it up by means of a steam hoisting derrick.

HOT IN LONDON.

London, July 15—With the thermometer at 86 degrees in the shade and 127 in the sun today, the hottest of the year in London, many cases of sunstroke were treated at the hospitals, and the St. John ambulance men were kept busy treating prostrations. The omnibus and street car companies had large forces of men engaged in supplying the horses with oatmeal water.

POWDER EXPLOSION CAUSES LOSS OF LIFE

Twenty-Seven Dead Men Have Already Been Taken Out of Two Mines In Utah.

Special to The Times.

Park City, Utah, July 16.—Two powder magazines at the 1,200 foot level of the Daly-West Mine exploded about one o'clock this morning, causing a loss of life that at present cannot be estimated, nor even guessed at. At 4 o'clock 27 men had been taken out of the mine dead, and several others had been recovered in a half dazed condition. These were all brought out through the Ontario mine shaft. The 1,200 level of the Daly-West corresponds to and is connected by tunnel with the 600 level of the Ontario.

In the Daly-West mine between 100 and 150 men were at work. In the Ontario were nearly 100, it is believed.

It is not known by many of these are dead, but the disaster extends to the Ontario as the noxious gases that have been freed are known to be the cause of several deaths. The presence of these gases, leads many miners to believe that the powder was burned and the explosion was not the chief cause of the disaster.

There are two powder magazines at the 1,200 level of the Daly-West, one at each side of the shaft, with a capacity of from one to two cars of powder each. A car of powder had been added to the supply within the past few days.

Three dead men have been taken out of the Ontario shaft. It is believed all were suffocated.

The explosion was so tremendous that it is said that two horses in the ore tunnel, one and a half mile away, were killed by it.

Women and children are thronging to the Ontario shaft house, which is midway between Park City and the Daly-West. Nearly all of them have husbands or fathers in the mines, and their grief it pitaible.

Members of a relief party who went into the Ontario mine shortly after the explosion occurred have not yet returned and fears are entertained for their safety.

KING COMING TO AMERICA

Leopold, It Is Said, Will Visit Washington This Year

Washington, July 177.—Mr. and Mrs Thomas F. Walsh have been spending the past fortnight as the guests of King Leopold at his summer palace. The King has showered many marks of favor on the Colorado millionaire, and the magnificent new home which he has erected in this city will contain several souvenirs of this interesting visit.

Whether the business relations of Mr. Walsh and King Leopold have become closer is not known on this side. The Belgian King desires Mr. Walsh to invest some of his mines in building railroads and bridges in the Congo Free State, but heretofore the securities have not seemed adequate to justify the projects.

It is rumored among the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Walsh that the King has promised to be their guest some time within the year.

BOY DROWNED LITTLE CHILD

Tied Stone to His Leg and Threw Him Into Water

Special to The Times.

Paris, July 17—At St. Nazaire several children were playing, when one of them, Louis Mahe, eleven years old, struck Leon Jarno, six years old. The latter ran away, but the other boy pursued him, threw him down, and according to spectators, picked up a cord, tied it about his left leg, then fastened a heavy stone to the other end of the cord and threw the child into a pond nearby.

Even then the boy struggled to reach the shore, and would have succeeded had not the other pushed him back, until he drowned.

A boy who is said to have witnessed the act from a distance, ran to apprise the neighbors. The entire community is filled with horror. The Mahe boy had already been convicted of a theft.

PROBABLE WAR WITH RUSSIA AND JAPAN

Russia Must Evacuate Manchuria to Avoid Trouble--The Scene of Action

WANT GERMAN TAUGHT IN THE COLONIES.

Irish Nationalists Not Agreed on O'Brien—Objection to His Proposal That Members Should Cease Attending Parliament

Special to The Times.

Victoria, July 16.—Major-General Dorward, who arrived yesterday from Shanghai, says there will undoubtedly be war in the Far East unless Russia evacuates Manchuria according to the terms of the agreement which the Anglo-Japanese agreement forced that country to make with China. If Manchuria is not evacuated, and Japanese correspondents at Pekin say that there are no signs of withdrawal, although the time for retirement is approaching, it means war. Japan will fight, there is no doubt of that, if Russia does not go. Both nations are well aware of this, and Russia is rapidly strengthening her garrisons and points of vantage, while Japan is quietly preparing to strike a blow, if necessary. If Russia does not go from Manchuria, and it is war, the first thing this continent would hear of would be the blowing up and destruction of the big Russian railway, for even now there are at points of vantage Japanese engineers who are versed in explosives, ever ready for the signal that war has been declared.

SCENE OF ACTION.

The war if it came to war, would have its scene of action on both land and sea, beginning no doubt in a naval war in the Yellow sea and being concluded on land. Russia has now 80,000 men in the garrisons of Manchuria. Great Britain has her strongest garrison in North China at Shan-Hai-Kwan, the coast terminus of the railway to Pekin, there being but 250 men at the Chinese capital, says the British general. The force at Shan-Hai-Kwan will likely be augmented to five regiments, probably mostly Indian troops. The Germans have about 800 men, and the French and Japanese about 500 men each. It may be that eventually, since the Anglo-Japanese agreement regarding an eastern policy Britain and Japan will maintain garrisons in Both stations. Major-General Fukushima, who was in charge of the Japanese forces during the North China campaign, is now in London, it is said, making arrangements to this end.

London, July 16—"It is stated," says The Times, "that a section of the Irish Nationalist party views with disfavor the policy which William O'Brien, M.P., enforces himself attending Parliament. The earliest symptoms of restlessness were displayed at a recent meeting of the directorate of the United Irish League, when O'Brien's proposal that Irish members should give up attending the House of Commons in order to devote themselves solely to an agrarian campaign at home was easily defeated."

VICTOR EMMANUEL'S SCHEME.

London, July 16.—A correspondent in Paris says the latest invention of the Opposition is a report that one of the main reasons why King Victor Emmanuel desires to visit Loubet before returning to Italy is in order to force the head of the great Catholic power to visit the King in Rome without seeing the Pope. If Loubet returned His Majesty's visit he would obviously be compelled to remain the King's guest while in Rome. It is insisted that this would cause a rupture between France and the Vatican.

RAS MAKONNEN NOT INTERESTED.

London, July 16—A Paris despatch says the newspapers do not well conceal their chagrin at the imperturbability of Ras Makonnen regarding the wonders of Paris and the magnificent military display at Longchamps. Even fireworks failed to dazzle him. Ras Makonnen feels fatigued and finds the weather warm. He has decided to go to Switzerland, where M. Ilg, engineer, who is to show him the wonders of that country, hopes to elicit some sign of admiration for Mont Blanc. The correspondent calls this prophecy ingenious, but fantastic.

LANGUAGE IN GERMAN COLONIES.

London, July 16.—The German Emigrants Benevolent Society of Hanover has petitioned Count Von Bulow not to permit missionaries lacking competent knowledge of the German language to follow their calling in German colonial territory. The society demands that instruction in colonies be either in German of the native language.

BRITISH PROFESSOR

Says That American Universities Cannot Yet Equal Oxford

Special to The Times.

New York, July 14.—After a trip of inspection through a number of American universities, Professor R. D. Redmayne, of Birmingham, Eng., who is in this city, said:

"I could not fail to be struck with the fact that all your great institutions of learning are yet lacking in that indefinable something that contributes so much to making Oxford what it is. Apart removed a long way from the practical life of the world, or seemingly so apart, the community of Oxford scholars has given to the place priceless heritage. We all know how, in the couse of time, their influence has filtered out the world and affected mens thoughts and ideas, has become potent in shaping history. But when I saw the stamp of men you have in your universities and the stamp of young men they are turning out, I became convinced that your institutions too, will have in time this potent and precious atmosphere and will treasure names like those of Arnold and Newman and the rest. The secret for you is the secret of the Oxford lawns as told by Gardiner to the rich American. Still I am glad that the new scholarships will enable you to send us each year so many men to feel this atmosphere and carry back the word of it."

SEEKING TO SETTLE ALASKAN BOUNDARY

Two Men Making a Study of the Matter In St. Petersburg

The Matter Soon to Become a Live One to Canada and Uncle Sam

Washington, July 14.— Two young men from Philadelphia, Pa., Thomas and Edwin Balch, are now in St. Petersburgh engaged in a search which, if successful, will end the dispute between this country and great Britain over the Alaskan boundary and dispense with the modus vivendi of October 20, 1899, signed by Secretary of State John Hay and Reginald Tower.

Officials of the State Department, although asserting that the Balch brothers have no recognized status with this Government, admit that they are and have been from the first fully aware of their mission, and hope they will succeed. One official said:

"The Balch brothers are simply investigating the matter as one would investigate any scientific subject to gain more knowledge. One is a geographer, and the other an artist, but both have entered upon this labor con amore. We wish them every success, and, of course, should they make any valuable discovery the United States would probably profit by it, but really they have no official status."

It is admitted that the Balchs visited the State Department before starting on their mission, and had a consultation with the officials.

Since Vitus Bering, a Dane, naturalized in Russia, sailed through the straight to which he gave his name, in 1870, several surveys of the peninsula have been made. Naval Captains Krenitzin and Levasheff's surveyed the peninsula and chartered the coast in 1786, but the extent of their work is not now known unless their reports are still on file at the Russian capital, as the Balches hope. Further efforts in this line were made by Juan Perez, in 1774, and two years later James Cook visited Alaska.

George Vancouver was sent to Alaska by Great Britain in 1792 to resurvey the coast, and determine the liability of Spain for the seizure, of three small British vessels the previous year, and it is probable that the geographers will investigate the report of his findings before concluding their researches.

The first differences as to the exact land boundary between Alaska and the United States were settled by a convention signed in St. Petersburg in 1824. This was followed the next year by a convention between Russia and Great Britain, under which The Hudson Bay Company was excluded from the seacoast north of latitude 54 deg. 40 min., and from the then unknown territory north of the St. Elias Alps, divided by the 141st meridian west of Greenwich.

Another survey was made, which lasted for six years, from 1826 to 1832, and in 1835 Russia established an admirable meteorological and magnetic observatory in Sitka.

THE GAYNOR-GREENE CASE

Canada does not want the alleged criminals from the United States who are charged with embezzling $2,000,000 of government funds, which ought to have been spent on the harbor of Savannah, Ga. It would most willingly part with them. But Messrs. Gaynor and Greene, the persons in question must be lawfully extradited. They came first to Quebec, were thence kidnapped to Montreal, but are now sent back to Quebec under habeas corpus, where the legal proceedings for their extradition must go on.

The point of interest for Canada is that the American officer of the Department of Justice has made a report to his government that the law firms retained by the accused men is composed of high officials in Canada, who are using their political influence to thwart extradition proceedings. On this plea representations have been made to the British embassy at Washington. The law firms retained include the Minister of Justice of the Dominion, the Premier of Quebec, the son of the Deputy Attorney-General of the same province, and the son of Quebec's extradition commissioner.

It is too early to admit any form of supposition that the accusations of using undue influence upon the court of justice has any truth at the back of it. If it can be shown, then Canadians will make a special reckoning with the officials who thus abuse their public trust. But, first of all, the case of Messrs. Gaynor and Greene will have to rest upon its own merits.

BRITISH TRADE

That any person in the United Kingdom can look with equanimity upon the trade situation shows a great amount of blind British confidence. If the figures of trade returns showed the same results as any other country the situation would be treated seriously by all. In England numbers are now much concerned, and are more and more strongly urging a change in fiscal policy. The latest trade returns published are those for the month of June last. They show that the total British external trade was $11,165,500 less than June 1901 and $24,969,400 less than for June 1900. The imports exceeded the exports last month by $97,664,570. In 1901 the excess was less, being $96,333,070, and in 1900 it was still less, being $85,604,860. That is, not only has the total trade been declining for the past three years, but the exports have been declining faster than the imports. If we take ten year periods instead of monthly periods, the showing is almost equally satisfactory. Indeed, by no sets of figures can it be shown that British trade is holding its own.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Ontario Power Company, which has already the privilege of feeding a plant at Niagara Falls by diverting water from the Welland River, down the height of land into the Niagara River, has made application to the Government for an additional system of power, whereby water shall be diverted from the Niagara River by conduits to a power house below the Falls. A supplementary agreement prepared provides that the company shall pay a rental of $30,000 a year instead of $15,000, and a certain rate per electrical horse power per annum by the following scale: From 20,000 h. p. to 30,000 h. p., $1; from 30,000 h. p. to 40,000 h. p., 75 cents; over 40,000 h. p., 50 cents. This schedule, it is stated, by way of illustration, would produce a rental of $47,750 per year in case 40,000 h. p. were developed. The Canadian Niagara Power Company, which is constructing a plant to utilize the power of the Falls on practically the same territory, is opposing the application. In the meantime, the residents of the Niagara Peninsula are awaiting some actual developments.

ANSTRUTHER.

On Friday, June 27th, a number of Miss Lousley's pupils met at the residence of Mr. Z. Tucker and took advantage of the occasion to express their regard towards their teacher by presenting her with a very handsomely engraved napkin ring, accompanied by the following address, which was read by Miss Ethel Windsor:

Dear Teacher,—It is with pleasure that we, your pupils of S. S. No. 2, Anstruther, meet with you on this occasion, when there is peace and good will in all our British Empire, and wishing to show in some manner our respect and esteem for all your kindness and patience for and with us as we met day after day in our school, would ask you to accept this small token as an expression of our love to you, no for its intrinsic value, but that you may remember the love that prompted the gift, and in after years, when our paths are widely separated, may it bring to your remembrance the boys and girls of your school, and who wish you all happiness and prosperity in your future life.

Signed on behalf of the children present

MRS. ESAU TUCKER
MRS. Z. TUCKER
MRS. A. WINDSOR.

Miss Lousley was completely taken by surprise, but replied in a very feeling manner to the pupils, saying she would ever hold in remembrance the kindness and warm friendship she had from the first received both from parents and pupils during her term of 18 months as teacher, and would prize the gift showing as it did their kindness of heart and good will towards her. Thanking the boys and girls for the gift she hoped they would grow up to be good men and women.

The presentation was made by Miss Jessie Man.

Refreshments were then served, after which an enjoyable evening was spent in games, singing, etc. Miss Lousley will be missed by a large circle of friends who regret her going away.

APSLEY.

The glorious Twelfth was duly celebrated by L.O.L. No. 1872, and North Star No. 74, L.T.B., of Apsley. Both lodges turned out strong and after the usual business, formed in procession headed by their respective fife and drum bands and banners, marched up the principal streets and the n to the picnic grounds, where tables had been arranged for the dinner, which was under the management of Bro. T. J. Wilson, and Tommy knows how to get up a good dinner. There was an abundance of good things, and the waiters were kept busy attending to the wants of about 300. After dinner the people dispersed over the grounds and enjoyed themselves in various ways, swinging and music, and the tug of war between the Orangemen and True Blues resulted in a victory for the latter. Bro. McIlmoyle was in charge of the booth and did a rushing business. Visitors were impressed with the appearance of the True Blues, dressed alike with their caps and badges and their handsome banner, they were a credit to any community. Instead of a concert in the evening an impromtu dance was gotten up in the Hotel Brunswick, and the young people tripped the light fantastic until 11 p.m.

On Tuesday eve 8th inst., L.O.L. No. 1872, held an Arch meeting to advance six of the brethren to that degree. They were assisted by several brethren from Coe Hill lodge. Lunch was served at 1 a.m., and the work was finished at 4 a.m.

On Monday we had several severe electrical storms, and heavy rain and hail, the lightning doing considerable damage, but so far as heard no loss of life. The town hall was slightly damaged. A tree was shattered near the residence of Mr. Shewen, and the lightning played strange freaks at Mrs. Wilsons. It struck the ground at the corner of the kitchen coming up through the floor tearing several boards up and completely upturned a table near which Mrs. Wilson had been standing only a minute previous, she having just started with Mrs. Dean to enter the other room. Both received a severe shock and will not soon forget their experience.

THE GREGORY BUELL CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING and MILLING COMPANY

Whose Entire Plant is Now Under Roof. of CENTRAL CITY, COLORADO PRODUCTION OF 200 TONS PER DAY

185 Tons Milling Ore, $12.00, Net $10.00 .... $1,850
15 Tons Smelting Ore, average $80.00 (less transportation and smelting charges $10.00, $70.00 being low average.... Profit $1,050

$2,900 PER DAY, 350 DAYS

This is over 20 per cent. on the capital $5,000,000 at par, and at present selling price of 75 cents per share amounts to over 27 per cent. The above is one-third of the capacity. Full capacity—600 ore in 24 hours—would make these figures three times as great. Total amount to be raised fully guaranteed. This investment upon these terms is worthy the careful consideration of all those having sums to invest. WRITE FOR PROSPECTUS.

Stock Par Value $1.00 Now Selling at 75 Cents

We trust that you will appreciate the fact that THE GREGORY BUELL CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING and MILLING COMPANY is a going concern, the properties having produced $2,000,000 in the past under unfavorable circumstances. The present consolidation, by operating fourteen mines through one shaft, makes possible an enormous saving in operating expenses doing away with thirteen engineers, firemen, etc., a great reduction in fuel and many other points too numerous to mention.

With the vast additional ore bodies now being developed by tunnels and cross-cuts, when completed, assures the management that, on a calculation based on one-third of their capacity, they can earn 25 PER CENT. per annum upon the investment.

Bear in mind that the mill is built, a large part of the machinery is in place and that the Company is absolutely free from all debt. We consider this, after a most careful examination by us, a gilt-edge investment. We cannot recommend this too highly, and trust that you may appreciate the advantages as we do.

COPPER AT THREE AND HALF CENTS A POUND

George A. Treadwell Mining Company

27 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK. JEROME, ARIZONA.

Capital - - - - $3,000,000.

VALUE OF SHARES $10.

In a suit recently tried in the New York courts it was proved from the books of the United Verde Copper Company and the sworn testimony of the bookkeepers that the cost to that company of producing copper was only three and a half cents a pound, not counting the gold and silver values, which—allowed for—reduced the cost to a still lower figure.

Nowhere outside the Verde Copper Belt in Yavapai County, Arizona, is copper produced in quantities for less than twice this cost.

The United Verde has about two hundred acres on the north end of the Belt and the George A. Treadwell Company has several times as much in the central and southern parts of the Belt. The conditions along the whole Belt are entirely similar. We already have three mines developed—the Cliff, Brookshire and Iron Queen—one of which, the Cliff, seems to be larger and better than the United Verde, and the other two at least approach it in magnitude and value, while we have several others, including Badger, Pastime, Green Monster and Spoke and Stonewall, which, though less developed, are equally promising.

Professor Treadwell believes we have at least half a dozen United Verdes within the broad and extensive limits of our holdings.

As soon as our smelter plant which is now in process of erection, is completed, we can certainly produce copper as cheap as our rich neighbor on the north.

The United Verde for several years has produced one-tenth the copper of the world. When our plants are fully installed we expect the Verde Belt to produce one-half the copper of the world, and the George A. Treadwell Mining Company will be prepared to do more than its full share.

Before investing in copper in unproved localities, consider the stock of the George A Treadwell Mining Company, named after the great pioneer and explorer of the Verde Belt and owning the largest and best aggregation of properties on it.

The price of the stock is $11 a share. Make checks payable to The order of the company and send them to 27 William Street New York

The Insane Philosophy of Tolstoi.

Tolstoi's book on the sex question, in which he advocates absolute chastity, even at the cost of the gradual disappearance of the human race, continues to arouse spirited discussion. "La Revue Blanche" (Paris) recently asked the opinion of several prominent Europeans regarding Tolstoi's views. Some of the replies are appended. Madame Judith Gauthier, a retired opera singer who is now a literary woman, was the only one to endorse Tolstoi's position.

Max Nordau—"Count Leo Tolstoi preaches absolute chastity. I wonder if he can convince Madame Tolstoi and the fine family she has raised! At all events, we should congratulate ourselves that his parents did not share his opinion. Otherwise we should have had no 'War and Peace' or 'Anna Karenina.' . . . Speaking seriously, it seems to me that the ideas of Count Tolstoi on the marriage question are absolutely delirious, and delirium can be diagnosed, but not discussed. It is useless to defend woman against the absurd lucubrations of a sick brain."

Enrico Ferri of Rome—"The affirmations of Tolstoi on the sexual question only confirm Lombroso's theory of the degeneracy of genius. The fundamental needs of humanity are bread to preserve life and love to preserve the species. To preach absolute chastity is as absurd as preaching absolute fasting. Marriage, whatever Tolstoi may say, is the ideal state of human life."

Emile Zola—"The idea of Tolstoi is not new. Marriage is legalized by society, but it exists in nature without laws. Christ did not get married, because he was too busy to think about it. I confess that I do not understand Tolstoi. . . . It is insane."

Madame Judith Gauthier — "I will limit my consideration of the problem to the question of birth. It seems to me an act of truest wisdom to prevent the unhappiness of existence, and many wise men, including Christ, have indicated the path which we have failed to follow. To give life and then inflict death would constitute the greatest of crimes, did not nature, in her search for victims, strike with blindness and unconsciousness those whom she allures into her snares."

Albert Reville—"Pascal said, 'Man is neither angel nor beast, and the man who wants to be an angel plays the part of a beast.' If the hope of a future life is reasonable, and I believe it is, we may be able one day to rise above the organic conditions of this mysterious life. But as long as we live on earth, we are bound to admit the legitimacy of the acts and functions without which our own life and the life of humanity would be impossible. To state that marriage is unchristian, because Christ was not married, is absurd. It is like reasoning that we could not go to heaven because we travel by rail and wear trousers, whereas Christ did neither. Christ himself said that marriage was a holy and divine institution (Mark x. 2-9).

New and Aggressive.

Much knowledge of human nature is gathered up in the expression, "A new broom sweeps clean." The new bank, the Sovereign, which opened in Toronto last week in new premises, with a new staff, new officers, new issue of bills—everything new—is one of the financial brooms that is evidently going to make a clean sweep. The popularity of the new bank and of its management has been demonstrated daily since it opened its doors, by the large number of business men and people in all the walks of life who have transacted business over its counters. Centrally situated on the north side of King street, but a short distance from Yonge, and commodiously appointed to the smallest detail, the premises of the Sovereign Bank are amongst the most convenient and the most suitable for their purpose of any in Toronto. The financial status of the Bank is high; it starts on its career with an authorised capital of $2,000,000 and a subscribed capital of $1,300,000. The Board of Directors, upon which appear the names of Messrs. H. S. Holt, Montreal; Randolph Macdonald, Toronto; James Carruthers, Montreal; A. A. Allan, Toronto; Arch. Campbell, M.P., Toronto Junction; Hon. Peter McLaren, Perth; John Pugsley, Toronto; Hon. D. McMillan, Alexandria, Ont.; Henry R. Wilson, New York, is a list of gentlemen of recognized standing and proven capability as financiers. In Mr. D. M. Stewart, Canada has her youngest and undoubtedly one of her very ablest general bank managers. In addition to all the ordinary features of a banking business, the Sovereign will issue Travelers' Letters of Credit on J. S. Morgan & Co., London, and Morgan, Harjes Company, Paris. These credits are available in all parts of the world, and just the thing for persons contemplating a visit to Europe or to the coronation this summer.

All About Men.

One of the greatest advantages of the silent man is that he cannot be misquoted.

Men who ride hobbies would not be nearly so objectionable if they did not want all the road to themselves.

A man will often make small faults conspicuous in order to insinuate that he has no great ones.

Often the pleasantest memories men have are of events that never happened.

The things that come to the man who waits are generally the cast-offs of somebody else.

It is not always what a man does that goes against him, but what he happens to get caught in.

There are men who do not care to be judged by what they really are, but what they want others to think they are.

Nothing makes a man quite so angry as to realize that he has no just cause for anger and to realize that others realize it.

Some men's idea of a friend is someone who will stick to them through adversity, take their part against uncharitable neighbors, lend them his last shilling without security, and when Fortune smiles will take a back seat.

A wise man can find plenty of suggestions where fools have dropped them.

BRITISH TARIFF AND SOUTH AFRICA.

The staff correspondent of the London Times in Vienna wrote to that paper on June 4, concerning the preparations being made by the Continental nations to capture the trade of South Africa. "It has long been evident to all who follow the progress of opinion among the European commercial and industrial classes," says the correspondent, "that there would be a rush on the new South African market by the manufacturing States of the Continent as soon as the much-maligned British Government had, by the conclusion of the war, opened up the Boer countries to foreign trade and enterprise." Even in easy-going Austria, it seems, syndicates are being formed to take advantage of the opportunities offered at England's expense. The Germans, of course, are the most energetic and the most to be feared as rivals. The German manufacturers have their home market preserved to them, and they can send their goods to South Africa by subsidized steamships, and, if necessary, slaughter them there to get a hold on the market English trade will be unable to compete on equal terms.

These points the Times correspondent mentions, and he then very naturally puts the case in this way: "It may be fairly asked, however, whether it is just and reasonable that the British manufacturers and working classes, who have been subjected to a heavy extra burden of taxation in consequence of the late war, should be further handicapped by such unfair competition. This question is all the more pertinent, as the severest competition is to be expected precisely from that great European nation which confessedly claims at one day depriving England of her maritime predominance, and which, in the meantime, is doing its utmost to damage the commercial and industrial position, as well as the political prestige of the German Empire."

Put in this concrete way and in reference to a country which the British public has just been spending millions of money and thousands of lives in preserving or acquiring, the weakness and unfairness to itself of the policy of the Manchester school must come home to the British nation. The process of education is steadily going on and the South African situation is certain to greatly accelerate it. Already in the case of the sugar slaughter in the English market by the Continental countries to the detriment of the English refiners and the sugar growers of British Colonies, English public opinion has supported the Government in its decision to impose countervailing duties wherever bounties are continued. The Times correspondent regards this as a precedent which might well be followed in view of the situation in South Africa. There is little doubt that a majority of the English people will share this opinion. The Times, at least, gives it prominence under the title of "Foreign Competition in South Africa." The portion of the article dealing with this point may be quoted in full:

"It is perhaps worth considering whether the excellent precedent furnished by the successful action of the British Government in the matter of the sugar bounties, which has caused serious searchings of conscience among Continental exporters, may not be capable of extension. The application to the annexed African provinces, at least during the period of their administration by the Crown, of the same fundamental principle of compensating by countervailing duties for all unfair advantages acquired by the exporters of foreign States would seem calculated to have a beneficial influence not only on the entire trade of the Empire, but also on the promotion of closer relations between its outlying parts. The latter circumstance should not be overlooked in view of the obligations of the Mother Country to the Colonies, which might be disposed to resent what they would possibly regard as a sacrifice of their interests to political opponents and commercial rivals. The justice of the principle underlying the demands of the British Government in the sugar question has been reluctantly admitted by the Continental States concerned. It is not easy to see what sound objection they could raise against its application to other commodities, the manufacturers of which, by means of the Cartel system, fleece the native consumer in order to export goods at what is practically less than cost price. The argument drawn from the commercial treaties would have even less force than before, as the Transvaal and Orange Free State did not form part of the British Customs territory at the time they were concluded. Under the British flag they constitute, to all intents and purposes, a new market in which all are free to participate. Surely it is only fair that the outsiders who profit by this fresh field of commercial enterprise should contribute a trifle towards the cost of opening it up."

In this paragraph will be found the sound principle of self-defence and also the strongest argument for Imperial preferential trade arrangements. English opinion must come to accept both the principle and the argument. The Liberal papers in this country which are still presenting the out-worn doctrines are hopelessly behind the times.

Armed and Invincible.

WHEN the little woman opened the door the burly fellow promptly pushed his way in. In alarm she hastily backed away, and he closed the door after him.

"What do you mean?" she demanded, trying to appear brave and determined. "Leave this house immediately."

"Oh, I guess not," he answered, impudently.

"I'll call my husband," she threatened.

"He ain't home," retorted the intruder; "there ain't nobody home but you. That's why I come in. See?"

She was badly frightened, but she tried not to show it. Furthermore, she was handicapped by the fact that she was in house-cleaning attire, with apron and cap, and a feather duster in her right hand. A woman cannot be as dignified and haughtily imperious as she would wish under these circumstances.

"What do you want?" she demanded.

"Money an' jew'lry," he answered. "I ain't partic'ler wot it is, only so it's small an' val'able. I ain't lookin' fer no piano."

"Well, I should think not," she returned indignantly, "and you can't have anything at all. If you don't get right out of here I'll scream."

"Turn 'er loose!" retorted the intruder, carelessly. "There ain't nobody to hear you, but you better be quick about it, 'cause I ain't got no time to waste. I'm all business, I am, an' we been foolin' long enough. Reach for the high note!"

"You're the most insulting man I ever saw!" she cried, angrily.

"Sure," he acquiesced—and then, with a slight show of impatience, "Better hand out that watch you're wearin' or I'll have to reach fer it, an' that wouldn't be wot you'd like."

"Don't you dare touch me!" she exclaimed, retreating to the parlor as he advanced. "You're a great big coward! You wouldn't dare do this if I had a pistol!"

"Sure I wouldn't," he admitted; "but I got to have that there ticker fer a start-off."

Her anger had been getting the better of her fear, and now her housewifely instincts added to her indignation.

"Don't you come into this room with those muddy boots!" she cried. "I've just swept and dusted. You go right back there and wipe your feet on the mat."

She pointed with the duster, and as that useful household utensil came in proximity to his face he hastily dodged back.

"Don't be sassy, little woman," he said with offensive familiarity, and that was the last straw. She was so angry that she could cry, and she would have done so if there had been any sort of a reasonable opportunity.

"Oh, if I only had a weapon!" she said, hotly. "I'd teach you manners, you big, burly brute—you coward! You knew I was defenceless, or you wouldn't have dared come in! Oh, why is a woman so helpless!" Then, as he advanced again, she suddenly pushed the duster into his face, with the peremptory command: "Go back there, you clumsy thing! Don't you dare tramp mud into this room!"

Now, a feather duster is about as disagreeable a thing as a man can have thrust in his face, and as the intruder jumped back his feet became entangled in the hall rug, and he was flat on his back before he knew what had happened. As he tried to raise himself he got the duster in the face again. He grabbed for it, but she was too quick for him. He needed his hands to get himself up and he needed them to protect his face, and then she made matters worse by suddenly throwing the loose end of the rug over him.

"Oh, if I only had a weapon!" she cried.

"Wot do you call that thing?" he growled, as he tried to disentangle himself, with the result that every time he took his hands away from his face he got a feather in his eye or a bunch of them in his mouth. Once he closed his teeth on them and thus tried to hold the duster until he could grab it, but she jerked it away, leaving a varied assortment of feathers and parts of feathers in his mouth.

"Oh, my eye!" he suddenly cried, as well as he could with his mouth full of things that made him sputter and choke. "Oo! oo! ouch! you've put it out!"

"If I only had a weapon," was her retort, "I believe I could manage you all right. I'll never be unarmed again when I'm alone in the house."

"You ain't now," he wailed, holding both hands to his eye. "Let me up an' I'll go—sure I will."

"Am I sassy?" she demanded, the light of victory shining in her indignant eyes.

"Sure not," he answered.

"Are you ever going to say 'little woman' to a lady again?"

"No, ma'am; never!" with great earnestness—for she was still plying the duster whenever he attempted to move.

"Aren't you ashamed of yourself to impose on a defenceless woman?"

"'Shamed ain't no name fer it," he asserted with feeling.

She hastily threw open the outer door.

"Get up," she said.

He struggled to his feet, while she watched him closely. His back was to the open door when he stood up, the eye that had met the duster blinking distressingly. For an instant he hesitated, but only for an instant.

"Out!" she cried, and the duster went straight to his face again. He went out backward in such a hurry that he nearly fell down the steps, and the door was promptly closed. His defeat, which up to the very last minute he had hoped to turn into victory, was complete.

"Wot's the matter?" asked the man who was waiting for him at the corner. "Was she armed?"

"Bill," was the solemn and impressive reply, "'ccordin' to a man's idea she wasn't, but you can't never tell when a woman's armed."—Elliott Flower in "Leslie's Weekly."

"The Umbrella."

"It seems that the same Sherlock Holmes-like instinct which is prepared to reconstruct a man's whole mode of life from a study of his cigarette ends has now been brought to bear upon the umbrella, and the expert umbrellist is prepared to give a complete character-sketch of any individual, with the principal events in his past and future history, after a critical survey of his behavior with an umbrella. For instance, if a man is observed carrying an umbrella over a lady's head in such a way as to preserve her Bond street hat from the rain, while a little stream trickles softly down the back of his own neck, it is pretty safe to prophesy that she is his Best Girl. If, on the other hand, it is his own gasometer which is kept dry, while the trickle is reserved for the lady, it is a safe thousand-to-three on that she is his wife. When a man carries an umbrella horizontally under his arm, it is generally a sign that someone is shortly going to have his, or her, eye put out. When a brand-new umbrella is deposited with a lot of others in the umbrella-stand of a club, it is frequently a sign that it is about to change owners. There are many other ways in which the umbrella may be taken as an indication either of coming events or of character, but the Best Girl, who has been running her eye over the above, says emphatically that it is perfectly absurd to judge any average man from his umbrella. When pressed for a reason she explains sarcastically, 'Because it so seldom belongs to him!' And there is something in that."

Dooley on the Romantic Novel.

But lithrachoor is th' gr-reat lifewurruk iv the modhren woman. Th' conthrol is passin' into th' hands iv th' fair sect, an' th' day will come whin th' wurrud book will mane no more to an ablebodied man thin th' wurrud gusset. Women write all th' romantic novels that ar-re anny good. That's because iv'ry man thinks th' three hayroe is himself an' ivry woman thinks he's James K. Hackett. A woman is sure a good, sthrong man ought to be able to kill anny number iv bad, weak men, but a man is always wondherin' what th' other la-ad w'u'd do. He might have th' punch left in him that w'u'd get th' money. A woman niver cares how many men are kilt, but a man believes in fair play, an' he'd like to see th' polis intherfere about Chapter Three.

Woman writes all th' good romantic novels, an' reads thim all. If anny proud la-ad in th' gum business thinks he riprisints th' ideal iv his wife's soul, he ought to take a look at th' books she reads. He'll l'arn there th' reason he's where he is because he was th' on'y chanst, not because he was th' first choice. 'T w'u'd humble th' haughtiest prince iv thrade to look into th' heart iv th' woman he cares most f'r an' thinks last about, an' find that, instead iv the photygraft of a shrewd but kindly man with a thriflin' absence iv hair on his head an' a burglar-proof safe on his watch charm, there's a pitcher iv a young la-ad in green tights playin' a mandolin to a high front stoop. On th' stoop, with a rose in her hand, is his lawful-wedded wife, th' lady Annamariar Huggins iv Peotone. Ye can't keep her away fr'm a romantic novel. No matther what Edward Atkinson tells ye, she prefers "Th' Age iv Chivalry" to th' mos' atthractive housewurruk. — "Century Magazine."

A Different View.

"I never like to go to the theater with Fred. He always goes out between the acts." "You mean he comes in between the drinks."

Very Little Difference.

"Is that an historical novel you're reading?" "That's what they called it at the library, but it seems to me to be more hysterical than anything else."—Chicago "Record-Herald."

An Esquimaux Tradition.

There is a remarkable tradition amongst the Esquimaux which explains why the women in the north are deft with the needle while those of the south dance nimbly. Long ago the northland was inhabited by men only, and no woman had ever come among them. It was noised abroad that far away in the south one woman dwelt alone, and one of the northerners set his face southward and journeyed until he reached the woman's dwelling. In course of time he married her, and rejoiced that he had a wife while the son of the headman of the north was still a bachelor. But meanwhile this same bachelor was traveling southward with the same object in view, and, coming to the house while the man was within, hid himself and waited until night fell. Then he forced his way in, and, seizing the woman, began to drag her away. The noise, however, woke the husband, who grasped his wife's feet, and both tugged violently, with such effect that the poor body was torn in twain, the robber going off with the upper half only. The rightful husband carved a body of wood and fastened it to his wife's legs, while the other man completed his half in a similar manner, each addition receiving life as soon as finished, two women being thus made out of one. But, although the woman of the south could dance nimbly, her wooden fingers prevented her from embroidering, while the woman of the north excelled only in needlework, and thus originated the characteristics of the women of the south and north.

Edward Everett Hale said at the celebration of his eightieth birthday last month, "I never had but one enemy, and last week, when I was trying to think of his name, I found I had forgotten who he was." This is better than keeping him in mind by making plans every day for "getting even."

"There, now, Clara, how would you like to be those people who can't get home from Paris because their funds gave out?" "Well, dear me, Clarence, they are better off than we, whose funds gave out before we got started." —"American Register."

The Toreador's Rose.

Whenever I hear the "Toreador's March" from "Carmen" — that gay, devil-may-care melody, with its undertone of tragic sorrow, recalling a picture I once saw of a rose in a skull—I think of Jose Silverio. It was in old Madrid, the romantic city of guitars, dark eyes, love, and bull-fights; where the statue of the Virgin stands in the public square with the late King Alfonso's fatal sapphire burning blue on her carven finger. To the light lilt of merry music Jose Silverio, the handsome toreador, idol of all the young bloods and beloved by half the fair women of Madrid, rode into the ring. A murmur of admiration greeted him—he was splendid in spangles and mounted on a magnificent white horse. After him came his scarlet-cloaked matadors on foot, armed with light lances fluttering with streamers of many-colored ribbons. The bull's hoarse bellow struck into the music like the deep, mellow note of a bass viol. He was already in the ring pawing up the sawdust defiantly, a superb animal of the best breed of Andalusia, with delicate hoofs, curving horns, and a skin like black satin, under which the fierce muscles constantly rippled. The toreador lifted his dark, passionate eyes to a box above, where eyes equally dark, equally passionate, answered his mute, adoring message. The senorita was in black, the usual dress affected in public by Spanish women of high degree. A diamond star sparkled on her full bosom, and a crimson rose caressed like the lips of a lover the black, silken masses of her hair, over which a fold of the lace mantilla was coquettishly thrown.

An hour before he had passed the flower between her window bars, and he thrilled with exquisite joy to see it glowing in her dusky braids. The perfume of the rose, already wilting in the hot amphitheater was wafted to his nostrils with the woody smell of fresh sawdust and musky odors from hundreds of constantly moving fans. Its fragrance led him back in sweet retrospection to a walled garden, dim paths, checkered black and silver in the moonlight, the pressure of a soft breast, braceleted arms, and red lips yielding kiss for kiss, while his blue-ribboned guitar lay silent in the dew at his feet. Then the bull, goaded to splendid ferocity by the torturing banderillos, made his mad charge. The ring became an inferno of hoofs and horns, out of which flashed the keen lightning of the toreador's sword in a cloud of dust. No one could tell afterward exactly how it happened, though every eye was riveted on the arena, but the white horse rolled over in his death agony, disemboweled by one swift stroke from those terrible twin sabres fixed in the bull's powerful forehead. By the fraction of a second Jose failed to slip his feet from the stirrups in time to escape the second charge. His body described a glittering arc in the air, and fell lifeless in the sawdust. The sword, sent spinning from his hand, was caught by a matador, who delivered the coup de grace to the bull by a feat of nimble cunning that elicited a thunder of applause. Even the senorita clapped her little jeweled hands. She leaned over the edge of her box to look down at the limp, inert figure so full of proud courage and virile grace a moment ago.

"Dios! poor fellow," she said. Then, turning to a young man leaning over her chair, "Don Felipe, you may have the rose, though it is wilted now."—Minna Irving, in "Leslie's."

The Fable of Matsukata.

Count Matsukata, former Prime Minister of Japan, who is known in America as "the father of the gold standard," was asked during his recent visit to New York whether "Captains of Industry" in the Mikado's Empire were getting control of the country's trade and resources.

"Not to the same extent as in—more advanced lands," answered Count Matsukata with a smile. "Perhaps we are influenced by the old 'Myth of the Gold Man,' handed down from the ancient days of Sin Mu."

The count was requested to tell the legend, and he said:

"In the dim historic dawn a merchant eager for great wealth heard of a strange grove of wild lemon trees whose fabulous fruit, when eaten, would convert the hand that plucked it into gold.

"So the merchant journeyed to the grove, where the God of Riches, with a great sack on his shoulders, bade him help himself. He did so, and his arm was converted into gleaming gold. This he had amputated, and, though bereft of an arm, became a man of wealth.

"A banker, hearing of the strange case, determined to secure the total produce of the miraculous lemon trees. To that end he bought out the right of the guardian deity; but that showed being exacted so great a price that the covetous banker found his fortune depleted. To secure ready money he determined to eat of the fruit and sacrifice an arm.

"Raw lemon, however, was too astringent for his pampered palate, and so he sweetened the juice of several lemons, and, adding thereto wine of rare vintage, drank greedily of the potent and tempting beverage.

"In a few minutes he had turned into a pillar of gold.

"Then his heirs melted him down, coined him into convenient cobangs, and, turning their backs bravely on the grove of golden lemons, proceeded with free hands to spend and enjoy their bountiful inheritance."

"What became of that lemon grove?" enquired a vigilant New Yorker who had listened eagerly to the story.

"There is no record," replied Count Matsukata, smiling, "of its having been destroyed, but happily our fortune-hunters have not been able to locate it.

"Do you think he would be a success in politics?" "Yes, indeed. Why, he has thoroughly mastered the knack of looking interested when he is being bored."—Chicago "Post."

"I left my husband's death notice here this morning," said the widow. "Yes," said the bright clerk in the publishing office of the "Daily Squib." "Now, I want to add 'Gone to Rest' in an appropriate place." "Yes, madam," replied the bright clerk, and the next morning she read: "Gone to rest in an appropriate place."—Philadelphia "Press."

THE STORY LIBELS THE KINDLY ESKIMOS

That Reported Killing of Andre, and Aeronaut

THERE IS NO "FIERCE TRIBE"

On the Contrary the the Eskimos are Everywhere a Mild, Tender and Amiable People

Ottawa, July 11.—Dr. Robert Bell, acting director of the Geological Survey Department, writes to an evening paper as follows: "I read with surprise the telegram from Winnipeg, which stated that Rev. Richard Farles had brought from Fort Churchill further news of the reported killing of Andre and his companions by a tribe of fierce Eskimos some three years ago. The story, as given in the telegram, is vague and unlikely. As one who has several years acquaintance with the Eskimos on both sides of Hudson Bay and Straits, the Northern Labrador, and Baffin Land, I place no confidence in it. There are no 'fierce Eskimos' in any of these regions. On the contrary, the Eskimos are everywhere a mild, timid, and amiable people, and they are always delighted to meet with white men, and they invariably treat them kindly. The regions indicated has been recently traversed by Mr. Hanbury, Mr. Jas. Tyrell, and Archdeacon Lofthouse and these gentlemen would have been sure to have heard of the killing, if it had ever occurred. If the Eskimos brought any fragments of scientific instruments to Fort Churchill last year they probably belonged to some of those lost by Mr. Hanbury or Mr. J. B. Tyrrell.

"The statement that 'the savage Eskimos fell upon and literally chopped them to pieces with their harpoons' is in keeping with the rest of the story. The locality of the supposed tragedy is far inland. The Eskimos do not carry their harpoons away from the sea coast, and any person who has seen one of these implements knows that they could not be used for chopping.

"The alleged want of success of the missionaries among the Eskimos is as incredible as the story about Andre. These people accept the teachings of the missionaries with great readiness, and those of them who have heard the Gospel teach it to others of their tribe, so that Christianity is now widely spread among them."

THE WEST INDIES WANT AID FROM BRITAIN.

Special to The Times.

Kingstown, Island of St. Vincent, Saturday, July 12.—At an important public meeting held at Port of Spain, Island of Trinidad, on Friday, July 11, largely attended by sugar planters and others, there was an interesting discussion of the sugar crisis in the British West Indies, and the inadequacy of the means offered by the Imperial Government for its amelliration. Edgar Tripp, of the Chamber of Commerce, said the loyalty of the West Indian colonies had been strained to almost the breaking point, and it was "small wonder if their wistful longing should be turned to that great republic in the north that knows so well how to protect its own and foster the industries of its citizens."

This sentiment is shared by many people in the West Indies, but the press generally deprecates the expression of such views.

Logs Broke Loose

During the high wind on Wednesda a boom belonging to the Dickson Company broke and let about 2000 log loose. They passed over Dickson' dam, and down into the Little Lake where they became mixed wtih Mr Alf. Macdonald's logs. The loss wil be considerable.

—At the big bar, near Marguerite's Island, Rice Lake, Robert Gray, an Indian, caught in one afternoon this season 20 maskinonge.

The Switzerland of America.

The above caption is particularly appropriate to the region in the "Highlands of Ontario" known as "The Lake of Bays" district. It is replete with natural beauty and loveliness, and comprises some of the most beautiful water stretches and picturesque landscapes for which the locality is becoming so famous with the ever increasing army of tourists. The scenic grandeur of hill and mountain, the placid beauty of the lakes, the lovely rivers, are not surpassed in any country. One thousand feet above sea level. No Hay Fever, absence of flies, splendid speckled trout fishing, and good bathing and boating assured. Handsome illustrated descriptive matter giving full particulars can be had for the asking by applying to M. C. Dickson, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

Items of News

Johannesburg, Transvaal, July 15.—At a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce to-day called to receive the British trade commissioners a member read a cable despatch which he had received offering freight from New York to Natal at ten shillings per ton. Other members of the Chamber said they had received similar offers. This rate is not remunerative, but is the outcome of competition. It is 21s 3d below the lowest freight rate from England. The merchants' do not see how the Americans are able to offer such low rates. Nevertheless they are overhauling their stock to see what they can order in the United States. A majority of the members of the Executive Committee of the Chamber of Mines are advocating a coast duty of 55s to 7s 6d per case of dynamite in order to protect the local factory. The proposal is strongly opposed as tending to create a worse monopoly than existed during the Kruger regime and to establish a precedent in the direction of protection.

Paris, July 11.—M. de Lassan, late Minister of the Navy, thinks that France should have by January 1 19077, constructed six first-class ironclads of 14,865 tons each, five armored cruiser sof 12,550 tons each, numerous torpedo boats and submarine craft. In comparing the English and French war fleets he says:

"The superiority of the English navy over that of France from the point of view of the number of iron clads is too considerable for us not to acknowledge and deplore it. It has, unfortunately, greatly increased during recent years by the fact of our having almost completely abandoned building new first-class ironclads, whiole England, on the contrary, continued actively adding to the number of the ironclads she had already. However, if England possesses 66 first-class ironclads, whereas we have only 26, the needs of England for them are much more extended than ours. In the first place, her commercial and political interests in the various seas of the world are so considerable, and her merchant fleet in all the oceans of the globe is represented by such a large number of ships that she is constrained to keep numeros war vessels everywhere. She employs a certain proportion of her ironclads in that service. In the second place, England cannot, in the European seas, avoid the necessity of dividing her squadron between the Channel and the Mediterranean without exposing herself to great danger. In the Mediterranean she must protect Gibraltar, Malta and Efypt. In the Channel she must posses powerful squadrons to prevent the ruin of her commerce and to protect herself against the danger of landing being effected on her coasts. In a word, England has many more ironclads than we, because she has many more interests to defend in various parts of the world."

IRONCLADS AND CRUISERS.

M. de Lanessan also compares the French ironclads with those possesde by the powers of the Triple Alliance, and concludes that France should always possess 20 firt-class ironclads, which are indispensable for the formation of four squadrons of six ironclads each, with one ironclad always in reserve for each of the squadrons. To maintain that force constantly up-to date, he contends that it will suffice, after the completion of the slix first-class ironclads provided for in the present program, to commence building anotther series of six ironclads with all the latest improvements and to continue that system conand to continue that system constantly. In that amuner the out-od-date iron clads would be relegated to the second line, and four ironclad squadrons would be always maintained at the highest point of perfection.

Examining the question of protected cruisers, M. de Lanessan Insirtr that they should be of the most perfect type to be capable of rendering the services expected of them. At the beginning of the present year, 1902, France possesed on the seas, or in cours e of construction, 33 armoured cruisers, three of which steamed at the rate of 22 knots and the other 30 at speeds varying between 18 and 20 knots. In addition to these vessels at the end of 1906 France will have five ironclad cruiser sof 12,500 tons, steaming at a speed of 22 knots. At the same moment England will possess 130 armoured cruisers and 14 ironclad cruisers of 11,000 tons, steaming at a speed of 23 knots; six of 12,000 tons with a speed of 21 knots, and 4 of 9,800 tons, with a speed of 12 knots. The writer acknowledges the great numerical strength of the English cruisers, but points to the enormously greater importance of the interests they have to protect all over the world.

Victoria, July 16.—The Empress of India, which arrived yesterday brought details of the blowing up of the Chinese cruiser Kat-Chi at Hsaikuan on Sunday, June 22nd, a terrible disaster involving the loss of nearly 250 lives. The Kat-Chi was anchored in the river when the Japanese man-of-war Atago arrived at Hsiakuan and anchoring two cables away from the Chinese cruiser, the crew of the Japanese vessel watched preparations for a salute on the Chinese cruiser. Suna salute on the Chinese ccruiser. suddenly the port side of the Chinese cruiser blew out. Immediately the whole poop, main and mizzzen mast were shattered, in fact, the whole of the after part of the vessel from the main mast was blown to pieces. This was followed immediately by volumes of smoke and flame as high as the masthead, and a terrific report, which was heard for a distance of seven miles.

There were only two survivors, a carpenter and a sailor. The sailor says the explosion was probably caused by seamen going into the magazine with a light to get saluting ammunition.

London, July 16.—The daily Telegraph, which is a pro-Milner organ, mentions a reportt hat Viscount Milner is about to resign his post in South Africa. That paper does not deny the report, but says there is no immediate prospect of his retiring.

Reports received here from Pretoria state that there is a serious reaction from the optimish that prevailed at the end oft he war. There are new evidences everywhere of the Boer determination to continue their own nationality. The immediate opening of Dutch school before the British have organized a system of education is advanced. The Boers who currendered in the course of the war and took service as notional scouts under the Birtish are subjects of the bitterest hatred. Reports of beating shooting and boycotting them are frequent. The Transvaal and Free State colors are frequently worn, as are also the letters "Z. A. R." similar to the British regemental badges. The Boers demanded the appointment of burghers on the Executive Council and Repatriation Committees. Many of the burghers declare they were induced to agree to surrender by the false representations of their leaders who paintedt he terms too rosily. Discordant elements are numerous, and any attempt to place the burghers who surrendered during the war in authority over those who fought throughout will conceivably result in a renewal of hostilities.

A Wonderful Tonic and Strengthener

Said a druggist to-day, "No doubt about it, the tonic that gives best results is the biggest seller, and that is Ferrozone. It enriches and purifies the blood, restores strength and energy to the feeble, and is a scientific reconstructor that was always popular. In chlorosis, anaemia, tiredness, languor, brain fag, indigestion, and dyspepsia, its action is prompt, and satisfactory cures always follow. Yes, I recommend Ferrozone to my customers because I believe it is the best tonic and strengthening medicine that money can buy." Large boxes cost 50c. Sold by Ormond & Walsh.

Daddy of Them All.

The Bobcaygeon Independent says: The large maskinonge that was so muck spoken of, and heralded over the continent through the papers as the "Daddy of them all," was certainly a monster. It was last Tuesday, that Mr. Sam C. Young, who is spending the summer along with his wife and relatives at Springbank Cottage, Pigeon lake, had such an experience. Mr. Young with guide Claes Arnberg, had just finished lunch, when they rowed quietly round Bigelow's bay, when all of a sudden the line tightened, boat stopped, and Mr. Young said he was caught on a log. However a few moments later it was very different and then came the fight and struggle. Claes sang his old song "give and take" which was accordingly done. They saw that it was a large fish, and so Claes rowed out into the middle of the lake, and kept going around. All sorts of schemes were suggested by Mr. Young and Claes as to how to land the monster. Mr. Young said he was quite willing to do this "give and take" for a week if it would result in capturing the fish. So they tuged away and it was over an hour before the fish was lifted into the boat and you could almost see the water in the lake go down. They rowed to Springbank where it was on exhibition that evening. All the fishermen, tourists, friends, from Bobcaygeon sailed down to see this large fish. It weighed 30 lbs, when first caught, the girth 21 inches, spread of tail 14 inches, around the head over the eyes 22 inches. The "bird" as Mr. Young calls it, was sent to Mr. Elcome, Peterborough, to be mounted, and will hang in his den at home, Edgworth, Pa., as a trophy of the Kawartha Lakes.

Pleasant Cure for Weak Lungs

The best remedy for sore, weak, lungs is the soothing vapor of Catarrhozone, which traverses every air cell and passage of the breathing organs. It treats remote parts that cough mixtures and sprays can't approach, and kills thousands of germs at every breath. Catarrhozone drives away pain, congestion and inflammation; it makes breathing easy and regular, and exerts a marvelous influence on coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, catarrh, deafness and lung trouble. Catarrhozone cures at once, is delightful to inhale, and simple to use. Price, $1.00; small size, 50 cts. Druggists, or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

the little old woman," clicking her needles over a pair of long worsted stockings, which she was busily knitting—for him, perhaps. "I'm sure he wouldn't mind your asking questions, and I should be only too pleased to answer 'em, for there's nothing in his whole life that I'm not proud to talk about."

So then I did ask questions, timidly at first, eagerly as I went on. And she answered with evident delight.

Why, Mr. Bourke was the great Mr. Bourke. How extraordinary that those words should bring no light of comprehension to my eyes! Where had I lived that I hadn't heard of him? Didn't I read the papers? Oh, I hadn't been allowed to read them! That was quite a different thing. Some people were so particular with young girls; and quite right, too, no doubt. But as for Mr. Bourke—well, to begin at the beginning, it was just like a story-book.

He'd been a poor boy, without friends or money. He'd sold newspapers and run errands in shops. Every penny he could save he spent in buying books. He had taught himself to read, and he had gone to a night-school. There he attracted the notice of the teachers, one of whom got him apprenticed to a firm of engineers. He was eighteen by that time, and he began to send articles to a London paper, which were published, and brought the author great praise. The editor found out who he was, and, taking a great fancy to the wonderful boy, sent him to Oxford, as a non-collegiate.

That was a hard life, so Mrs. Jennett had heard—to be among a lot of more fortunate young men, who had plenty of money and fun, but to remain an outsider. However, Mr. Bourke won many honors, and he wrote several books on Socialism which made a great deal of talk among people who cared about such things.

When he was only twenty-two, he was editing an important Socialistic paper; and now, though he was but six-and-twenty, he was a member of Parliament—a "Labor member," Mrs. Jennett thought was the right name for it. And he made such brilliant speeches that all England talked about them. And dukes and duchesses and earls and countesses invited him to their houses, but he would never go when he could help it.

When he was at home she had orders invariably to provide enough food at every meal for several unexpected guests, and it was seldom that they failed to appear. Such guests! In rags, generally. And sometimes very distinguished men, friends of Mr. Bourke's, had sat down at the same table with them. He never apologized.

There was a story about him, which Mr. Bourke did not know that she had heard, but the lady concerned in it had told it herself to Mrs. Jennett one day when she had called at the house and waited a long time, hoping in vain that Mr. Bourke would come in. A beautiful young lady she was, too, and very rich. Who knew but, after all, he would marry her one day? If he did, with her money and position to help him on, why, he might rise to be Prime Minister of England.

But the story—oh, yes, Mrs. Jennett would tell it! Mr. Bourke had once been persuaded to dine at the house of this young lady of whom she had just spoken. Nobody else had been asked, and after dinner, the lady had begged Mr. Bourke to tell her how she might begin to work as a Socialist—because she believed in the doctrines he taught.

"You can begin by washing the flour from the hair of my brothers in your hall," he had said, meaning the footmen, of whom the lady kept several in livery and powder. At first she was very angry; but soon she forgave him, and liked him better than ever—she had remarked to Mrs. Jennett—for being "so original and so daring." Afterwards she had sent Mr. Bourke her photograph, and Mrs. Jennett had recognized it at once as the portrait of the charming young lady who had chatted with her for so long.

I listened to all this gossip with a strange diversity of feeling. The part of the disjointed narrative which concerned the beautiful "woman in the case" fascinated me oddly. "I should like to see the picture!" I said, rather wistfully, at last feeling even more insignificant and vaguely homesick than I had felt before the story began.

Mrs. Jennett rose and went to the mantelpiece, returning in a moment with a framed photograph in her hand. With an air of importance, she placed it in mine, and as my eyes fell upon those that looked out from the picture I gave a low cry of surprise, almost alarm.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Woman Who Would Be a Socialist.

It was a beautiful face, and I knew it well. Now, my heart gave a quick throb as I gazed at it. For the woman who owned it belonged in that part of my life which had come before the deluge. She was of the "ultra smart" set, which for a little while had petted and welcomed me as a promising debutante. She had been "nice" to me; but I had not valued her kindness highly after hearing her remark one day, with a characteristic laugh: "I always make a point of being charming to girls; one never knows whom they may marry."

Looking at her "counterfeit presentment," taken (in a ball dress with becoming background of ermine) by the most popular woman-photographer of the moment, I seemed to hear her sweet, though slightly metallic voice saying the words again.

She would, according to her maxim, no longer care to charm me, since it was now certain that if I ever married at all, it would not be a man of importance.

So Lady Feo Ringwood was a disciple of John Bourke, the "man of the people!" I could imagine nothing more incongruous than that she should advertise herself as a "Socialist."

She was a young widow, the daughter of an impecunious earl. The mid-

An Enjoyable Outing

The congregation of St. John's church tendered the choir and their friends to the number of about 60 an excursion to the Chemong Lake on Tuesday. The party left here at 8 a.m. in 'busses, arriving at Chemong in good time, where the steamer Alert was in waiting. The excursionists were taken to Burleigh Falls where dinner was had, after which the party returned down Chemong Lake. Tea was served on board the boat. The affair passed off most pleasantly.

GOOD AS CANDY

Children Like Grape-Nuts

Wise selection of food will help any one. The healthy people can keep well and those who are ill can obtain sure benefit by the steady use of Grape Nuts.

A lady says, "To say that Grape-Nuts Food has been a help to me is putting it very mild indeed. For seven years I was an invalid suffering from extreme nervousness and weak, tired, exhausted, feeling. I was compelled to lie down several times each day and the least exercise exhausted me. I was also unable to sleep nights.

I read many times of the remarkable results from the use of Grape-Nuts Food and finally decided to try it.

I ate Grape-Nuts three times a day in different styles for about three months then twice a day, and have realized a wonderful benefit. I have grown strong and almost entirely well. Can do all my own work, and seldom lie down until I go to bed at night, then I enjoy restful sleep.

I do not become fatigued as I used to and am able to study more in my line of work (music). My brain does not get weary as it used to. My stomach is strong and I can and do eat three hearty meals a day.

We would hardly known what to do without Grape-Nuts for the house. The children often say, "Mamma, make a great big pudding this time.' They enjoy the food as they would candy." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

DROPPED DEAD.

Alfred Y. Hopkins Expires While at Work at the Cereal Company

Alfred Y. Hopkins employed at the Cereal Company, dropped dead at his work this morning about 8 o'clock, from heart disease. While stooping down to pick up a piece of timber he reeled over and expired instantly. Dr. McGrath was summoned and pronounced death due to heart disease. The remains were conveyed to the family residence, No. 211 Park street. No inquest will be held.

The deceased man had only started to work for the Cereal Co. a few days ago, and had made no complaints of feeling unwell.

The deceased was a middle aged gentleman and leaves a grown up family to mourn his sudden demise. He is highly spoken of by all who knew him and was generally looked upon as honest and industrious.

Mr. W. E. Kopkins, of the Canadian General Electrical Co., and Miss Josephine, school teacher and Miss Eva K., assistant bookkeeper for M. Carton, are daughters of the deceased.

Some Good Advice

Dr. Bingham, Medical Health Officer of the Town of Peterborough, has issued the following notice:

As the season is now approaching when typhoid fever and other infectious diseases are generally prevalent in towns and cities, it is a duty which all good citizens owe to themselves and to the public to use all sanitary precautions against such disease. Typhoid fever is caused by sewer gas, by open cess-pools and by ill-kept privies, also by bad water, and by decaying animal and vegetable substances.

The late heavy rains would be sure to carry surface water into many wells. In all such cases the wells should be cleaned out and properly disinfected. Much sickness and many deaths may be avoided by the strict observance of sanitary laws.

THE BAND AND THE ORANGE MEN

Mr. Robert Mein, Pres. of the 57th Band Explains the Situation

Mr. Robert Mein, President of the Fifty-Seventh Band, states the facts in reference to the situation as asserted in the resolution by the Orangemen of Peterboro on the evening of July 12th. The Music Committee of the Orangemen waited upon the band wishing to get thirty men so that they could be divided and make two bands. The price asked was $2.75 per day, the lowest that could be accepted as the members of the band belong to the union and $2.75 was the Union figure. This price was not agreeable to the committee and then the offer was made to supply 12 of 15 men which would make a good band, at the same price. This was not acceptable. It was, so far, Mr. Mein said, a matter of price—the Orange Committee could not, or would not accept the price stipulated, and the band being members of the Union could accept no less. In regard to the alleged "contemptible means resorted to to prevent members playing in the emergency band" got together for the occasion, Mr. Mein says that one member of the 57th was prevented from playing because he could not be allowed to use an instrument belonging to the 57th in an outside organization. It is understood that other unions, the printers and tailors, prevented others from playing contrary to union rules. It seems that the affair was simply a matter of failure to agree upon terms as between the 57th and the Orange Committee. It is unfortunate that their should be discord in the matter when harmony is one of the essential requisites.

DEATH OF MISS M. HENDREN

Passed Away Yesterday Morning About Ten O'clock

The sad death of Miss Myrral Hendren, at Lakefield yesterday morning, comes as a great shock to her many friends.

Miss Hendren fell a victim to a form of lung truoble, the advances of which were so rapid as to undermine her constitution and preclude all hope of recovery within a very few months. Six weeks ago, accompanied by a younger sister, who was similiarly affected, Miss Hendren went to Wilberforce to see if in the bracing atmosphere of the Haliburton hills, their rapidly diminishing strength could not be restored. The journey in quest of health, however, proved a fruitless one, and the two sisters returned home about two weeks ago, since, which time Miss Myrral has been gradually growing weaker, until yesterday morning when death came unto her.

The deceased was an earnest church worker and was beloved by all with whom she came in contact.

For about a year she was connected with the Charlotte street choir of town and she was also heard at many local concerts. Mr. Thos. Barrie, of town, called upon Miss Hendren at her home yesterday morning and she talked quite cheerfully. Yet before Mr. Barrie reached his place of business in Peterborough, word was received of her death.

Her father, Mr. Abel Hendren, of Lakefield, and family will receive the sympathy of everyone in their great trouble. The funeral will take place on Thursday at 2 o'clock.

NORWICH RESIDENTS REFUSE VACCINATION

Interesting Developments are Expected

Woodstock, July 14.—Owing to the prevalence of smallpox in the village of Norwich, the Board of Health decided that every one of the village should be vaccinated, and accordingly an order was issued calling for compulsory vaccination. In Norwich, however, there are many persons who are opposed to this means of preventing smallpox, and while about one-half the population acquiesced in the order of the health officials these anti-vaccinationists refused to go through the ordeal, declaring that it was injurious to good health to be vaccinated at this time of the year.

As a result of the stand assumed by these persons ther epromises to be interesting developments. The health authorities determined to have their mandate observed, called on the Government health inspector to come up from Toronto and assist hem. Dr. Hodges arrived in the village Friday, but still the anti-vaccination party refused to yield. The only thing for the health officials to do was to prosecute everyone who refuses to comply with their request.

From present appearances those unfavorable to the vaccination are going to fight the matter out to the bitter ends Saturday a delegation was in Woodstock, where the neighbors interviewed a firm of lawyers and laid their case before them.

MANY FIGHTING BOERS BOUND FOR HOME

First Batch Arrive in New York, Fresh from Prison.

They Sang "Praise the Lord" When they Heard of Peace,

But Wouldn't Believe It Until Gen. De Wet Cabled

New York, July 18.—Among the passengers who arrived today by the steamer Pretoria from Bermuda were 168 Boers, who were prisoners at Bermuda.

The Boers were clad in the same suits they wore in South Africa. Twenty-one of them had been officers. Among the most prominent of the officers were: Gen. J. B. Wessels, Peter F. Steyn, a brother of President Steyn of the Orange Free State; J. Devilliers, late attorney-general of the Free State, and Joubert Reitz, a son of the Free State secretary. None of the officers would talk about the way they had been treated by the British in Bermuda.

"We are all going home as quickly as possible," said Gen. Wessels, "and if there was a boat going home tomorrow we would take it. We will try to build up our burned houses and restore things to their old standing. I shall join my wife and family in Pretoria. None of them have been captured, although my sons served all through the war and were both wounded. We first heard of peace June 3, but very few believed it true. I fought for 20 months and was captured July 11, 1901, just a year before my release."

The youngest member of the crowd was twelve years old, M. J. DeWet, cousin, he says of the general. He is accompanied by his brother, P. S. DeWet, who is twenty-one years old. Both boys were captured on September 18, 1901, near Kimberley, while serving under Commandant Jacobs. The boys had been excited by the reports of the Boer's success in the field, and ran away from home, serving in the field for seven months before they were captured.

DARREL'S ISLAND, BERMUDA.

James L. Mallery of Boston, and Michael Halley of Nevada, American officers, arrived with the Boers. Mallery said he had gone to South Africa from America with a Red Cross ambulance corps, and then joined the Boers. After he was captured and sent to Bermuda he made strenuous efforts to be released, but only succeeded in getting a letter to United States Consul Green a few weeks ago. This letter resulted in the release of both men as soon as the terms of peace were signed.

Commandant Peter Ferreira, of the Orange Free State, said there are now about 4,000 Boer prisoners in the islands of Bermuda. Two hundred of these are Cape rebels. As most of them have no money for their passage home, they will have to wait until a British transport arrives. Some of the released privates having complained of the treatment accorded them, Commandant Ferreira said he did not think officers or privates had much to complain of, adding that it was certain that the English cared for them much better than the Boers could have done for the English.

COMMITTED AN ERROR IN NEW COMMONWEALTH

Catholics Fight the Education Bill--Reconstruction of Campanile

Special to The Times.

London, July 17.—A despatch from Melbourne says the Earl of Hopetoun retiring Governor-General of Australia, sailed for England yesterday. Before sailing he wrote a letter to Alfred Deakin, Attorney-General of the Commonwealth, in which he said it had been his constant desire to place his office on a pedestal, not for his own sake, but because he believed it was the best way to serve the Empire and Australians. He acknowledged he committed an error, common in new communities of trying to overbuild while not sure of his foundations, and added: "If one day I find myself sitting on ground surrounded by the ruins of my own ideal, I have only myself to blame."

NOTICES AGAINST FRENCH SCHOOLS.

London, July 17—A Paris correspondent says seventy-six Catholic schools in Paris have been given a week's notice to close for the contravening of the Law of Associations by not applying for auhterization Similar notices have been served in the provinces upon schools to the number of more than 2,000. The correspondent says the Catholics are naturally incensed, and even some Republicans of the advanced type show uneasiness. that the Radicals make a seriousmistake in jaging the temper of the smaller towns and villages by thatof the large towns, where anti-Catholicism is rampant.

FIGHT AGAINST EDUCATION BILL.

London, July 17— Catholics are now entering actively into the fight against the Government education bill, which some irate nonconformists describe as a job and sop to the Church party, to whom they declare the Government owes its existence. Catholic bishops, at a meeting at Cardinal Vaughan's house at Westminster yesterday, passed a resolution to the effect that they viewed with the gravest concern the proposal in the bill regarding the management of denominational schools. The section of the bill referred to will probably be left over until the autumn sitting, and while Catholic influence may not greatly strengthen the opposition to the measure it will complicate the situation considerably.

TO RECONSTRUCT CAMPANILE.

London, July 17.—A Venice despatch says:—The prevailing tendency is now to attribute the fall of the Campanile of St. Mark to the recent modifications in the logetta at the base of the tower. The reconstruction of Campanile is certain. Forty thousand pounds are already available for that purpose in Venice alone. Indignation at the neglect which caused the disaster dominates Italian public sentiment. In crushing a corner of the royal palace the falling debris destroyed some relatively unimportant pictures. The Veronese frescoes on the ceiling of the library are intact.

DINNER TO J. PIERPONT MORGAN.

London July 17.—A big dinner will be given in honor of J. Pierpont Morgan next Tuesday in the House of Commons. A. W. Maconochie, M.P., is to be the host, and the guests will include Hon. A. J. Balfour, and several Cabinet Ministers, as well as a number of other representative Englishmen.

MT. PELEE MAY HAVE CAUSED MINE DISASTER

Geological Observer Says Central Part of the State Has Experienced Upheaval of The Earth's Crust

Harrisburg, Pa., July 17.—In a letter to the chief officer of the United States Geological Survey, Colonel H. C. Demming, of this city, an observer for the Department, claims that the ground on which this city is located was lifted seven feet by the Mt. Pelee eruption, and that other sections of the State have shown evidence of an upheaval. He concluded the letter with the suggestion that the upheaval may have caused crevices to be formed in the mines, and that through one of these crevices firedamp entered the mine at Johnstown, causing the disaster.

He also informs Director Walcott that the ground rifted near Colebrook Station, Lebanon county; that a rock, 28 by 18 feet

Whether there is any truth in the persistent reports of latent constitutional trouble the world is not permitted to know, but for the present there [illegible] broken apart; that the earth caved in near Mechanicsburg, Cumberland county, as shown by an unusual number of holes in the ground on a farm in that section. The paragraph referring to the Johnstown mine as follows:

"If any or all the measurements are verified, would it not be well for coal and other underground miners to exercise unusual care, as crevices may have been formed whereby increased quantities of firedamp might enter the mine chambers and make mining unusually hazardous. I have written to the mine inspector at Johnstown to ascertain if this could possibly have been the direct or remote cause of the explosion in the Cambria Company's coal mine last week."

GERMANY AND BRITAIN MAY COME TO BLOWS

What is the German Navy for but to Fight England?

THIS IS NOW A LIVE QUESTION

The Two Countries Are Bitterly Hostile to Each Other, Regardless of Results

Special to The Times.

London, July 18.—Regarding the relations between England and Germany, I understand that this topic is much in the mind of the rulers of both lands. The sole remedy for such ill feeling as is due to jealousy (Germany requiring many of the things which we possess) is vigilant preparation, organized defence and courtesy in our international dealings with the great German Empire. Following on the growth of population the rulers of Germany have recognized the fate forced on them of either obtaining outlets for the superfluous population or facing an explosion. Hitherto the redundant children of the Fatherland have been content to find new homes under the British or American flag, after performing their military service. This denationalization of the most vigorous portion of the population is deeply repugnant to the Kaiser and to his people. Hence the passionate longing for colonies in a temperate climate. Germans of all classes love their ships of war because they think later on the ships will get the colonies. A feverish desire for a navy has seized upon the German people like an epidemic. The German Navy League is a great national institution. Fifty paying members in a small German village is not uncommon. Over 600,000 adult members are borne on the books of the German Navy League. The German navy is looked on by the nation and its ruler as the one only hope of the future, and the German Navy League is a means to an end—colonies. Although we cannot dismember the British Empire to please the Teuton, or slacken our resolve to retain and increase our naval predominance, there is still much to be done that may improve our international relations with Germany.

The British and German navies know and like each other. Why should not the two nations understand each other as well as the two navies? A question that has agitated many thoughtful Englishmen has been. What is the German navy for? Is it to attack England After talking the matter over with those who know best, the true answer, I am convinced, is given in the words used by a German Minister of State in conversation with me: "The future of all States that are not dying nations is on the sea. No nation is rich enough or strong enough ever again to monopolize the sea against all comers. Since great trade is necessary to great nations, sea power, in some degree, is equally essential. There is no menace to any nation in the German navy."

MYSTERIES ABOUT EELS

Enormous Numbers in a Turbine Wheel—A Sudden Disappearance

Hull, Canada, July 17.—A turbine mill wheel which runs a gang of saws at the Chaudiere waterfall stopped suddenly this week. Upon shutting down the mill and unscrewing the upper cap it was discovered that the wheel had become packed full of eels. It looked as though there must have been hundreds of thousands of them.

About Valleyfield on the St. Lawrence it became necessary a good many years ago to set up special guards to prevent eels from crowding into the canals which supply water power to the factories. And at these guards thrifty inhabitants used to do a good business catching eels in wicker traps and shipping them in barrels by boat to Montreal.

One of these enterprising men volunteers the information that he has noticed that until they attain a weight of two or three pounds eels travel in droves, probably families, of some hundreds of individuals. Possibly the stopping of the great mill here may have been caused as this man suggests by the desire of a family of lusty young eels to pass by that way.

This incident reminds lumbermen here of an occurrence at a little lake to the north of the Temiscamingue some years ago in order to supply a rapidly falling stream with water enough to float a large number of logs to the Ottawa River it became necessary to cut through a rocky natural dam and allow a little sheet of water to discharge into it.

The blasting powder did its work well and the log drivers accomplished their object comfortably. On the next Sunday several of the men made their way back to see the result of their sudden drainage of the lake. They found about an acre of thick mud at the very centre of where the pond had been, and this was alive with a struggling, writhing mass of great eels.

The specimens they dragged to camp were so huge that the cook refused to have anything to do with them, as he did not believe eels ever grew to such a size. A few days afterward a number of men went to see the monsters, but found the mud quite dry and not a fish to be seen.

Various theories were advanced to account for their disappearance, as that a heavy thunderstorm had furnished water enough for them to leave for the almost dried-up brook. Another suggestion was that wild beasts and birds of the eagle and hawk family had cleared away the stranded fish. The people of the country declared that the eels had gone overland to another lake not half a mile away, for "eels often come out of the water and crawl about the fields in wet weather."

UNITED EUROPE

The Great Nations of the Continent to Form Alliance

Philadelphia, July 18. — The Czar represents the alliance of Russia and France. The King of Italy represents the Triple Alliance of Germany, Austria-Hungary and Italy. In this lies the significance of the present visit of King Victor Emmanuel to St. Petersburg. The Czar has recently seen the French President and the German Emperor. What more probable than that he is arranging for a firm establishment of general peace among the five powerful nations which virtually divide Europe among them. The aged Emperor of Austria-Hungary, who is the only one who has not been consulted ostentatiously, is always for peace, and the smaller nations must take their cue from their powerful neighbors. As for Great Britain, she has had enough of fighting for awhile, and will readily fall in with the scheme.

BRITAIN RULES THE WAVES

The Tonnage of England Nearly Equal to Whole World

Special to The Times.

London, July 18.—The statistics have recently been given out for the world's shipping as figured by Lloyd's Register. These figures show the shipping of the world as 17,150 steamers, with a tonnage of [illegible], and 12,472 sailing vessels, with the tonnage of 6,577,116, bringing the total number of vessels in the merchantile marines of the world up to 29,622, with a tonnage of 32,437,763. Great Britain stands first as regards tonnage; in fact, she has almost half of the tonnage of the world, the figures being 15,646,397. America comes second, with a tonnage of 2,297,154 (this figure is lower than that given by the U. S. Commissioner of Navigation); Germany third, with 2,138,568 tons; Norway fourth, with 1,632,757; France fifth, with 1,519,922, and Italy sixth, with 1,180,882—the merchant fleets of these last two subsidy paying countries not standing as well on the list as does the Norwegian shipping, which has been built up on the free ship plan. Following France in order come Russia, Spain, Japan, and Sweden. After Sweden the Dutch shipping takes eleventh place, followed by the Austrian, Danish, Greek, Belgian, Turkish, Brazilian, Chilean, Portuguese and Argentine, no other country having over 95,000 tons.

THINKS INDEPENDENCE WILL COME

J. W. Lamar of Kansas Returns From South Africa

Kansas City, July 18.—J. W. Lamar, a lawyer, who served as a second lieutenant in the Twenty-first Kansas infantry during the Spanish-American war, and more recently as a soldier of the British army in South Africa, was at the Savoy hotel last night. Mr. Lamar predicts another war with the Boers in South Africa. "The majority of the Boers are dissatisfied and surrendered simply because they saw that further resistance would be useless," he said. "Some day the old anti-English spirit will break out again, and another war will follow, which will result in the independence of the Transvaal, Cape Colony and the Orange Free State as a South African republic."

Mr. Lamar says Gen. Methuen is an old woman when it comes to carrying on a campaign. "The credit for ending the war is rightfully Kitchener's," he said.

Our Growth in Population

Slow Increase of Population in Thirty-Five Years of Confederation

Quebec, July 18—Canadian statisticians have been at work since the closing of the thirty-fifth year of confederation on June 30 last, endeavoring to ascertain what progress the new Dominion has made under the existing order of its affairs.

Thirty-five years ago when the Canadian Confederation was founded it consisted of only the old Provinces of Quebec, Ontario, Nove Scotia and New Brunswick. Since that time, by the purchase of the immense Northwest Territory from the Hudson Bay Company, and the admission of the Province of British Columbia, the area of Canada has been increased to six times its original extent.

Its trade has grown from $161,000,000 to about $500,000,000 and its railroad mileage from 2,2[illegible]9 to more than 18,000 miles. Yet actual development of the enormous resources of the Dominion has scarcely begun.

The great drawback of Canada is the slow growth of its population. During hte thirty-five years in which it has multiplied its original limits six times over its population has only increased by only a couple of millions. Though possessing a territory nearly as large ar Europe, it cotnains a population equal only to that of Belgium.

One of the strongest features of the Canadian nationality if the Dominion can be said to have any distinctive nationality at all, is found in the different estimates as to the future destiny of the country. The number of blind Imperialists who affect to believe in the permacy of the present Canadian status is extremely limited as compared with those who hold to the theory of future independence, on the one hand, and of American annexation on the other.

More cautious minds generally agree that in the infancy of development judged as ot the future must be suspended, and that it is impossible for 6,000,000 of people to say what 600,000,000 people will do. One thing seems absolutely certain, however, namely, that the very near future has in store for western Canada an enormous increase in population.

THE ALASKAN QUESTION

Thomas and Edwin Balch Search Record in St. Petersburg

Washington, July 17.—Two young men of Philadelphia, Thomas and Edwin Balch, are now in St. Petersburg, engaged in a search which, if successful, will forever end the dispute between this country and Great Britain over the Alaskan boundary and dispense with the modus vivendi of Oct. 20, 1899.

Officials of the State Department, although asserting that the Balch brothers have no recognized status with this Government admit that they are fully aware of their mission and hope they will succeed. One high official thus explained the case; matter as one would investigate any

"They are simply investigating the scientific subject to gain more knowledge. One is a geographer and the other an artist. We wish them every success and, of course, should they make any valuable discovery the United States probably would profit by it, but, really, they have no official status."

It is admitted that the Balches visited the State Department before departing on their mission, and at that time had a consultation with the officials. Since Vitus Bering, a Dane, naturalized in Russia, sailed through the strait to which he gave his name in 1740, it is known that many surveys on the peninsula have been made. Naval Captains Krenitzin and Levasheff surveyed the peninsula and chartered its coast in 1768, but the extent of their work is not known, unless their reports are still on file at the Russian capital, as the Balches hope. Further efforts in this line were made by Juan Perez in 1774, and two years later James Cook visited Alaska.

In 1793 George Vancouver was sent to Alaska by Great Britain to resurvey the coast and determine the liability of Spain for the seizure of three small British vessels the previous year, and it is probable the geographers will investigate the report of his findings before concluding their researches.

The first differences as to the exact land boundary between Alaska and the United States were settled by a convention at St. Petersburg in 1824. This was followed the next year by a convention between Russia and Great Britain whereby the Hudson Bay Company was excluded from the seacoast north of latitude 54 degrees 40 minutes, and from the then unknown territory north of the St. Elias Alps, divided by the 141st meridian west of Greenwich. Another survey was made, which lasted for six years—1826 to 1832—and in 1835 Russia established an admirable meteorological and magnetic observatory at Sitka.

KING EDWARD'S REASON FOR EARLY CROWNING

He Worries Over Prophecy That it Will Never Take Place

Physical Risk of Ceremony Less Than the Possible Consequences of This Superstition Preying on His Mind—Ceremony to Be Condensed to One Hour

London, July 17.—The cloud which hung over the English people three weeks ago was finally disipated today by the assurance of the complete recovery of King Edward and by popular enthusiasm over Lord Kitchener's return from South Africa.

The only croakers now are the superstitious, and there is a woful shaking of the heads among these. It is quite clear, they point out, that the element of good luck, which has been the best friend of the British Empire for several generations has disappeared. The King's sudden illness, Secretary Chamberlain's accident and now Lord Kitchener's arrival on a pest stricken ship furnish complete proof that fickle fortune has deserted her favorite among the nations.

It would be quite appalling, ifnot absurd to listen to the solemn forebodings of those who see in these and other recent happenings only a black outlook for the King and the country.

There was no sign of depression, however, in the behavior of the vast throngs who gave a welcome to the returning soldier and peacemaker from South Africa. It is safe to say that Lord Kitchener himself, was the only man who was depressed by the public adulation which was so unstintingly given. He is a man who genuinely hates hero worship, and he hoped that the coronation excitement would enable him to come home without such a demonstration as today's.

His Majesty's case continues to be a marvel to his physicians and his wonderful recuperative power has astonished all medical men. They regard the decision for an early date for the coronation rash, nevertheless, and argue that such a course would never be allowed in the case of a private patient. The fact is that they fail to understand that the chief reason for the King's physicians consent to an early ceremony is that this is the only cure for the superstition which is preying upon His Majesty's mind. His fear, which amounts almost to a belief, that he will never be crowned, is seriously affecting the King, and his medical advisers consider that the physical risk of the ceremony a month hence is less than the possible consequences of a longer worry over this subject.

It is now considered that the ceremony at Westminster Abbey can be condensed to an hour and the physical exertion involved reduced to a mere trifle. Immediately after the ceremony the King will go for a long stay on the royal yacht or to a quiet resort until his strength has been fully restored.

NONE WERE BRAVER THAN THE CANUCKS

Opinion of a German Who Served in Kitchener's Body Guard in South Africa

MURDER SAY THE JURY IN NINHAM CASE

The Buller Episode Again in Front — Fifty Miners Killed — Good Orders from Australia--Irish Throwing Stones.

Special to The Times.

Montreal, July 17.—Proud of being a a British subject, and proud also of being a German, Sergeant Jessel Gold the only German on Lord Kitchener's body guard during the South African campaign, arrived in Montreal today with the intention of starting out for himself in the Canadian West. Having gone to Cape Colony when quit a young man, Jessel Gold served through the Matabele campaign as a private. Shortly after the arrival of Lord Roberts in South Africa, Gold became a member of his body guard, and in a short time was, on account of gallant conduct appointed sergeant. He later on joined Lord Kitchener's body guard, and was present during all the important engagements of the war Sergeant Gold stated that while he was a German by birth, he was entirely apposed to the course of action adopted by Germany during the recent war "But there is one thing especially," he added, "that I would like to tell you and that is that during my career i South Africa I met a great many soldiers, but met none braver than the Canadian boys. For some time my regiment was stationed with the Strathcona Horse, and I can just tell you that they were among the best fighters in the country. They told me such fine stories about Canada, an especially about the great West, tha I decided that while South Africa migh be a very fine place, Canada was a still finer one."

London, July 17.—The Buller controversy was again raised by Sir Edward Grey, Bart., Liberal, in the House of Commons today on the War Office vote. Sir Edward charged the War Office officials with having acted unfairly towards General Buller, and demanded the publication of further papers. The reply of the War Secretary, Mr. Brodrich, shattered any remanants of the reputation of the dismissed general. He opposed further publications, which he declared, could not relieve General Buller of the responsibility of such mistakes as the abandonment of the guns at Colenso, and the proposals to surrender Ladysmith which, if they had been listened to, would have produced a disaster for which there was no parallel in British history. In regard to those proposals, continued Mr. Brodrickr when Gen. Buller rounded his note of despair to Gen. White he had a heliogram in his pocekt, received a fortnight before, saying that General White had provisions for 70 days and could defend Ladysmith while the food lasted. Gen. Buller's retention after Colenso and Spion Kop was inevitable under the circumstances and his appointment to command at Aldershot was simply a resumption of his former office. General Buller was a good peace commander.

TURKS USE WOMEN AND CHILDREN AS SHIELDS.

London July 18.—The Vienna correspondent of the Daily Mail says official reports received there describe a Macedonian rising in the vilayet of Monastir, European Turkey.

According to these reprots the rebels entrenched on the banks of the Ostrovo withstood the attacks of a thousand Turkish regulars and several hundredd Bashi-Basouks for a week.

Finally the Turks placed the Macedonion women and children in front, as a screen, and stormed the position of the rebels. The latter maintained a murderous fire, and many women and children were killed by their own husbands and fathers.

After dispersing the rebels the Turks massacred the population and looted and burned the houses of the inhabitants.

SAYS CLEVELAND IS DOOMED.

Cleveland, July 18.—There is great excitement among the negroes and ignorant foreigners because of a prediction by William Snyder, a negro preacher that Cleveland is to be destroyed by a cyclone and cloudburst next month. Snyder says he had a vision to that effect.

Hundreds of negroes are really preparing to leave the city during August, and children in all parts of the city are discussing the coming disaster in whispers.

The police officials have ordered all fortune-tellers and clairvoyants engaged in their business in this city to either quit their calling or leave the city.

OIL TO REPLACE COAL.

San Francisco, July 18—The steamer Mariposa which has sailed for Tahiti will use oil for fuel, instead of coal. Lieut. W. H. Winchell, chief engineer of the United States ship Boston, is making the trip to Tahiti for the purpose of reporting to the Navy Department on he value of tthe new fuel, as compared with coal.

GOOD ORDERS FROM AUSTRALIA

Ottawa, July 18.—Today's mail from Australia brought the regular monthly report from Mr. J. S. Larke, Canadian agent. He states that the Commonwealth Senate has suggested a number of tariff routines on product which Canada among other countries can supply, such as bacon and hams, butter and cheese, fruits and vegetables, meats, fish, and poultry, etc. These changes do not become operative until accepted by the House of Representatives. Some excitement was caused by the publication of a legal opinion that the Government had no power to collect duties under the Commonwealth tariff. If this view were taken advantage of it was proposed to pass through Parliament a validating measure.

Mr. Larke says some good orders had gone to Canada in general lines of trade, and he thinks many buyers who have gone to England for the coronation period will on their return personally investiagte the Canadian market. The Canadian agent reports that drought is still prevalent but rains have fallen in some of the States, which is calculated to improve the condition of affairs. Business in New Zealand is reported to be good.

New York, July 17.—Dr. Edwin Otis Hovey and Professor George Carroll Curtis, who have been in St. Vincent and Martinique, the former representing the American Museum of Natural History and the latter the United States Geological Survey, returned to New York yesterday on the Madiana of the Quebec Steamship Company's line.

In many respects their story is more thrilling than any that has yet been told, save of the destruction of St. Pierre. For nearly three weeks they made their headquarters on a small sloop anchored off Carbet, almost on the spot where the ill-fated Roraima was destroyed, and near the place where the Roddam so narrowly escaped destruction.

Time after time they ascended Mont Pelee, going so far that they were able to get good views of the interior of the crater. While they were standing upon the very rim of the crater great columns of steam and small stones were pouring out from the cone within the crater, and once a large rock, red hot, was cast over the rim not hundred yards from where they stood.

MOLTEN MUD.

One day they had just made their descent from the crater and were crossing the Riviere Blanche, when a river of molten mud poured down toward them and they reached the other side of the river just in time to escape being engulfed in its flow It was such a river of mud as this that engulfed and destroyed the Guerin sugar factory and killed 150 men a few days before St. Pierre was destroyed.

Both Dr. Hover and Professor Curtis sailed on board the Dixie with the other scientists, and are the last of the party to return. After spending a few days at Martinique they went to St. Vincent, where for two weeks they studied the volcanic phenomena of the Soufriere. One of their achievements there was the determining that the crater active in the eruption of 1812 remained quiescent during hte recent disturbance. They also found that the dividing wall between the volcano's two craters had remained in tact contrary to general report.

"By building large houses of solid masonry in which the people could flee for refuge, I think the most serious dangers from possible subsequent eruptions could be minimized both in St. Vincent and St. Pierre," said Professor Curtis last evening. "In Orange Hill I Sat. Vincent, 120 people were saved by rushing into a cellar so situated that they were protected against the volcanic blast, which is proof to me that similar protection can be provided by the authorities against future eruptions."

FIRST ASCENT.

The first ascent of Mont Pelee was on June 18, from Morne Rouge. After they had reached an altitude of 3,[illegible] feet, all hteir negro guides deserted them, and they had to make the remainder of the ascent alone. They found that the main crater is 3,[illegible] feet above the sea. They remained there two hours, with the steam boiling up all around them, and after erecting a rock cairn, in which they placed a memorandum of their trip they returned to their sloop.

But it was only to repeat the trip two days later, when they circled the crater's rim for a mile and one-half The old lake had entirely disapppeared, and in the centre of the crater is a large and rapidly growing cone.

In a third ascent they found a new summit of the mountain. That which was formerly the highest peak has fallen and left another point of the mountain, although it is more than one hundred feet lower than the former highest point. They are the only ones who reached the ytmost top of the mountain; in fact Professor Curtis may properly claim that honor, as Dr. Hovey stopped at a point fifty feet below him.

Their most interesting experience was on June 24, when they succeeded in making the ascent along the slope running directly back from St. Pierre and on their return so narrowly escaped drath in the river of mud. They found no trace of noxious gases nor lava of any kind.

Salt Lake City, Utah, July 18.—A terrific powder explosion occurred early this morning in the Daly-West mine entombing about 100 miners. Of this number 40 were killed instantly. The others escaped.

The explosino occurred in the 1,[illegible] foot level of the Daly-West mine, the powder majazines, containing about two cars of powder, blowing up. The shock was tremendous, being felt ten miles away. Its effect was so great that two horses, a mile and a half away, were killed.

Belfast, Ireland, July 18.—A report has reached here that a score of policemen and a district inspector were injured while attempting to quell a riot tonight at Newry, County Down.

A number of Orange and Nationalist combatants were also injured.

H. Bredin, a Presbyterian clergyman was knocked from his bicycle and severely injured by a blow on the head with a stone.

A NEW PREMIER FOR GREAT BRITAIN

The change in the British Government brought about by the resignation of the Premiership by Lord Salisbury, and the appointment of his nephew, A. J. Balfour as Premier, though undecided, was not altogether unexpected, nor is it likely, to cause the slightest ripple in governmental affairs, for Mr. Balfour has been for several years, the "understudy" of Lord Salisbury, and for a considerable period of time has been for long intervals the acting Premier.

It is quite probable that the change would have taken place at the coronation of King Edward, if that ceremony had not been postponed on account of the King's illness. Lord Salisbury is now an old man, upon whom the cares of office rest heavily; he is devoted to science, and no doubt looked eagerly forward to the time, now happily reached, when Great Britain, at peace with all the world and with no present complications threatening to disturb that peace, could relieve him of the cares of office without inviting a political crisis. Lord Salisbury retires with honor. He has been a notably successful Premier, with high aims, firm of purpose and yet conservative.

His successor, A. J. Balfour, the Government leader of the House of Commons, possesses many of his characteristics. He also is conservative, and by no means weak. He is a man of high culture, devoted to literature, as Salisbury has been to science. From the fact that he has been for years the close friend and associate of Lord Salisbury, and at times the acting Premier, it may be inferred that no political changes or changes of foreign policy will follow his elevation to the Premiership. He will presumably remain the leader in the House of Commons, but there will be a vacancy in the leadership of the House of Lords, to be filled probably by the Duke of Devonshire, Lord President of the Council. He was formerly a Liberal, and as Lord Hartington, served in Gladstone's Cabinet of 1880, but refused to enter the latter's Home Rule Cabinet in 1886, and became the leader of the Union Liberalists, drifting gradually into the support of Lord Salisbury and finally accepting office in the latter's Cabinet.

The Duke of Devonshire is a poor speaker and a man who prefers leisure to hard work, but as debates of importance are rare in the upper house, he would not often be called upon to make more than an official statement. There is, of course, a possibility that Balfour may be raised to a peerage at the coronation of the King, in which case the vacant leadership of the House of Commons would probably fall to Joseph Chamberlain.

Premier Balfour is a relatively young man, being only 54 years of age, and in the present condition of political parties in England may be expected to hold the reins of powers for several years to come. A few years ago he wrote in favor of international bimetallism, but his views on that subject are not likely to have any effect upon his administration to the government.

BLOOD THIRST IN WAR TIME

In a current magazine article Dr. H. C. Rowland, who was assistant surgeon in the army of the Philippines, explains from the medical point of view how it is that American officers and soldiers can murder and torture natives. Chronic nostalgia, or home-sickness was one of the most serious disorders which he found among the men, frequently resulting in acute dementia. One sergeant suddenly became insane, fired upon his own comrades, and then deserted to the Filipinos. Two days later he returned, but confused and depressed. A corporal suddenly left his hut, sprang upon an innocent native, and beat him unmercifully until overpowered by ten fellow soldiers. He was a raving maniac. Still another reputable soldier was caught in the act of murdering a Filipino. An officer who was ordered to the hospital raged and threatened to kill the medical officer. Quantities of such cases might be cited, the doctor declares, all going to prove that under certain unaccustomed conditions it is possible for men to behave in a manner entirely foreign to all pre-natal impulse, as the result of unusual influences upon which they have no gauge. Again, when one or more of a troop wander away from the column during a "hike" or march, and are killed by the natives, and their bodies mutilated, the horror of the sight, the hardships of the march, and all their surroundings make the survivors "crave slaughter more than food or sleep," leading them to wreak vengeance upon the first captives they take.

A MINISTER ON MINISTERS

We had a vague idea that the men and women who get the longest holidays are not always the ones who need them most, but we should not have dared to dispute the theory that ministers were overworked during ten or eleven months in the year. Yet Rev. Dr. Floyd Tomkins of Philadelphia, comes forward with the statement that "there is no more reason why a minister should be worn out than there is why a merchant should be worn out. It is an exploded idea that they work much harder than other men. With rare exceptions, they do not. Their working hours are shorter; they are more at liberty in arranging the disposition of their time; they are free from much financial worry. A minister who pities himself, and wishes others to pity him, can never be successful." Dr. Tomkins says it is true that the nervous energy of a minister has great demands made upon it and is upon a constant strain. But that is no reason why he should be constantly worried about himself, and wondering whether he can do this or go there, and saying to himself and to others that he is "tired" "Ministers are such chronically tired people that they become tiresome," said a bright hostess. She was not far astray. And so young people, particularly young men, lose confidence, lose respect, lose regard for the parson.

BRITISH PROFESSOR

Says That American Universities Cannot Yet Equal Oxford

Special to The Times.

New York, July 14.—After a trip of inspection through a number of American universities, Professor R. D. Redmayne of Birmingham, Eng., who is in this city said:

"I could not fail to be struck with the fact that all your great institutions of learning are just lacking in that indefinable something that contributes so much to making Oxford what it is. Apart removed a long way from the practical life of the world, or seemingly so apart, the community of Oxford scholars has given to the place priceless heritage. We all know how, in the course of time, their influence has filtered out the world and affected mens thoughts and ideas, has become potent in shaping history. But when I saw the stamp of men you have in your universities and the stamp of young men they are turning out, I became convinced that your institutions too, will have in time this potent and precious atmosphere and will treasure names like those of Arnold and Newman and the rest. The secret for you is the secret of the Oxford lawns as told by Gardiner to the rich American. Still I am glad that the new scholarships will enable you to send us each year so many men to feel this atmosphere and carry back the word of it."

The Despot of Vienna.

The citizen of Vienna who does not wish to be out of pocket must keep early hours, for after ten o'clock he is taxed on entering his own house, or, for the matter of that, any house. The "sperrgeld," or door-opening tax, is peculiar to Vienna, as the London "Express" explains. The entire population of that city, numbering nearly two millions, are practically imprisoned in their houses from ten o'clock in the evening until six the next morning. They can go in or out only by paying at least four cents to the janitor or "house-master," as he is called.

Vienna is built on the "flat" or apartment-house plan. Millionaires and working people alike live in houses of this description. The houses are large, having five or six floors, with four flats on a floor, so that it is not unusual to find a hundred persons living under one roof. There is one common entrance from the street, and after ten o'clock at night this door is bolted and barred. From ten until twelve all who go in or out must pay four cents. After twelve the charge is doubled.

The tax must be paid every time one passes through the doorway, without exception. If a man has occasion to go in and out half a dozen times, he must pay every time. One who has dined with a friend must, if he stay late, pay four cents to get out of his friend's house, and four more to get into his own. A telegram in the night necessitates the payment of the tax before the boy can enter.

The house-master also collects and keeps duplicate copies of the forms on which every individual in the house must report to the police his age, birthplace and religion, his exact occupation, and other personal details which the Austrian authorities insist upon knowing. Nor does the power of this important personage end even here. From the little guard-room which he occupies at the foot of the stairs he sees every one who goes in or out. He ascertains with amazing accuracy the amount of each tenant's income, the events of his family life, and the character of his visitors. His far-reaching power enables him to terrorise every servant in the house into entering his intelligence department, and thus he spies on the innermost life of the subjects in his five-storey kingdom.

In some cases the house-master is more powerful than in others. An English resident was obliged to move from an apartment that he particularly liked because he could not venture to speak with any degree of sharpness to the man at the door, even when the man was remiss in his duties. The flat was owned by a railway belonging to the State. This made the house-master a State official, an insult to whom is a very serious offence in Vienna. A reprimand for delaying letters would be construed into an insult, and the Englishman deemed it wise to move to other quarters.

Thousands of people in Vienna live in such terror of the house-master that, it is said, they never make an apple-tart without giving him half.

Buried by a Cougar.

A hunter who was trailing after bear meat in British Columbia reports to the "Western Sportsman" an experience which he calls a "narrow graze." If the incident happened as the hunter tells it, it was indeed a narrow graze; but one cannot help suspecting that some of the invigorating ozone of the North-West has got into the story. Nevertheless, it is worth hearing.

"It was warm and dry, and along in the middle of the afternoon I began to pine for rest and a pipe. It was all quiet and no traces of game, and so when I'd had a comfortable smoke I stretched out for a nap.

"It must have been an hour later that I woke up and found myself covered with two feet of leaves snug as the babes in the wood. I was all tucked in that cosy that nobody else could have done it but a cougar, and most likely a female cougar at that. It occurred to me with some force that I'd been filed away for future reference, and that I hadn't waked up any too soon. It didn't soothe me to figure on that cougar stowing me away as a dog hides a bone.

"It seemed that the best thing for me to do was to countermine that cougar's mine, as it were. So I hunted up a log about my size and covered it with the leaves—a nice fat hump on the ground. Then I shinned a tree close by, assuring myself beyond any doubts or peradventures that nobody had meddled with the working of my repeater.

"The cougar came in such a short time as to show how fortunate it was that I had waked up when I did, and with her, as I had calculated, were a choice lot of young ones. She had left a dinner located and had been off to get her family.

"Well, that cougar circled around the pile of leaves for a matter of minutes, crouching and picking a nice select place to spring from. When she got satisfied and made the leap she went through the air tremendous, throwing the leaves in a whirlwind and scratching and snarling. It was some of a shock when she found the log, but she didn't display any disappointment. She just took the scent and came to the foot of my tree and looked up, real venomous.

"It seemed to her an awkward job to handle, I having my gun ready so, and the cougar had an inspiration. She went to a tree about ten feet away and started to go up. She was after that meal and not to be discouraged by any trifles. It was her idea to climb up above me on the other tree and then bring me down with a flying leap.

"I didn't lose any more time with experiments or speculations, but let her have it the first time she came round the tree. The ball went through her jaw and breast, and the varmint went to the ground. The young ones were running around, and I knocked them over, too, with the gun.

"Since then I haven't gone to sleep in the woods so careless and casual like."

"Have the letters been duly examined by the hand-writing expert?" "Yes, your honor." "Very well, let the handwriting expert now be examined by the insanity expert."—"Ohio State Journal."

The story is told of the present Archbishop of Canterbury that, upon a candidate for ordination essaying to read a chapter of the Bible before him to test his elocutionary powers, he was stopped with the abrupt comment, "Ye're inaudible!" "But, my lord," said the discomfited youth, "I've read the lesson in a big church, and been told that every word could be heard." "Who told ye—a lady? Are ye engaged to her?" The candidate owned the soft impeachment. "Then, don't believe a word she says—until ye're married to her," was the magnanimous reply.

THE GREGORY BUELL CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING and MILLING COMPANY

Whose Entire Plant is Now Under Roof. of CENTRAL CITY, COLORADO PRODUCTION OF 200 TONS PER DAY

185 Tons Milling Ore, $12.00, Net $10.00.............................$1,850
15 Tons Smelting Ore, average $80.00 (less transportation and smelting charges $10.00, $70.00 being low average....Profit $1,050

or $2 900 PER DAY, 350 DAYS

This is over 21 per cent. on the capital $5,000,000 at par, and at present selling price of 75 cents per share amounts to over 27 per cent. The above is one-third of the capacity. Full capacity—600 tons in 24 hours—would make these figures three times as great. Total amount to be raised fully guaranteed. This investment upon these terms is worthy the careful consideration of all those having sums to invest. WRITE FOR PROSPECTUS.

Stock Par Value $1 00 Now Selling at 75 Cents

We trust that you will appreciate the fact that THE GREGORY BUELL CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING and MILLING COMPANG is a going concern, the properties having produced $2,000,000 in the past under unfavorable circumstances. The present consolidation, by operating fourteen mines through one shaft, makes possible an enormous saving in operating expenses doing away with thirteen engineers, firemen, etc., a great reduction in fuel and many other points too numerous to mention.

With the vast additional ore bodies now being developed by tunnels and cross-cuts, when completed, assures the management that, on a calculation based on one-third of their capacity, they can earn 23 PER CENT. per annum upon the investment.

Bear in mind that the mill is built, a large part of the machinery is in place and that the Company is absolutely free from all debt. We consider this, after a most careful examination by us, a gilt-edge investment. We cannot recommend this too highly, and trust that you may appreciate the advantages as we do.

COPPER AT THREE AND HALF CENTS A POUND

George A. Treadwell Mining Company

27 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK. JEROME, ARIZONA.

Capital - - - - $3,000,000.

PAR VALUE OF SHARES $10.

In a suit recently tried in the New York courts it was proved from the books of the United Verde Copper Company and the sworn testimony of the bookkeepers that the cost to that company of producing copper was only three and a half cents a pound, not counting the gold and silver values, which—allowed for—reduced the cost to a still lower figure.

Nowhere outside the Verde Copper Belt in Yavapai County, Arizona, is copper produced in quantities for less than twice this cost.

The United Verde has about two hundred acres on the north end of the Belt and the George A. Treadwell Company has several times as much in the central and southern parts of the Belt. The conditions along the whole Belt are entirely similar. We already have three mines developed—the Cliff, Brookshire and Iron Queen—one of which, the Cliff, seems to be larger and better than the United Verde, and the other two at least approach it in magnitude and value, while we have several others, including Badger, Pastime, Green Monster and Spoke and Stonewall, which, though less developed, are equally promising.

Professor Treadwell believes we have at least half a dozen United Verdes within the broad and extensive limits of our holdings.

As soon as our smelter plant which is now in process of erection, is completed, we can certainly produce copper as cheap as our rich neighbor on the north.

The United Verde for several years has produced one-tenth the copper of the world. When our plants are fully installed we expect the Verde Belt to produce one-half the copper of the world, and the George A. Treadwell Mining Company will be prepared to do more than its full share.

Before investing in copper in unproved localities, consider the stock of the George A Treadwell Mining Company, named after the great pioneer and explorer of the Verde Belt and owning the largest and best aggregation of properties on it.

The price of the stock is $4 a share. Make checks payable to The order of the company and send them to 27 William Street New York

DROPPED DEAD.

Alfred Y Hopkins Expires While at Work at the Cereal Company

Alfred Y. Hopkins employed at the Cereal Company, dropped dead at his work this morning about 8 o'clock, from heart disease. While stooping down to pick up a piece of timber he reeled over and expired instantly. Dr. McGrath was summoned and pronounced death due to heart disease. The remains were conveyed to the family residence, No. 211 Park street. No inquest will be held.

The deceased man had only started to work for the Cereal Co. a few days ago, and had made no complaints of feeling unwell.

The deceased was a middle aged gentleman and leaves a grown up family to mourn his sudden demise. He is highly spoken of by all who knew him and was generally looked upon as honest and industrious.

Mr. W. E. Hopkins, of the Canadian General Electrical Co., and Miss Josephine, school teacher and Miss Eva K., assistant bookkeeper for M. Carton, are daughters of the deceased.

THE GREAT STRIKE IS NOW FOREMOST

The Big Convention Meets To-Day to Decide the Matter

"TO STRIKE OR NOT TO STRIKE"

That Will Be The Question—It is Thought That Peace May Prevail—If a General Strike Be Ordered Business Will Become Paralyzed

Special to The Times.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 16.—"To strike or not to strike?" This is the vital question to settle which delegates are pouring into Indianapolis from almost every coal mining district of the country, in readiness for the great convention which assembles tomorrow in response to the recent call of President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers of America. If the convention reaches an affirmative decision it will mean, so say the official of the miners' organization, that 300,000 men will lay down their picks, not to resume work until their brethren in the anthracite field of Pennsylvania have obtained their demands. A decision not to strike will mean at the very least the breaking of the back-bone of the miners' struggle in Pennsylvania and a serious blow to organized labor in general.

In the settlement of this "lady or the tiger" question there is a conservative element among the union miners that is strongly pronounced in favor of the convention taking a compromise course. It would be better say the leaders of this element, for the convention not to declare a strike outright, but to delegate to the executive board of the United Mine Workers the power to call out the men on general strike at their discretion. This, it is pointed out, would give the advantage of a delay before the final card is played, while at the same time not detracting from the moral support given by the unions throughout the country to the Pennsylvania strikers. It is further argued in support of this course that it would help greatly the financial end of the struggle as it would enable the soft coal miners still at work to devote a large part of their earnings to the anthracite strikers and enable the latter to continue their strike indefinitely or until a successful issue was reached. Although President Mitchell has so far refrained from expressing an opinion on the subject of the convention and the proper course for it to pursue, it is said by those intimately associated with him that he would prefer to have the convention delegate to the executive board the power to call the strike, rather than have the issue brought to a climax at once.

Meanwhile the delegates are pouring into Indianapolis from all directions, and about the headquarters of the United Mine Workers they are to be seen in groups today discussing the situation the latest news from the Pennsylvania field and the probable outcome of the struggle. For the most part they are extremely reticent so far as public utterances are concerned, and it is a difficult matter to ascertain how they stand with regard to the main question. Enough can be gleaned, however, to warrant the forecast that the convention will not declare a strike by an overwhelming majority, and if a strike is called at all, it will be in the face of considerable opposition. Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, and Iowa will hold the majority of the delegates. In three of these States at least satisfactory conditions prevail at present. The men are working under a yearly agreement and are enjoying concessions which it has taken years for them to gain. Such contracts, it may readily be believed, are not to be lightly broken. Michigan, Kansas, Kentucky, Missouri, Tennessee and one or two other states will be represented in the convention. It is not known exactly how their delegates stand on the strike question, but it is unlikely that their numerical strength will be sufficient to influence the decision to any great extent. The States of Maryland, Colorado, Washington, Montana, Indian Territory, Arkansas, New Mexico and Texas, and one-half the soft coal district of Pennsylvania, are not organized, but there are small unions among them, and some have sent delegates to the convention.

When the convention assembles in Tomlinson hall at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning and the roll is called by Secretary Wilson, it will be answered by as fine a body of men as ever attended a labor gathering. Fifteen hundred in number, they represent the brains and sinew of the miners' unions. While undoubtedly there are agitators among them, for the most part they appear to be a conservative lot of men. Whatever decision is reached it will be after intelligent discussion of the question from every viewpoint.

The Ontario Power Company, which has already the privilege of feeding a plant at Niagara Falls by diverting water from the Welland River, down the height of land into the Niagara River, has made application to the Government for an additional system of power, whereby water shall be diverted from the Niagara River by conduits to a power house below the Falls. A supplementary agreement prepared provides that the company shall pay a rental of $30,000 a year instead of $15,000, and a certain rate per electrical horse power per annum by the following scale: From 20,000 h. p. to 30,000 h. p., $1; from 30,000 h. p. to 40,000 h. p., 75 cents; over 40,000 h. p., 50 cents. This schedule, it is stated, by way of illustration, would produce a rental of $47,750 per year in case 40,000 h. p. were developed. The Canadian Niagara Power Company, which is constructing a plant to utilize the power of the Falls on practically the same territory, is opposing the application. In the meantime, the residents of the Niagara Peninsula are awaiting some actual developments.

An army of 50,000 men is to be left as "a garrison" in South Africa for the present. Before the war 12,000 men was all the "garrison" necessary.

THE GIRL OF THE PEOPLE

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson.

me-aged city knight whom she had married when she was eighteen had considerately died three years later, leaving his fortune all to her. She was now five-and-twenty, with a beautiful house in Park lane, and more money than she could well know what to do with. I had met her so often during my butterfly days that it seemed strange I had never met the man she apparently delighted to honor. But, then, those butterfly days had been so few; and Mrs. Jennett declared that her hero went as seldom as possible into society.

Somehow, I did not like to think of Lady Feo Ringwood as a friend of John Bourke's; and the sight of her portrait in his study brought me so nearly into touch with old times that I felt vaguely disturbed. I had disappeared from Lady Feo's set for ever; and I did not relish the thought of being discovered, the miserable secret of my Easel street connections rooted up, perhaps, and discussed as a spicy bit of scandal in drawing-rooms.

While I lay with the photograph in my hand, there was a ring at the door-bell and a light tapping of the knocker.

"That's Mr. Bourke, I'm sure, come to enquire how you are!" exclaimed Mrs. Jennett, jumping up from her chair. "He won't use his key and walk in, because he says the house is yours and mine, not his at all for the present. I'll just run and let him in myself."

Two minutes later and she was back again, peeping through a crack of the door. "It was Mr. Bourke," she announced. "He's delighted to hear that you're downstairs, feeling better; and he'd be glad to see you for a few moments if you are quite up to it. But you are not to say 'Yes' otherwise; for he will come back to-morrow."

"Please tell him I shall be pleased to see him," I replied, with an attempt at indifference of tone; but in reality I was curiously excited. Mrs. Jennett disappeared; and when Mr. Bourke came she was not with him.

The blood rushed up to my face as I saw his eyes fall upon the tea-gown and brighten into a smile of pleasure. I had almost forgotten it for the moment, but his look brought back all my resentment.

"I had to wear it," I cried out, like a child, "or poor Mrs. Jennett would have been hurt. But I am vexed and grieved. You had no right to buy this gown for me."

He blushed boyishly, the sudden color and look of embarrassment making his grave face appear very young. "Oh, please don't say that!" he exclaimed, coming impulsively closer to the deck-chair which was my throne, then checking himself abruptly. "I'd rather have done anything than vex you. I didn't want you to know. I thought Mrs. Jennett would have managed without telling you."

"I must forgive you, since I am sure you meant to be so kind," I said more gently "At least, I will, if you'll tell me one thing."

"I can almost promise, for such a bribe, that I will."

"Why are you suddenly so different from what you were a few nights ago, when you came to me at the bridge? You are more like what I remember of you the first time."

"Thank you for remembering at all. But that is another thing I must ask you to forgive me for; the way I behaved to you at Waterloo Bridge. It was the only thing to do, you know—to be firm and stern. But it was not what was in my heart. I wonder if I dare tell you what was really there?"

I looked up at him half-startled. But I said: "Yes, tell me." And I made a sign that he should sit down in the chair left not far off from my side by Mrs. Jennett.

"It may be presumptuous for a man like me to pity a woman like you," he began, slowly, even shyly. "But I did pity you then, with an infinite pity. If I had been your brother I could not have felt greater sorrow and tenderness. I thought how you must have suffered, and it seemed cruel that you should have to suffer. You are almost a child still, you see, and I had thought of you so many times after that first meeting at the theater, as a girl born to happiness and good fortune. I shall never forget how I felt when you turned your face so—as I held you back from that mad plunge, and saw—it was you. I could not believe my eyes for a moment."

"Nor I mine," I said, softly. "It seemed very strange that you should come to my rescue for the second time."

"Do you forgive me for what must have seemed like harshness and lack of sympathy?" he asked.

"There's nothing to forgive. Only everything to thank you for."

"Then you do thank me?" he questioned, eagerly. "You aren't sorry now that I forced you back to life?"

"I ought to be sorry," I said. "Nothing is changed. I have as little to live for as I had then, as little chance of redeeming miserable failures. Yet—I suppose because I'm young and the love of life is instinctive, now that—that there's sunshine, and I'm not faint with hunger and dropping with weariness—I can't feel all sorry."

"Good heavens! You were hungry!" he ejaculated in an odd voice. "How terrible—how unbelievable!"

I could not help laughing, though I really did not feel like laughing at all. "Not so very terrible to be hungry," I returned. "But now, looking back upon that night, the blackest I ever knew, I think, perhaps, if I hadn't been physically so weak I might have been morally stronger. Of course, it was cowardly to do what I meant to do, though I'd just persuaded myself that it wasn't—when you came. I hope that I shall never be so wicked again. And I shall not even think of it, if only I can get work. I did try so hard before, but I had no luck. Maybe you will give me a little good advice how to find it."

He looked me earnestly in the face.

"I didn't dream it was that kind of trouble," he said. And I thought that, for some reason, his eyes expressed relief.

"I suppose not," I rejoined, with a smile that was not very gay. "When you saw me first I didn't appear exactly a candidate for the workhouse, but I was, even then, though I didn't know it myself. And the other night—well, that frock and hat were made before I realized that I was a beggar."

Suddenly, when I had gone so far, I was overcome with an irresistible desire to tell him my whole story—that part of it which concerned myself alone. I had not intended, even a moment beforehand, to confide in John Bourke or anyone else; but his eyes dwelt on me with a yearning look, and the words spoke themselves.

I told him my name, which he had not known before; that I had thought myself Sheila Cope, and found that I was Jenny Harland, for Harland, I had learnt, was my own father's name. I told John Bourke that Lady Cope had died on the very night when I had seen him first. That I had lost my home, and the money which would have come to me if I had really been Lady Cope's daughter. I even went faltering on, and to my own surprise was presently describing Easel street, my mother, Fan and Totsey, and Tom Stephens, Fan's lover. I said little of Sir Roger Cope or his attitude towards me, save that he had inherited everything; but when my companion spoke at last, it was to begin with Roger Cope.

"Don't think me very impatient," he said, having heard me to the end without interruption; "I don't speak out of idle curiosity. But—didn't Sir Roger Cope want you to keep your old home—only in a way to which you couldn't consent?"

"Yes," I rather reluctantly admitted.

"And you ran away from him, and from everything? And he didn't write to you, or come to see you though he knew your address?"

"He came the very day I left Easel street. I suppose you'll think I'm always running away?" I said this laughing, and no prophetic instinct brought the tears instead.

"He came to make the same offer again?"

I nodded.

"Do you like Sir Roger Cope?" abruptly.

"No-o. I never did. Though I could not have explained why till lately."

"Well, then, perhaps you won't mind my telling you what has struck me. I don't know Sir Roger Cope personally, but I know of him. He is popular, I fancy, in his own set; and he is called clever in his profession. But he has shown the iron hand under the velvet in his treatment of you. I heard that he had come into a fortune through the death of a relative, and that a girl who had believed herself the heiress had gone abroad to live, on an allowance made by him. No doubt that's the version which has been given out, for the benefit of those who knew you. And I, not knowing the name of the ladies I had very impertinently followed from the Lyceum, didn't for an instant associate the story with you. Now I believe that Roger Cope is even a more unscrupulous man than you have thought him. Did you connect your failure at the employment agencies in any way with him?"

"No," I responded in surprise.

"Well, I do. I think it is not at all unlikely that he paid some person to watch your movements, report to him, and prejudice the minds of the agents you had applied to against you with some falsehood."

"What object could he have had for being so gratuitously cruel?" I cried.

"I may be doing the man a hideous injustice," said John Bourke, "but the object which he might have had is easy enough for anyone except an unsuspecting young girl to see. He wanted you to marry him; you refused. He, indirectly, sent you away to a place where he knew you would meet with humiliations and deprivations beyond anything you had experienced. Then he might have resolved to turn the screw tighter and prevent your escaping to more endurable surroundings."

"I did suspect that he had waited before coming to see me until I should have grown nearly desperate. But I never thought of the other part. Even now it sounds too horrid to be possible."

"I hope it is not possible," said Mr. Bourke.

"Surely you don't suggest that he hired the woman to pick my pocket and add almost the last feather to my burden?"

"No, I stopped short at that in my accusations. But it isn't beyond believing if he paid certain persons to keep an eye on you."

"If that be true, thank heaven he must have lost sight of me now," I said.

"He shall not find you again if I can help it. Not while you desire to keep out of his way. And as for work, you shall have it, I promise you, as soon as you are strong enough. Already, if you will forgive me again, I've thought of a plan, and I'll risk offending you by proposing it."

"I shall be grateful, not offended, whatever it may be. Don't keep me in suspense."

"Well, how should you like to learn

NORWICH RESIDENTS REFUSE VACCINATION

Interesting Developments are Expected.

Woodstock, July 14.—Owing to the prevalence of smallpox in the village of Norwich, the Board of Health decided that every one of the village should be vaccinated, and accordingly an order was issued calling for compulsory vaccination. In Norwich, however, there are many persons who are opposed to this means of preventing smallpox, and while about one-half the population acquiesced in the order of the health officials these anti-vaccinationists refused to go through the ordeal, declaring that it was injurious to good health to be vaccinated at this time of the year.

As a result of the stand assumed by these persons ther epromises to be interesting developments. The health authorities determined to have their mandate observed, called on the Government health inspector to come up from Toronto and assist them. Dr. Hodges arrived in the village Friday, but still the anti-vaccination party refused to yield. The only thing for the health officials to do was to prosecute everyone who refuses to comply with their request.

From present appearances those unfavorable to the vaccination are going to fight the matter out to the bitter end. Saturday a delegation was in Woodstock, where the neighbors interviewed a firm of lawyers and laid their case before them.

THE GAYNOR-GREENE CASE

Canada does not want the alleged criminals from the United States who are charged with embezzling $2,000,000 of government funds, which ought to have been spent on the harbor of Savannah, Ga. It would most willingly part with them. But Messrs. Gaynor and Greene, the persons in question must be lawfully extradited. They came first to Quebec, were thence kidnapped to Montreal, but are now sent back to Quebec under habeas corpus, where the legal proceedings for their extradition must go on.

The point of interest for Canada is that the American officer of the Department of Justice has made a report to his government that the law firms retained by the accused men is composed of high officials in Canada, who are using their political influence to thwart extradition proceedings. On this plea representations have been made to the British embassy at Washington. The law firms retained include the Minister of Justice of the Dominion, the Premier of Quebec, the son of the Deputy Attorney-General of the same province, and the son of Quebec's extradition commissioner.

It is too early to admit any form of supposition that the accusations of using undue influence upon the court of justice has any truth at the back of it. If it can be shown, then Canadians will make a special reckoning with the officials who thus abuse their public trust. But, first of all, the case of Messrs. Gaynor and Greene will have to rest upon its own merits.

WEDDING FORMS AND DAINTY CARDS

THE pearly, white translucent paper of the Times wedding invitations is a rich background for the velvety black ink impression of the suberb printing.

While the paper is specially imported, the remainder of the work is done in the Times Job Rooms.

The uniquely attractive results will be gladly shown to those desiring wedding forms printed.

THE MAN WITH A GRAFT

Written in an idle moment by an esteemed contributor to this great family journal, who says

"Life is real and life is earnest,
And the man is lost who shirks;
But the fellow starts the doings
In the bank who takes the works.

"Tell me not in mournful numbers
How to live life as I should;
Life consists in doing people—
When you do them do them good.

"Dust thou art, to dust returnest,
Was not spoken of the soul.
It it was it matters little,
If we only make a roll.

"Be not like dumb, driven cattle—
If you are you will be chaffed.
Get into the gay procession—
Cultivate some easy graft.

"Every minute yields a sucker—
"Tis a statement that is plain;
And if the bait is often freshened,
All the old ones bite again."

The Day of Miracles not Past

A Toronto Star reporter investigated the case of Mr. George Warner, and found that after thirteen years of almost total deafness, he had been cured by inhaling Catarrhozone.

This proves that where Catarrhozone treatment is employed, impaired hearing and deafness can be cured. Catarrhozone always brings quick relief, and is warranted to give lasting satisfaction. All sufferers from impaired hearing, deafness, head noises, and ringing in the ears, are advised to inhale Catarrhozone and derive the great benefit it is capable of affording. MAJOR MILLER TO TAKE COMMAND.

Retirement of Col. Edwards from the 57th Regiment

Lieut-Col. E. B. Edwards, the commanding officer of the 57th Regiment has sent his resignation to the Militia Department at Ottawa. Col. Edwards reasons assigned for this action were that he was desirous of seeing Major Miller command the regiment before he reached the age limit, and, secondly, he found it impossible to give the required time to both his militia and professional duties.

Col. Edward's action is most praiseworthy, and will no doubt be accepted by the Department. His retirement will be much regretted by the officers alike.

Major Miller, who will be promoted, has been identified with the force for over 30 years, beginning as a private in the band, in which he played a cornet.

By the promotion of Major Miller Major Stevenson will become Senior Major, and the Senior Company Officer, Capt. L. M. Hayes, will be made Junior Major.

THE BAND CONTROVERSY

Mr. J. B. McWilliams Gives Orangemen's Version of the Difficulty

Mr. J. B. McWilliams was seen yesterday by The Times in regard to the trouble between the 57th Regimental Band and the Orangemen. Mr. McWilliams said: "I was one of the committee that interviewed the band in regard to having them accompany the local Orange Lodges to Lindsay on the 12th of July. They asked $120 and expenses. We told them we would not give them more that $60 and expenses, but later I offered to put up $10 additional to this amount myself. Mr. Mein, on behalf, of the band, then offered to go for $82.50 and expenses, for 30 men, but he was again told that $60 was the limit the Orangemen would go in their price, and I myself did not feel disposed to add more than $10 to this amount. The negotiations with the 57th Regimental Band ended at this point and the Orangemen began to look elsewhere for a musical organisation."

Mr. McWilliams further says that he has always been a subscriber to the funds of the band, and he has nothing against the organization. The present unpleasantness was merely a matter of finance.

PETERBORO'S MANY NATURAL ADVANTAGES

What a Lindsay Paper Fears from Railway Construction

The Lindsay Watchman-Warder, in commenting on Judge Dean's letter letter which appeared in The Times a few days ago, says:

"A subject of great interest and importance was opened by Judge Dean's recent letter on the peril to Lindsay's northern trade. Briefly stated, the Judge's proposition is that by an electric railway through Bobcaygeon to Minden, the town of Peterboro will capture the trade of the region to the north of Lindsay; that because it has no natural power to attract new industries, Lindsay is largely dependent on the trade of the territory that Peterboro is to tap; and that with that trade gone and no new industries to take its place, Lindsay must dwindle into oblivion, while the successful rival who has filched her trade shall, by that and her great reservoirs of available power wax steadily mightier and from a position of regal supremacy look pityingly, if not with scorn, upon her decadent sister burg in Victoria county. Nor does the Judge aim simply to utter a dirge or compose a death-knell. He writes like a man with a purpose and that purpose is not to forecast calamity but to proclaim a means of escape. That means is the Lindsay, Bobcaygeon and Pontypool railway. With that line connecting this town and Bobcaygeon, the Judge believes our north country would be safe from Peterboro's invasion.

"The Judge points out a possibility that it would be unfortunate and slow-witted for the people of this town to overlook. It has never been so thoroughly outlined before, and by bringing it to the public attention in such a dramatic fashion the Judge has certainly done the public a good service. In so far as his letter tends to rouse the people of Lindsay to do what can be done for their town, we shall gladly reinforce it.

"Last, however, under the Judge's vivid presentation of impending woes, any citizen should be moved to cast away his confidence, and the faith that is in him, we venture to point out that at Fenelon Falls there is no mean power, already harnessed to this town, and that Burleigh power is quite as available for us as for Peterboro. With modern means of transmitting lectric energy, the cataracts of a continent are being brought nigh. The difficulties of distance are being reduced to the cost of a copper wire.

"Moreover, Peterboro's electric railway across the north country has its difficulties. Until Bobcaygeon is reached it will do us little harm. Beyond that it will soon encounter Lindsay's northern railway service. When winter began to lay its rigid injunctions upon the operations of that electric road, and when the motor car but struggled up the icy hill to plunge into fathomless snows in the dale, it is more than likely that the traffic would so fall off as to discourage even the once-a-week trip to which the service would be reduced by the exigencies of the route.

"However, it is beyond question that the industries of this town must shortly undergo a change, and that if trade is to come to Lindsay there must be facilities for bringing it here. There is some cause for the Judge's startling question regarding Lindsay's paralysis.

"His letter is a timely challenge to our enterprise, a thrilling bugle note that has fallen upon startled ears and awakened echoes that will not

MR. GOWLAND'S INVENTION

He Has Made an Electric Meter that Beats the World

Mr. George L. Gowland, of the Gowland Company, Toronto, was in town yesterday, and left in company with Mr. J. H. McClellan for Ottawa. Mr. Gowland has now secured his patents in the United States and Canada on the Recording Watt Meter and also his Prepayment Watt Meter, and has started to manufacture for the market. He can now turn out thirty meters per day. There are very strong financial men in Montreal, Kingston and Pembroke, negotiating for the purchase of the Canadian patents, and they propose to form a stock company with a capital of $500,000, to manufacture meters, transformers and electric motors.

The Times heartily congratulates Mr. Gowland on his success, and we are proud to say that he hails from Peterborough. These are the first electric meters invented by a Canadian, and no doubt through them Canada will be advertised.

INDIAN RIVER.

—Mr. Maurice O'Brien, wife and family, who has been visiting friends in this locality, left for their home in North Dakota on Thursday last.

Mr. P. McNulty, of Asphodel, visited friends here on Sunday last.

—Mr. P. Torpey shipped a car load of hogs from here on Thursday last.

—Mr. V. McFadden, of Peterborough, and W. McCarthy, of Rochester, were visiting Michael O'Leary for a few days. They say they learned a great deal about fishing and farming. On Sunday evening they went fishing, but their luck was bad. They caught two suckers, and kept them alive in boiling water till midnight. On Monday Mr. McFadden cut ten acres hay.

TESTING PROF. KOCH'S THEORY.

Dr. Garnault Has Not Yet Suffered Ill Effects From Inoculation

Paris, July 16.—Dr. Garnault, who three weeks ago inoculated himself with bovine tuberculosis in order to test Prof. Koch's theory, that the disease cannot be communicated from animals to man, has up to the present suffered no ill results, although the arm which was inoculated apppears to be developing symptoms of the disease. The doctor works as usual, his appetite is good, his sleep sound, and his healthy and robust appearance is unchanged.

If, at the expiration of two months, tuberculosis does not declare itself he will repeat the experiment by cutting into the flesh and laying the poisonous matter under the skin. The present application of the poisonous matter was to a spot on the arm which was prepared by means of a blister.

FRED LEE RICE HANGED YESTERDAY MORNING

The Final Act of a Dismissal Tragedy--Body to Be Given to Relatives of Rice

FRED LEE RICE DIED WITHOUT A CONFESSION.

Rev. Robert Hall, Who Attended the Murderer of Constable Boyd, Does Not Believe That He Fired the Fatal Shot

Special to The Times.

Toronto, July 18—Frederick Lee Rice, the last of the gang of three safe-blowers and murderers who came over from the United States in May, 1901, to carry on criminal operations in this country was hanged at the jail this morning, within half a mile of the spot where he committed the deed for which his life was forfeited. He died silent, with a little flag of Stars and Stripes and a bunch of carnations pinned to the lapel of his coat. The grim ceremony began at 8 o'clock sharp, lasted but a few minutes and was performed expeditiously by the executioner Radcilve. The number of spectators was not large, not exceeding forty-five all told, the majority of them being jail and county officials, medical or newspaper men. The body was handed over to Undertaker A. W. Miles, of College street, for burial at Champaigne, Illinois, and the special outside guard, which had been on duty for 207 nights to prevent any possibility of rescue by friends has been withdrawn.

WAS PINIONED.

Rice's arms had been strapped firmly to his sides by Radcilve before he left the corridor. The prisoner's face was ashy pale, but he walked with fair steadiness, though slowly, across the yard and up the stout plank steps. Immediately Radcilve placed him on the trap with his face to the east. Mr. Hall opened a Bible and began to read that well-known chapter in which occurs the verse: "In my Father's house are many mansions." The reading was brief. Radcilve speedily placed the black cap over Rice's head and adjusted the noose. Then the ministers began the recital of the Lord's prayer. Radcilve stood with his hand on the iron lever, ready to draw it. Clause after clause was uttered, and it was only after the "Amen" had been spoken that the hangman's arm moved. The trap dropped, and the murderer's body dropped out of sight.

BODY SURRENDERED.

In view of the exceptional circumstances of the case, the Government decided to surrender the body of Rice to the relatives. This decision was arrived at yesterday evening, after the Ministers who were in town had been addressed on the subject by T. C. Robinette, K.C. Earlier in the day Mr. Robinette had an interview with Mr. Harcourt in regard to the matter.

THE STENOGRAPHER AND HER MANY DUTIES

SHE IS ABOUT SEVENTY STRONG IN PETERBOROUGH

Quick and Business Like and Delighted With Her Occupation

There are about 70 women stenographers employed in Peterborough offices. Every morning from 8.30 to 9.30 you may see them on their way to business. There is the typewriter girl of the joking man's whose idea of her work is to amuse herself with as many flirtations with the staff as possible, and to reap as large a harvest in the way of candy and theatre tickets as she can manage. Chains and chatelaines dangle at her waist and she looks more in order for an afternoon tea than a hard day's work at the machine. There is the quiet and severe one in the plainest sailor and sombre dress; and the quick, smart one, an adept in cheap repartee, whose idea of her work is to do as little as possible and still retain her position. Smartly gowned, she believes in impressing upon those she works with that she is quite their social equal if she does draw an inadequate salary. Once in a while the alert, bright business woman happens along—her blouse and collar immaculate, everything fresh and dainty as becomes a lady anywhere. She meets the men of the office staff on an impersonal but cordial footing—willing to oblige and do her work, but able to take care of herself. She does not weep if a man precedes her through a door or dictates to her with his hat on, but he generally learns not to do it.

She hangs her hat on a hook behind the door or on one of a long row beside the masculine fedoras and derbys, uncovers her machine, dusts and oils it, cleans the type and sees that pencils are sharp and book ready. By that time the morning mail has been opened and her services are required.

Many modes of dictation are encountered in a large office. One man's ideas comes so fast he talks himself out of breath with no pause to indicate what punctuation he desires. A little later he is sure to return with the letter amended in accordance with his second thoughts. Another begins somewhat after this fashion—"Deby—uh—uh—we are in receipt of yours—uh—of the 18th inst—and in reply—uh—uh—beg to state that—uh—your Mr. Jordan—Jordan—Jordan—uh—uh your Mr. Jordan—uh—" and there he hums and haws so long that he finally says—"uh—How did I begin that letter, Miss ——?" Sometimes the singular nouns and plural verbs get mixed, or a man may even fail to keep his "dones" and "dids" in their proper place, or he absentmindedly uses the wrong name or date, but all sorts of errors the stenographer is supposed to set right if she is to be considered a satisfactory amanuensis. The occasional man is terse, crisp and to the point in his letters, but there is also one who first uses ten lines where two would do, then repeats for emphasis, and finally says, "that is to say" and goes all over it again with variations—like the old gymnastic piano performances of Home Sweet Home or Old Black Joe, that our maiden aunts used to play. A good dictator is as rare as a good stenographer.

And as the day goes on—her head may be throbbing, but regardless of the noise and bustle about her, the ringing of the telephone and the talk of clients, she must transcribe her notes—and she must have an intelligent understanding of what she has written or it will be a sorry transcription. Her back may ache—it generally does, but she has to catch the mail. In the middle of a sentence she hears "take a letter please," and drops the matter in hand, seizes her pencil and writes at the rate of 125 words a minute more or less. She returns to her first transcription, and half way down the next paragraph comes again, "take a letter please." Sometimes a man changes his mind or alters his phrases half a dozen times in the course of a letter, many men drop their voices at the end of each sentence, some like to walk up and down while dictating and occasionally stand looking out of the window, but the secretary is supposed to catch every word and not interrupt—in fact the valued stenographer is one who never interrupts her employer and never resents his constant interruptions.

And what confidences she receives and she forgets or guards well from others. If the breakfast he [illegible] into and the domestic atmosphere murky, the stenographer reaps the aftermath of irritation and draws her own conclusions. The bank's curt reminder, that overdraft must be met, the effect on the business of a slump in stocks or a rise in wheat, the extravagance of household bills or his fond parental hopes, even his ambition to see his wife's gowns described regularly in the society columns of the newspaper, or his desire to shine in the city council — all these and much more does a man impart to his secretary directly or indirectly. Talk about a woman not being able to keep a secret! There is scarcely a business man of any standing in the city who does not perforce make a confidante of his stenographer in matters where a breach of that confidence would mean embarrassment or even disaster, and feel quite safe in doing so. The only sort of letters a man seems to feel he cannot dictate are his love letters, and there may be instances of these. The fact of the matter is a man forgets that she is human or feminine—she is to him merely an intelligent automatic phonographic typewriter machine. He talks into it and it works itself.

The experienced business woman knows there are just two persons who really matter on the staff—the head of the firm and the office boy—and if she must offend one, it is not the office boy. He has her first consideration and in return he puts on her new typeribbon, sharpens her pencils, goes messages and does numberless little things which she dislikes to do.

What attracts so many girls into office work and keeps them at it? First of all, the money. It is such an independent income. She has a chance to some extent at least, to live her own life, she grows interested in her work, likes meeting fresh people, and enjoys the incidental banter and jest and bit of jollity that each day brings if she carries some brightness and good humor with her. It will be drudgery if she lacks these qualities, but in an office as in any other position in life, a woman largely creates her own atmosphere. She will, in the main, receive just the respect and kindly consideration which she accords—and make her own happiness or the reverse.

—SYBIL GRAY.

Malt Breakfast Food

Makes Life Happy for a Montreal Business Man

It Gives Him the Vim, Activity and Strength of an Athlete

A prominent Montreal business man says: "For two years I suffered more or less from waterbrash and indigestion. Upon rising each morning I felt as tired as when I went to bed, and never sat down to breakfast with a good appetite. A friend advised me to use Malt Breakfast Food. I did so, and was delighted with its flavor and its effect on my digestion. After six months use of Malt Breakfast Food I am now in first rank as far as appetite and health are concerned. My wife thinks there is no other food to compare with Malt Breakfast Food." All grocers sell it.

A NARROW ESCAPE

Accident to a Sunday School Excursion at Hastings

The Methodists of Hastings excursed to Healey's Falls yesterday on the steamer Rainbow and barge. Just before passing through the Trent bridge where the water is exceptionally high owing to the recent heavy rains, Capt. Burnett disembarked most of the passengers before attempting to go through leaving about 25 on the boat and 4 on the scow, one of the latter being Miss Short, of Hastings, who was in charge of the refreshment booth on the scow. The other three were watching the baskets, etc.

The steamer passed through all right at highest speed, but when the scow was about one half way through it struck one of the piers and was quickly swerved to the other side. It came in contact with the other pier and with the swing bridge which was open and therefore lying lengthwise with the stream.

The result was awful; the cover on the scow was completely wrenched from its fastenings. In its flight it swept everything before it, and one of the beams struck Miss Short on the head and held her fast, in the booth. The heavy two inch tow rope snapped like a string and the scow went on towards Healy's Falls, beyond the control of anyone. Those who were on the scow providentially were in the rear, and htey escaped death. Miss Short was released from her perilous position and was unconscious for about 15 minutes. Baskets, parasols, coats, benches, and all the contents of the booth were swept into the water. The greater portion of which were afterwards recovered by parties on canoes.

Soon about twenty-five persons were in pursuit of the scow in canoes, and picking up all they could find. When quiet was restored the scow was captured about a mile down the river and towed back to the bridge, where many willing hands made temporary repairs sufficient to enable the excursionists to return to Hastings. The trip to the Falls had to be abandoned, and the party returned to Hastings at 9 o'clock at night.

Miss Short was sufficiently recovered to walk to her home when the boat reached Hastings, but she had a miraculous escape. Had it not been for Capt. Burnett's thoughtfulness in landing the passengers above the bridge, there would undoubtedly have been a heavy death list. There was quite a panic when the crash came, and some of the women on shore fainted. An organ on the scow was almost swept overboard. When the scow reached Hastings, it was in a very delapidated condition, but all were truly happy that they escaped as well as they did. The bridge was also damaged, but it can be used. There was a heavy load of passengers on board.

PETERBORO OLD BOYS

Circular Issued to the Toronto Members

The Old Boys of Peterborough Town and County Are in Evidence Just Now in Many Places—They are Amongst the Best of Them

One of the Old Boys.

Peterboro and County Old Boys' Association is the title of a Toronto society just formed, and judging from what appears in print, they are not ashamed of their native town, county. The "Old Boys" of the Queen City consist of such men as Hon. Senator Cox, President of the Bank of Commerce; Hon. J. R. Stratton, Provincial Secretary; A. E. Ames, President of Toronto Board of Trade; J. W. Flavelle, Director Bank of Commerce and President of the Robert Simpson Company; Chas. McGill, General Manager of the Ontario Bank; A. F. Choate, formerly financial editor of the Mail and Empire; Richard and Gus. Gough, the great clothiers; J. W. T. Fairweather, furrier; E. R. Wood, Managing Director Central Canada Loan and Savings Company; F. G. Cox, Managing Director of the Imperial Life Assurance Company; E. W. Cox, Vice-President and General Manager of the Canada Life Assurance Company, and many others. In fact if you took the Peterborough Old Boys out of Toronto there would be little left. The circular, which speaks for itself:

Whereso around the world we wander,
O'er all the realms and lands of earth,
Our pulsing hearts beat ever fonder
Of that dear vale whence we had birth;
We count it kind, if God defends us,
Though far our restless footsteps roam,
And at some eve in mercy sends us
Back to our happy childhood's home.

No county in hte province of Ontario is more worthy of such an Association and all the benefits, social, historical, and otherwise to be derived therefrom, than "Our Country."

Because of the rugged, picturesque character of the surface conditions, combination fair, rolling farm lands, broad ranges of rocky, mining lands, beautiful lakes and rivers, having hundreds of leagues of artistic, scenic shoreways.

Because of the sturdy, aggressive, law-abiding, nation-making quality and character of its people. The pioneer settlers of the County in the early years of the last century were men and women of strong purpose, ambitious for broader freedom and larger usefulness than the caste-hammered, population-congested old lands could afford them. No wonder their sons and daughters praise their self-sacrificing devotion to duty, and eulogise their memory, and are themselves a credit to such parentage. Men and women, great and honourable in church, state and community have gone forth from the County into all lands.

It is right and meet therefore, that without further delay, a friendly Association be formed to perpetuate and strengthen the friendships, crystallize the historical and unite in bonds of sentiment and patriotic usefulness and enjoyment, the "Boys and Girls" of Peterborough.

The nucleus of an Association has been formed. The adjourned meeting will be continued in St. George's Hal Elm street, near Yonge street, on Monday evening, July 21st., 1902, at 8 o'clock.

You are respectfully and earnestly invited to be present, and bring with you any of our people.

Yours very cordially.
LLEWELLYN MORRISON,
Chairman pro tem.
R. A. CARDWELL,
Secretary.

MISS M'EWEN REMEMBERED

Presented with a Well Filled Purse and an Address

At Lakefield on Monday afternoon, Miss McEwen, President of the W.F.M.S., was called upon by the members of that society and presented with a well filled purse, and the following address:—

My Dear Miss McEwen.—We, the members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Auxiliary, sincerely regret your removal from among us, and desire to express to you our appreciation of your willing and untiring service to us, as we labored together so pleasantly towards the advancement of the Master's kingdom upon earth, for in you we have ever found a ready and willing helper to co-operate with us in all our undertakings.

On behalf of the Auxiliary and a few friends in the congregation, we wish at this time to convey to you our loving sympathy and appreciation of your service of love, and ask you to accept this purse as a slight token of our love and esteem.

"The Lord watch between me and thee, whilst we are absent one from another."

MRS. BENSON,
Sec. W. F. M. S.

Lakefield, July 14, 1902.

Miss McEwen was also presented with an address from the Pansy Mission Band, expressive of their appreciation of her help and encouragement in their efforts to advance the cause which lies so near her heart, "The World for Christ."

Miss McEwen's departure from Lakefield leaves a blank, which can scarcely be filled. In the work of the W.F.M.S. she was particularly interested and entered upon it with a zeal and energy that drew from the lips of all observers the encomium, "This one thing I do, heartily, cheerfully as to the Lord."

KING AS A LIFE SAVER.

Berlin, July 17.—A baloon containing three German aeronauts recently fell into Lake Constance, owing to the dropping of the wind. The King of Wurtemberg who was cruising in a yacht on the lake, saw the accident and hastened to the rescue. He personally saved the balloonists. He did not disclose his identity until the rescued men desired to reward the owner of the yacht.

Insanity in Summer Brought on By Nervous and Mental Troubles

Paine's Celery Compound

The Great Tower of Safety and Rock of Health in the Hot Weather

Nervous diseases when aggravated by mental disturbances produce more cases of insanity in the hot weather than at any other season of the year. Nervous headache, nervous dyspepsia, sleeplessness and chronic constipation induce depression of spirits, extreme weakness, morbid fears, despondency and langour; from these, dread insanity comes slowly but surely.

Nervous sufferers have a dread of hot weather. Finding themselves deeper in the pit of misery than they were in the spring and early summer they are in utter despair.

There is hope for you, dear reader if you are one of the sufferers. You stand in need of Paine's Celery Compound, that great builder of the nervous system. Its vitalizing action commences with the first bottle you use. The volume of blood immediately increases in the arteries, and the body is fully fed and nourished. Your appetite becomes regular and natural, the nerves and brain are strengthened, and you have impulses of health that cheer the soul.

This remarkable remedy will truly meet your case and give you a new life. It will lay the foundation for happiness and long years. We counsel you to try this marvelous summer health-restorer at once, and enjoy the blessings of health.

MR. CRANE RESIGNS

Mr. W. F. Pickard to Succeed Mr. Crane as As Organist

The resignation of Mr. John Crane, who has presided at the organ of St. Paul's Presbyterian church for the past nine years, is felt by the congregation of St. Paul's church with universal regret.

Owing to the services of Mr. Crane, being unavailable his resignation was accepted after much resistance on the part of the congregation.

Mr. W. F. Pickard, late of the Simcoe street Methodist church, Oshawa, who comes highly recommended and at the approval of Mr. Crane will after the first of September preside at the organ. In welcoming Mr. Pickard it is not too much to say that it is hoped that he will fill the position as efficiently and faithfully as Mr. Crane has done, in which event neither the congregation of St. Paul's, nor himself will have reason to regret the change—the congregation will enjoy faithful and efficient musical service and he will enjoy a popularity and appreciation such as falls to the lot of few church organists.

With deep regret the congregation of St. Paul's part with Mr. Crane, who finds that the demands of his duties as manager of the Ontario Bank, do not leave him free to devote the attention he would wish to the work of training the choir and directing the musical services of the church. This is not surprising for those who know Mr. Crane know that he insists on doing well whatever he does in the way of music, and when circumstances prevent him giving the necessary attention, it is natural that he should retire. And by none will his departure from the organist's bench be more regretted than by the members of the choir themselves. During the nine years of his duties there has never been a break in the harmony of their mutual relations. He has, therefore, been loyally supported by his choir, which explains why St. Paul's has always had a large and well trained choir as much distinguished by the harmony of their relations with their leader, and themselves as for the harmony of the music they presented Sunday after Sunday.

But it is to be hoped that Mr. Crane will still maintain the keen interest he has taken in music in Peterborough. Of course we shall miss his activity in the presentation of the excellnt annual concert he has been in the habit of giving in St. Paul's, —high-class musical entertainments, in which the work of his choir has always been admirable, and the visiting soloists always performers of merit. Mr. Crane deserves well of the music loving public of Peterborough, as well as of musicians. He has always been willing to give his talent, time and attention at no little sacrifice of personal convenience, to the promotion of the success of musical entertainments and his readiness to assist other musicians and organists, have shown the possession of a liberal and kindly spirit. Mr. Crane's services as organist will conclude the first of September.

THE LOYALIST FEELING FAVORS SUSPENSION

Colonials Believe That the Condition of Affairs is Unknown to Chamberlain

THE MARRIAGE OF THE DUKE OF NORFOLK

Interesting Discovery Made by W. M. Voynich, of Soho Square—Latest Move of Lord Roberts

London, ujly 18—There is no doubt that the second marriage of the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl Marshal, will take place very soon after the Coronation. This matter has been discussed very much during the last eighteen months, and has been frequently mentioned as true, and as frequently denied. But there is no doubt about it now. It was, of course, known that the Duke would not have married so long as his invalid son, Lord Arundel, lived, but now he is dead there is the question of an heir to the title and estates, which in the event of no direct issue, would go to the Duke's brother, Lord Edmund Talbot.

London, July 18.—Dr. Smartt, Commissioner of Public Works in Cape Colony, who has just returned after a tour of the colony, says the Cape Town correspondent of The Times, says the feeling among loyalists, especially Dutch loyalists, in favor of the suspension of the constitution is even much stronger than he supposed. Loyalists are convinced that the condition of affairs in the colony has not been properly brought before Chamberlain. The Progressive party in the Cape Parliament will support Sir Gordon Sprigg on all measures essential to British interests, and on none framed merely to conciliate the Afrikander Bund. The Progressive party will keep the suspension of the constitution in view, hoping to gain it by Parliamentary means.

TORNADO HAS DEVASTATED CHESTERVILL

Four Persons Killed, Many Seriously Injured--Demolished and Fences Blown Away, Worst Storm Ontario Has Known

Special to The Times.

Chesterville, Ont, July 18 — Yesterday evening a storm of more than unusual proportions passed over this territory, accompanied by a cyclone which exceeded in fury anything of its kind in the memory of the oldest inhabitants. About 4 p.m. the citizens of Chesterville were alarmed by the appearance of the sky to the northwest of the village, while incessant electrical discharges lit up the twilight, large cloudy masses were rolling and scudding before the wind. It was evident that a fearful storm was raging in the immediate vicinity. Nearing here the tornado took a south-easterly direction and passed within a mile of the town. Those who were watching felt distinctly the hot blast from the cyclone as it swept with fearful velocity to the southeast, the wind monster twisted, tore and destroyed everything in its path for a space of about fifty or sixty rods in width, while everything within a radius of a mile in width was more or less affected. So far as heard from this morning the storm struck the township of Winchester in what is known as the Ormond settlement in the northwest corner and cut in a general southeasterly direction across the Township of Winchester, Finch and Osnabruck, and it is supposed to have spent its energy at the St. Lawrence. This morning the country for miles around presents a scene of devastation and terror.

CORPSE AGAINST THE FENCE.

Fences have disappeared and cannot be found. Dwellings and outbuildings were overturned and in some cases torn to pieces. Dead cattle are lying here and there at almost every farm in the centre of the storm's path and dead, maimed and bruised human beings are added to the horror of the scene. At the farm of Mr. John Kearns, seventh concession, Township of Winchester a gruesome sight met the eye of the beholder. Portions of the barn lay about their remains and of the dwelling not a vestige could be found. Not even a splinter or a rag gave evidence that it had once been the site of a happy home. The father lay in the clover field with a broken hip and otherwise terribly ruised, and near him lay his little son, seven years old, quite dead. The corpse of the unfortunate mother, evidently picked up from the house, was found against the fence. The two other children were found in the field with broken limbs and terribly bruised, but still living.

IMPRISONED IN A STABLE.

A fine hardwood bush, the property of Mr J Coyne, adjoining the Kearns property, presented a unique appearance. Maples elms and oaks were torn from their roots, twisted, broken and splintered. Many instances of narrow escapes are being reported.

At the residence of Michael S. Grady, 5th concession, Winchester, a narrow escape is reported. John Clark, the mother and four children were in the stable milking when the barn collapsed over them. Clark escaped through a portion of the roof and getting an axe cut a way to the imprisoned family, all of whom were got out safely, except one girl, badly injured. The residence of Harmon Shaver, 9th concession, Township of Winchester, one of the most solid brick houses in this locality, was completely devasted. It is impossible to estimate the damage now, but it is within the mark to say that in the townships of Winchester, Finch and Osnabruck, it will exceed $200,000. At this time of writing four are reported dead and many seriously injured.

Chesterville is in the township of Winchester, in the County of Dundas. It is about two miles from the line of the C.P.R., and seven miles from Winchester town. It is in one of the most thriving districts of Eastern Ontario.

MYSTERIES ABOUT EELS

Enormous Numbers in a Turbine Wheel—A Sudden Disappearance

Hull, Canada, July 17.—A turbine mill wheel which runs a gang of saws at the Chaudiere waterfall stopped suddenly this week. Upon shutting down the mill and unscrewing the upper cap it was discovered that the wheel had become packed full of eels. It looked as though there must have been hundreds of thousands of them.

About Valleyfield on the St. Lawrence it became necessary a good many years ago to set up special guards to prevent eels from crowding into the canals which supply water power to the factories. And at these guards thrifty inhabitants used to do a good business catching eels in wicker traps and shipping them in barrels by boat to Montreal.

One of these enterprising men volunteers the information that he has noticed that until they attain a weight of two or three pounds eels travel in droves, probably families, of some hundreds of individuals. Possibly the stopping of the great mill here may have been caused as this man suggests by the desire of a family of lusty young eels to pass by that way.

This incident reminds lumbermen here of an occurrence at a little lake to the north of the Temiscamingue some years ago in order to supply a rapidly falling stream with water enough to float a large number of logs to the Ottawa River it became necessary to cut through a rocky natural dam and allow a little sheet of water to discharge into it.

The blasting powder did its work well and the log drivers accomplished their object comfortably. On the next Sunday several of the men made their way back to see the result of their sudden drainage of the lake. They found about an acre of thick mud at the very centre of where the pond had been, and this was alive with a struggling, writhing mass of great eels.

The specimens they dragged to camp were so huge that the cook refused to have anything to do with them, as he did not believe eels ever grew to such a size. A few days afterward a number of men went to see the monsters, but found the mud quite dry and not a fish to be seen.

Various theories were advanced to account for their disappearance, as that a heavy thunderstorm had furnished water enough for them to wave for the almost dried-up brook. Another suggestion was that wild beasts and birds of the eagle and hawk family had cleared away the stranded fish. The people of the country declared that the eels had gone overland to another lake not half a mile away, for "eels often come out of the water and crawl about the fields in wet weather."

FEED THE CHILDREN

Learn What to Give Them

People with weak children should look to food for making the youngsters stout and hearty. Scientific selection of food is the true way to health.

A mother speaks of her experience in feeding children. She says, "about two years ago our little two year old Isabella was taken with stomach and bowel trouble. She was so low at times that we despaired of her recovering.

She could not digest the lightest kind of food. She lingered along from August to November in that condition when I decided to try Grape-Nuts in small quantities three times a day. I poured boiling water over them and let them stand five minutes to soften, then added sweet cream and a very little sugar.

Well, from that day, the 15th of Nov., 1898, until now we have never had to give her a drop of medicine and she is the picture of health. So also is my little boy now, two years old. He has lived on Grape-Nuts since he was a year old and is the stoutest little fellow you ever saw.

Nearly everyone asks what I feed the children for they are so big and healthy.

Our 12 year old daughter began to have headaches about last Christmas and we put glasses on her. She got some better but was still very poorly. Finally I took away most of her food and put her on Grape-Nuts. She steadily improved and is now able to go to school regularly and is quite well. Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Look for free receipt book in each package of Grape-Nuts.

St. Petersburg, July 17WM de Witte the Minisetr of Finance, in an interview yesterday, declared that the Czar with a view of affording the people of the provinces still further freedom of expression regarding the condition of the peasantry, had directed the local committees od the commission appointed for the purpose of probing social problems to raise any questions they pleased in addition to those provided for in the programme of enquiry.

London, Thursday, July 17.—A despatch to the morning Post from Brussels says that the King of the Belgians has obtained several important railway concessions in China. It is added that he has acquired a majority of the Canton-Hankow Railway from the American syndicate which obtained hte concession for the line.

London, July 155.—King Edward left Victoria station at 11.25 o'clock this morning for Portsmouth, where he will board the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert. The King was conveyed from Buckingham Palace to the railway station in an ambulance, drawn by two horses.

The only other occupant of the ambulance was Queen Alexandra. The vehicle was driven at a walking pace. Although there was a small crowd at the station there was no demonstration in compliance with the express wish of the King. The doctors and nurses awaited the arrival of the ambulance and a party of bluejackets removed His Majesty from the vehicle to a royal saloon car, formerly used by the late Queen Victoria. Absolute privacy was secured by a lofty screen of red plush which surrounded the platform.

The removal of His Majesty from the train to the royal yacht was safely accomplished by blue jackets and the King's couch was placed in a reception room which had been especially constructed on the upper deck.

The warships in the harbor fired a royal salute as the King embarked, and all the vessels dressed ship and manned yards or decks. The royal yacht steamed off almost immediately after the transfer was completed.

It was said that the King bore this journey exceedingly well.

Providence, July 18.—Annie Graham, seventeen years old, an operative in a stocking mill at Pawtucket, disappeared last Friday from her home at Central Falls. Saturday her mother told the police the girl was missing, and Mrs. Daniel D. Bourne, wife of an expressman, reported at the same time that her husband had disappeared.

Today the girl was found near her home, suffering from laudanum poisoning. She said she remembered little after leaving home, but declared she had left Bourne dead in the woods at Attleboro. His body has not been found, although search has been made for it.

UNITED EUROPE

The Great Nations of the Continent to Form Alliance

Philadelphia, July 18.—The Czar represents the alliance of Russia and France. The King of Italy represents the Triple Alliance of Germany, Austria-Hungary and Italy. In this lies the significance of the present visit of King Victor Emmanuel to St. Petersburg. The Czar has recently seen the French President and the German Emperor. What more probable than that he is arranging for a firm establishment of general peace among the five powerful nations which virtually divide Europe among them. The aged Emperor of Austria-Hungary, who is the only one who has not been consulted ostentatiously, is always for peace, and the smaller nations must take their cue from their powerful neighbors. As for Great Britain, she has had enough of fighting for awhile, and will readily fall in with the scheme.

The Agonizing Pains of Rheumatism

Swollen, aching joints, muscles are stiff and sore, every movement accompanied by pain. The most potent remedy is Polson's Nerviline, which has five times the pain-subduing power of any other preparation. Apply the Nerviline copiously, rub it in well and then bind in a hot flannel bandage. This will ease the worst cases in a short time. Try Nerviline for rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica or lumbago—it's all right, and only costs a quarter.

THE LEAGUE OF CANADIAN MUNICIPALITIES

The League of Canadian Municipalities which was formed last year by a number of cities and towns is to meet in Montreal in September. The Ottawa city council has appointed the mayor and three aldermen to attend.

Some members of the council thought this an unnecessarily large delegation. However, Montreal is not far distant, the expense of the whole delegation will not probably exceed fifty dollars, and in a gathering of the kind a good numerical representation is desirable, because it is by exchange and comparison of opinions and experiences that something useful is most likely to be obtained.

What is desired in this league is united watchfulness and united action by municipalities regarding public rights against individual or corporate encroachment, a danger which in some respects steadily increases. Special licenses or franchises or privileges to do business in or around or for large municipalities is becoming more profitable every day. Business men, capitalists, promoters, speculators see this clearly. They are proportionately active in efforts to corral municipal privileges, and if they can not get what they want or all they want from a municipality, they try to get further by Parliament or the Legislatures, where they 'work' the members, perhaps the ministers or officials. Mayor Cook in speaking in the Ottawa Council Thursday night on the desirability of a solid understanding among the municipalities in defence of their interests said that in his fourteen years' experience in the press gallery of Parliament he had never known lobbying to be so active or lobbyists so numerous as during the past session. Testimony to a similar effect comes from the vicinity of parliaments and legislatures all the world over. The guardians of public and municipal rights need to be correspondingly active. The gods help those who help themselves.

CANADIAN CORDAGE WORKS

first heat melts the solder of the sprinklers, which are found every eight feet overhead, and the building is deluged with water. From an incipient blaze the factory is protected by fire extinguishers found ready for use at convenient points throughout the different departments. Besides this all the departments are divided by fire proof walls extending to the roof, and the openings in these walls are protected by automatic fire proof doors, which close as soon as a fire generates any heat, and thus prevent fire from one department gaining access to another.

The electrical equipment, the motors throughout the building and the lighting plant, was supplied by the Canadian General Electric Company. The power for the motors will be supplied by the Otonabee Power Company, and the contract with this company for 440 horse power at $10 per h. p. ensures a cheap power that will be a financial advantage to the company, as it means a saving of about $12,000 a year over a steam plant. The lighting plant which furnishes light for the entire works, is also operated by thirty electrical horse power furnished by the Otonabee Power Co., at the same figure, giving a lighting system on which a saving of $500 a year is made on ordinary prices.

As oil enters so largely into the manufactures of the factory a large oil tank, holding 13,000 gallons of oil, has been erected, and enclosed in a brick building close to the preparation room where the fibre is lubricated before beginning its passage through the process of manufacture.

All the machines in the preparation and spinning rooms were made by Hoover & Gamble, of Miamisburg, Ohio, except the finishers, which were made, as stated, in Belfast, Ireland. The rope machines were made by the Lockwood Mfg. Co., of Boston.

Mr. J. J. Hartley had the contract for the excavation and brick work, and Mr. O. Rutherford that for the carpenter work, and both these contracts were fulfilled to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. In fact, the expedition shown in the work and the excellent way in which it was performed was a credit not only to Messrs. Hartley and Rutherford, but to the ability of Peterborough's contractors generally.

EVERYTHING TO ENSURE GREAT SUCCESS.

As remarked in opening, all the essentials for success are found in the Canadian Cordage Manufacturing Co., with its excellent organization, its financial strength, its efficient and capable management, its experienced superintendence, its economical and money saving advantages and reduced expense to a minimum, its new and modern plant, its splendid buildings, its perfect shipping facilities, and the large assured market for its output. Its financial strength is seen when it is stated that the company has been organized, the buildings erected and the plant installed and all the attendant obligations met without asking one dollar of a loan from a bank.

By reason of the fact that the company have over 4,000 shareholders, orders have come in for the supply of twine without expense. These orders have come in so thick and so fast from all quarters that the company have not been able to fill the orders as they came in. All the twine that the company can manufacture this season is contracted for, and sold at profitable prices. The company have actually declined orders for this year for upwards of 750 tons.

The company are in correspondence with parties for the handling of their output for next season's trade. One firm in Chicago desires to have the company manufacture for them for next season's trade 1,000 tons of twine. Another large concern doing an extensive business in the North West desires the company to manufacture for them many hundred tons. Other small dealers throughout the country desire orders for smaller quantities.

Dealers and consumers who have inspected the twine have found it to be of most excellent quality, and well and evenly spun, free from knots and snarls. Because the company have been making excellent twine the demands for their goods have been increased. There is no doubt that the Canadian Cordage and Manufacturing Company will be a great success and a profitable, safe and substantial investment for those who have put their money in it.

The stock so far subscribed, about $150,000, is largely held by those interested in the business, either as consumers or dealers, and in small blocks. The remainder of the authorized stock will be taken up readily. When this is done the company will be able to do its business on a gilt edged basis. Experience has shown that there are big profits in the manufacture of binder twine. Many of the large companies in the United States have paid dividends of 18 per cent.; others of 25 per cent., and one Canadian concern paid an average annual dividend for eight years of 37 1-2 per cent. Peterborough's latest industry promises to be a thriving one, employing when equipped about 200 hands.

THE GREGORY BUELL CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING and MILLING COMPANY

Whose Entire Plant is Now Under Roof. 1 of CENTRAL CITY, COLORADO PRODUCTION OF 200 TONS PER DAY

185 Tons Milling Ore, $12.00, Net $10.00 .... $1,850
15 Tons Smelting Ore, average $80.00 (less transportation and smelting charges $10.00, $70.00 being low average .... Profit $1,050

$2 900 PER DAY, 350 DAYS

This is over 21 per cent. on the capital $5,000,000 at par, and at present selling price of 75 cents per share amounts to over 27 per cent. The above is one-third of the capacity. Full capacity—600 tons in 24 hours—would make these figures three times as great. Total amount to be raised fully guaranteed. This investment upon these terms is worthy the careful consideration of all those having sums to invest. WRITE FOR PROSPECTUS.

Stock Par Value $1 00 Now Selling at 75 Cents

We trust that you will appreciate the fact that THE GREGORY BUELL CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING and MILLING COMPANG is a going concern, the properties having produced $2,000,000 in the past under unfavorable circumstances. The present consolidation, by operating fourteen mines through one shaft, makes possible an enormous saving in operating expenses doing away with thirteen engineers, firemen, etc., a great reduction in fuel and many other points too numerous to mention.

With the vast additional ore bodies now being developed by tunnel and cross-cuts, when completed, assures the management that, on a calculation based on one-third of their capacity, they can earn 25 PER CENT. per annum upon the investment.

Bear in mind that the mill is built, a large part of the machinery is in place and that the Company is absolutely free from all debt. We consider this, after a most careful examination by us, a gilt-edge investment. We cannot recommend this too highly, and trust that you may appreciate the advantages as we do.

COPPER AT THREE AND HALF CENTS A POUND

George A. Treadwell Mining Company

27 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK. JEROME, ARIZONA.

Capital - - - - $3,000,000.

PAR VALUE OF SHARES $10.

In a suit recently tried in the New York courts it was proved from the books of the United Verde Copper Company and the sworn testimony of the bookkeepers that the cost to that company of producing copper was only three and a half cents a pound, not counting the gold and silver values, which—allowed for—reduced the cost to a still lower figure.

Nowhere outside the Verde Copper Belt in Yavapai County, Arizona, is copper produced in quantities for less than twice this cost.

The United Verde has about two hundred acres on the north end of the Belt and the George A. Treadwell Company has several times as much in the central and southern parts of the Belt. The conditions along the whole Belt are entirely similar. We already have three mines developed—the Cliff, Brookshire and Iron Queen—one of which, the Cliff, seems to be larger and better than the United Verde, and the other two at least approach it in magnitude and value, while we have several others, including Badger, Pastime, Green Monster and Spoke and Stonewall, which, though less developed, are equally promising.

Professor Treadwell believes we have at least half a dozen United Verdes within the broad and extensive limits of our holdings.

As soon as our smelter plant which is now in process of erection, is completed, we can certainly produce copper as cheap as our rich neighbor on the north.

The United Verde for several years has produced one-tenth of the copper of the world. When our plants are fully installed we expect the Verde Belt to produce one-half the copper of the world, and the George A. Treadwell Mining Company will be prepared to do more than its full share.

Before investing in copper in unproved localities, consider the stock of the George A. Treadwell Mining Company, named after the great pioneer and explorer of the Verde Belt and owning the largest and best aggregation of properties on it.

The price of the stock is $10 a share. Make checks payable to the order of the company and send them to 27 William Street New York

MYSTERIES ABOUT EELS

Enormous Numbers in a Turbine Wheel—A Sudden Disappearance

Hull, Canada, July 17.—A turbine mill wheel which runs a gang of saws at the Chaudiere waterfall stopped suddenly this week. Upon shutting down the mill and unscrewing the upper cap it was discovered that the wheel had become packed full of eels. It looked as though there must have been hundreds of thousands of them.

About Valleyfield on the St. Lawrence it became necessary a good many years ago to set up special guards to prevent eels from crowding into the canals which supply water power to the factories. And at these guards thrifty inhabitants used to do a good business catching eels in wicker traps and shipping them in barrels by boat to Montreal.

One of these enterprising men volunteers the information that he has noticed that until they attain a weight of two or three pounds eels travel in droves, probably families of some hundreds of individuals. Possibly the stopping of the great mill here may have been caused as this man suggests by the desire of a family of lusty young eels to pass by that way.

This incident reminds lumbermen here of an occurrence at a little lake to the north of the Temiscamingue some years ago in order to supply a rapidly falling stream with water enough to float a large number of logs to the Ottawa River it became necessary to cut through a rocky natural dam and allow a little sheet of water to discharge into it.

The blasting powder did its work well and the log drivers accomplished their object comfortably. On the next Sunday several of the men made their way back to see the result of their sudden drainage of the lake. They found about an acre of thick mud at the very centre of where the pond had been, and this was alive with a struggling, writhing mass of great eels.

The specimens they dragged to camp were so huge that the cook refused to have anything to do with them, as he did not believe eels ever grew to such a size. A few days afterward a number of men went to see the monsters, but found the mud quite dry and not a fish to be seen.

Various theories were advanced to account for their disappearance, as that a heavy thunderstorm had furnished water enough for them to leave for the almost dried-up brook. Another suggestion was that wild beasts and birds of the eagle and hawk family had cleared away the stranded fish. The people of the country declared that the eels had gone overland to another lake not half a mile away, for "eels often come out of the water and crawl about the fields in wet weather."

UNITED EUROPE

The Great Nations of the Continent to Form Alliance

Philadelphia, July 18.—The Czar represents the alliance of Russia and France. The King of Italy represents the Triple Alliance of Germany, Austria-Hungary and Italy. In this lies the significance of the present visit of King Victor Emmanuel to St. Petersburg. The Czar has recently seen the French President and the German Emperor. What more probable than that he is arranging for a firm establishment of general peace among the five powerful nations which virtually divide Europe among them. The aged Emperor of Austria-Hungary, who is the only one who has not been consulted ostentatiously, is always for peace, and the smaller nations must take their cue from their powerful neighbors. As for Great Britain, she has had enough of fighting for awhile, and will readily fall in with the scheme.

typewriting, and, after a while, if you fancied it, shorthand, too?"

"'Like' and 'fancy' are inappropriate words in my desperate case," I said. "But, as it happens, I should do both."

"Very well, then, I'll teach you typewriting when you are stronger—in a few days, perhaps."

"But I can't go on staying here—in your house."

"It isn't my house. It is Mrs. Jennett's. But as you are so anxious to get away you will be able in, say, ten days or a fortnight's time (if you are quick at learning), to earn enough money for lodgings of your own."

"Who would give a wretched amateur work," I asked, "when there must be so many clever girls who are professionals?"

"I will give you work. All you can do. Don't look like that, please. It's no 'charity,' I assure you. I have lost my secretary and I need another. You can learn typing in a week; and in three or four months, in leisure hours, you will have made good progress with shorthand. As for the machine, I have two, and one of them I'll—lend to you."

"Thank you for stopping to think in time and not saying 'give,'" I laughed.

"How good it is to hear that laugh," he said. "Now, are you glad you didn't go down under the dark waters?"

"Oh, so glad!" impulsively.

I held out my hands and he caught them both, gripping them so tightly that the grasp gave me pain. Then, suddenly, he let my hands go, with a changing expression that I wished I had the clue to read.

"Mrs. Jennett shall find you just the right rooms," he went on, with a hint of sadness in his voice. "Meanwhile, you shall be practising your new art, which will be all the easier for you if you know the piano, as of course you do. And in a few days, perhaps, you will be able to move. Then you'll be soon earning three guineas a week, on which, if you are a very prudent young lady, you can live quite comfortably."

"Dear me, can I really earn as much as that by typewriting?" I asked, opening my eyes. "It is more than I could have hoped for as a governess. Even with my music and languages, the people at the agencies told me, before they grew disagreeable, that I could not ask at most more than forty pounds a year."

"Oh, well, you see, people often take advantage of their governesses; whereas expert typewriters are pretty well paid," he informed me with a grave face—so grave that I never thought of doubting him. "Shall I come back tomorrow with the machine and give you your first lesson?"

At the end of a week I could write very well. Mrs. Jennett had found me rooms, which were to be ready in a few days, but as they were still in occupation, I must stay where I was till they were free. I had grown to love the study and every book in it. I should be homesick when I went away. As for John Bourke, I would not let myself think what it would be when the days should go by without a glimpse of him.

I had begun to live in the present, little dreaming of the precipice that my feet had all but reached.

CHAPTER XV.

"The Man You Love."

"There! I've typed a thousand words in an hour!" I announced. "Isn't that good for an amateur?"

"Splendid!" said John Bourke.

"Shall I ever be as good as your other secretary, who left you to be married?" I wistfully asked.

"There never was a secretary like you," he replied.

"Oh! But is that meant for praise or—otherwise?"

"It's meant to tell you that I wish I could keep you for my secretary always."

"Perhaps you may. I'll grow old in your service."

He came closer and stood looking down at my finished work, yet not seeming to see it. I felt that there was something which he wished to say, and that he was thinking of the right beginning; but just as he had opened his lips to speak there came a knock at the door. Mrs. Jennett entered with a telegram sent on for Mr. Bourke from the hotel where he was living.

He read it and crushed the paper in his hand. "I must go at once," he said. "But I shall be back to-morrow morning about half-past ten with some more work for you to tackle, if you will."

"What were you going to say before Mrs. Jennett came in?" I curiously enquired, as he held out his hand for farewell.

He looked at me intently, in a characteristic way he had, that always quickened my blood a little. "Do you really want to know?"

"Very much, or I wouldn't have asked."

"And I very much want to tell you. But it's something too important to be told in a hurry. If you were offended I should not have time now to try and make my case good."

"Am I likely to be offended?"

"I can't tell. I hope not, more than I ever hoped anything."

"Dear me! And I must wait till to-morrow!"

"I had meant not to speak of this matter until you were out of this house and in those rooms of you own to which you seem so eagerly looking forward. But I'm not a very patient man, I'm afraid, where my own interests are at stake; and now that the subject has been broached——"

"To-morrow, then!" I broke in. "At half-past ten. It's an appointment."

"Yes," he said, slowly. "You shall hear what I have to say for myself."

All this time he had been holding my hand, and I had forgotten to draw it away, for the conversation had been very absorbing. Now I remembered, and gently pulled away my fingers. One more quick, strong pressure he gave them, and then, with an abrupt "Good-bye until to-morrow," he turned, and was gone without looking back.

"What can it be that he wants to say to me?" I thought. "Something so important that he is anxious about it—something he hopes mayn't offend me?"

That speech was puzzling, for it seemed that, if the mysterious "something" were the one thing I dared to hope it might just possibly be, there could be no idea of "offence." Still, the expression of his face more than the spoken words, perhaps, gave me a hope that went thrilling through my veins. And when his tall, alert figure had passed out of sight I lifted the hand that he had pressed and kissed it. Then, ashamed of what I had done, I hurried back to the typewriter, and began to work as if driven by a merciless taskmaster.

For half an hour there was no sound in the room except the tapping of the keys, the sharp "ping" of the bell which

BRITAIN RULES THE WAVES

London, July 12.—The statistics have recently been given out for the world's shipping as figured by Lloyd's Register. These figures show the shipping of the world as 17,156 steamers, with a tonnage of 25,[illegible], and 12,[illegible] sailing vessels, with the tonnage of 6,577,776, bringing the total number of vessels in the merchantile marines of the world up to 29,[illegible], with a tonnage of 32,457,763. Great Britain stands first as regards tonnage; in fact, she has almost half of the tonnage of the world, the figures being 15,546,397. America comes second, with a tonnage of 3,237,156 (this figure is lower than that given by the U. S. Commissioner of Navigation); Germany third, with 3,128,[illegible] tons; Norway fourth, with 1,622,[illegible]; France fifth, with 1,519,922, and Italy sixth, with 1,180,[illegible]—the merchant fleets of these last two subsidy paying countries not standing as well on the list as does the Norwegian shipping, which has been built up on the free ship plan. Following France in order come Russia, Spain, Japan, and Sweden. After Sweden the Dutch shipping takes eleventh place, followed by the Austrian, Danish, Greek, Belgian, Turkish, Brazilian, Chilean, Portuguese and Argentine, no other country having over 50,000 tons.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

—The third Thursday in August will be civic holiday.

—Carlisle's new terraces on McDonel street are nearing completion.

—We have a couple of good writing machines cheap. Apply at The Times Bookstore.

—The large smokestack of the Stanley Piano Company was blown down yesterday.

—The excursion of the season promises to be the excursion of the legalities to Idyl Wild on Monday.

—The steamers City of Peterborough, North Star, Water Lily and Beaver were in port yesterday.

—The annual excursion of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Sunday school to Jubilee Point was well attended yesterday.

—A large number of Americans spent the night at the Snowden House. They were from New York, and have been spending a week or two at Burleigh Falls.

—Cards announcing the second annual excursion of the Printers, decorate the windows of the stores. The Printers excurt to Jubilee Point on Saturday, Aug. 2nd.

—The Canadian General Electric Company's Angling Club will run their annual excursion to Jubilee Point per City of Peterborough, on Saturday, July 26th. The steamer will leave the Wolfe street wharf at 1.30 p.m.

—Mr. F. B. Stratton makes the 12th superannuated Methodist minister to take residence in Belleville. In peacefulness and quietude, Belleville leads up gently to the rest of a cemetery, and all others, must sooner or later come.

—A regatta will be held by the residents of Sturgeon Point this afternoon commencing at 2 o'clock and open only to the boat owners of the village. The first event will be over a six mile triangular course, open only to sailing boats of the dingy and Mackinaw classes.

—Coronation day is likely to be Aug. 9th and as Civic holiday is held a couple of weeks later, perhaps it would be well for our town fathers to wait until the day for the coronation is fixed and then make the same day Civic Holiday. This will avoid having two holidays coming close together.

—An excellent illuminate, says an exchange, made be made from any ordinary bricks by placing them in a vessel filled with coal oil and allowing them to absorb the oil for two or three days. When they become thoroughly soaked and the match applied they send forth a splendid light. They were used with great success at a lawn party recently. A wire was passed around each one of them and hooked to another wire attached to a limb of a tree. The light emitted from each one being equal in penetrating power to half a dozen incandescent lights.

A Real Estate Purchase

Mr. Thomas G. Choate, jr., of Lakefield, has purchased the Andrew Johnston farm, situated about a mile from the village, near the Peterborough road. The price is understood to be in the neighborhood of $8,000. This includes stocks, crops and implements.

—Corporal Redmond, of the North West Mounted Police, formerly of The Times staff, called at this office last night to renew old acquaintances. He was one of those chosen from that force to attend the coronation, and is now returning.

Some Fine Tubers

Our thanks are due and are hereby tendered to Mr. Geo. H. Brown, of Chemong Park Hotel, for a basket of superb new potatoes, sent to the editor of this great family journal yesterday. They were beauties, and reflect great credit on Mr. John Lightfoot, Mr. Brown's professional gardner. This g.f.j. managed yesterday to stow away under its vest a couple of these magnificent samples of Mr Browns agricultural phenomena and at once expressed a feeling of superb contentment unknown to any one but a government official or a member whose seat has not been protested. Next to the 'lunge to be found in Chemong Lake, its potatoes are top notchers.

Fell from a Barn

While working on the roof of a barn at Bailieboro last Wednesday, Mr. Ed. Courtney, jr., met with a serious accident, falling to the ground with a bunch of shingles following him, which lit on his limb, smashing the bone in a painful manner.

Dr. Montgomery, of Bailieboro, attended the patient, and after having the injury dressed, he was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, Ashburnham. His friends will be pleased to learn that he is improving as well as could be expected.

THE POSTMASTERSHIP

It is Said That the Present Incumbent will Soon Retire

It is said that a fierce war is on just now over the office of postmaster, which is likely soon to become vacant, through the retirement of Col. H. C. Rogers. Already more than one trip has been made to Ottawa in connection with the matter. It is understood that two prominent politicians are hot after the job, with several others of lesser importance following behind.

Should Col. Rogers retire, it will be a superannuation allowance. For some time past the salary attached to the office of postmaster has been gradually growing less. The last cute was made only a couple or three months ago, when $400 was taken from his salary and given to the clerks in the office, all of whom are ridiculously underpaid.

In the retirement of Col. Rogers the people lose a faithful and valuable servant, and one who has over a third of a century filled the office, to the satisfaction of almost everybody.

BURLEIGH FALLS.

Messrs. Darcy & Son, the new proprietors of the fine hotel here, are very busy with a rush of summer boarders,—indeed judging from the influx of Americans and others, Darcy & Son seem to run one of the most popular resorts on Stony Lake. For some time they have had under consideration the lighting problem, and in view of the grand water power available, naturally considered electric lighting in all its aspects. After an inspection, however of the Siche Gas plant on Eaglemount Island in the cottage occupied by Mr. Sims, the Messrs. Darcy decided to place their order with the Siche Gas Company, York St., Toronto, and men are now at work installing the plant, so that next week the Kawartha Lakes will have at least one hotel lighted with Siche Gas to offset against their rivals, the Muskoka Lakes, where practically every leading hotel uses Siche Gas.

The Siche Gas Co. has recently issued its third catalogue for 1902, illustrated and anyone interested can obtain a copy by dropping a card to 83 York St., Toronto.

CANADIAN CORDAGE WORKS

Ten Thousand Pounds of Binder Twine Per Day Being Manufactured

$300,000 OF THE $400,000 ALREADY PAID UP

By the 1st of September the Company's Output will be 20,000 lbs. of Binder Twine and 18,000 lbs. of Rope and Cord per day—Equipment - Modern and Up-to-date Throughout. Advantages Enjoyed by the Company Through Exemption From Taxation, Cheap Power, Railway Facilities etc.—This Season's Output Fully Contracted for, and Refusing Orders

No time has been lost in beginning operations at the works of the Canadian Cordage & Manufacturing Co. The same energy and enterprise that has marked the successful organization and establishing of this concern in a financial way, has also characterized the building operations, the installation of the plant and the commencing of operations. It is a going concern now in earnest, and, although the contractors are still at work completing some of the buildings, the main factory is already a hive of industry, turning out tons of binder twine every day, while tens of thousands of dollars worth of raw material and finished product are lying in the great storehouses.

To state facts concisely, some five tons of binder twine are being turned out daily, and shipments are continually going forward to all points, from the "home parts" in this and the neighbouring counties, to the more distant points in the Canadian Northwest, where a large block of the company's stock has been subscribed by the prosperous farmers of that land of great wheat fields. In fact, the company has orders from across the line, and will make some shipments to Uncle Sam's country, although orders have had to be refused. The factory is not running at full capacity, as less than half the binder twine machinery has been installed, while none of the rope and cordage machines have been erected, although they are now here.

Some adequate idea of what the factory will be when fully equipped, as it will be in a few weeks, can be gained from figures. Its capacity will be 6,000,000 pounds of twine and 4,500,000 pounds of rope, lathyarn, etc., a year. This means about nineteen tons of finished product each day, and from present prospects this will not be adequate to meet the demands that will be made on the company. With a subscribed capital of $400,000, divided among four thousand shareholders, the majority of whom are consumers of twine, the company has a steady demand and assured market for their manufacture. Hence the prospects so good at present are but an indication of the future.

The article of twine being made is excellent. The company is manufacturing four grades of twine, and they are justly proud of the goods they are shipping as the first product of their factory. It is a strong, clean, even twine that will give satisfaction and establish the name among all who use it.

The most modern machinery, a splendid factory, experienced and thoroughly competent men in charge, are factors that ensure a first class article. Needless to say, the new plant is a modern one. Then the General Manager, Mr. W. T. Clark, is a gentleman of wide experience in the business, both in the fibre trade in the Philippines and Yucatan and, also, in some of the large factories in the United States. Then Mr. C. F. Holmes, the Superintendent, is also a thoroughly practical and experienced man, and brings to the factory all the benefit of the latest ideas and most approved methods and systems in manufacture. Associated with him are experienced and skilled men as foremen in the several departments. Therefore, well equipped, well officered, and capably superintended throughout, Peterborough's newest industry promises to not only establish a wide name for first class goods, but to extend and develop into one of Canada's largest industries.

It is a big concern now, but it has greater possibilities and, judged in what goes to make a success of modern manufactories, it seems safe to predict that it will make the most of all the vast possibilities that the trade offers.

A VISIT TO THE WORKS.

A Times representative paid a visit to the company's works yesterday, and most interesting was the inspection made of the buildings, the plant and the operations of manufacture. Citizens are now familiar with the magnificent and solid block of buildings that have been erected on the two and a half acres that is enclosed between Lake and Perry streets, and Aylmer street and the railway track. These buildings are all of solid brick, one storey in height, with lantern roof, and lighted by innumerable large windows. They have been substantially built throughout and, planned by Mr. Clark to meet the special demands of the work, are perfectly adapted to the purpose for which they have been reared. The main factory, the boiler house, and the large warehouse, are now completed, and work is underway on the tar house, where lathrope and tar ropes of all kinds will be made. This department will be in a building that will extend across the south end of the main factory and will be the most complete and well equipped building for its purpose that will be found anywhere. The company's offices will be erected to the east of the main building, near the Aylmer street entrance. But it is within the building that one becomes interested.

The immense storehouses or warehouses were first visited. This building, or really buildings, for it is divided into two by a fireproof wall, is situated on the west side of the lot and stands close to the railway track. The railway cars with the raw material run to the very doors, and the great bales of fibre are lifted from the cars into the warehouse, or the neatly packed and securely lashed packages of binder twine are landed from the warehouse into the cars for shipment. This storehouse is 200 feet long by 50 feet in width. As stated, a fireproof wall divides it into two. The south half will be for the manufactured goods, while in the north half will be stored the raw material. At present some hundred thousand dollars worth of fibre are in store. The company is using three kinds, Manilla, from the Philippines, the sisal, brought direct from Yucatan, and New Zealand, from the country of that name. In making binder twine the first grade is made of pure Manilla, while the standard twine is from a combination of the three. There is also the pure sisal twine. These are, of course, priced according to their grade. Some of the twine of the different kinds was lying in the warehouse ready for shipment and when opened and examined it was found to be of excellent appearance, and its quality was further vouched for when the manufacturing process was investigated later.

FOLLOWING THE PROCESS.

From the storehouse the raw material passes into the main factory and reaches what is known as the preparation room. This department is 120 feet by 90 feet, and the machinery here is operated by a 75 h.p. dynamo, insulated in a brick motor house. This idea of a separate motor for each department is an excellent one, as it gives each control of its own motive power. Coming into this preparation room the bales of fibre are opened and the raw material laid out and the oil applied ready for the machines. The great mass of fibre seems an impossible tangle, but order is soon brought out of the great bales. The fibre goes first into a breaker, a machine that draws it out and by coarse combs lays it in some kind of order. Then it goes into a finer breaker, and is still further combed out, as it were, into straight and silky rolls. Then it goes into spreaders, and finally passes through the finisher, a large and truly wonderful machine, which takes fibre from some seventy-eight feeders, and sends it out in regulated streams on the other side. This machine, another of which is now being erected, was imported from Belfast, Ireland, and is the only one of its kind operating in Canada.

The fibre as it comes from this finisher is ready to leave the preparation room. Then it passes into the spinning room, where it goes through the spinners and comes out on spindles in the shape of twine. There are now some fifty spinning machines in this department, and seventy-five more will arrive here and be installed this month. This department or room is 140 feet by 90 feet, and the machines are operated by a 200 h.p. motor, which is isolated in a brick motor house on the east side of the building.

From the spinning room the spindles filled with the twine go to the balling room, where it is made into the balls ready for the harvesters. The balling machines are wonders in the perfect and expeditious way in which they roll the twine. They work automatically when started, and are capable of doing very fast work. As the balls are wound they are turned into carrier boxes, labelled, weighed, sacked and securely lashed with heavy cord ready for the warehouse for shipment. This balling room is 120 feet by 90 feet, and secures its power from a 100 h.p. motor, installed like the others in a brick motor house.

An interesting place is the testing room which occupies a place in a gallery in the balling department. In this testing room the twine is run on to a large revolving rack, where each strand can be examined. Where it looks thin, a piece is cut out, and submitted to a test on a machine which registers its tensile strength. The twine must stand a test of thirty pounds, but this minimum is always exceeded. Manilla twine put to the test failed to break although the machine went its limit and registered 256 lbs. tension. The standard twine selected from an apparent weak spot went to 125 lbs. This testing is done in order to ensure a satisfactory article leaving the factory, and try to save the harvester from being forced into profanity by frequent breaks and the attendant delays in the harvest fields.

In the balling room the machines for rope and cordage are being erected, and the heavy castings and parts of these machines were on the floor. As stated, binder twine is the only manufacture now being turned out, and the process has been hurriedly followed. But what of the waste? What of the rejected lengths of twine, the short pieces of fibre and the other waste from the machines? It is much the same as in the packing house, where it is said every part of the hog is utilized but the squeal. So here every particle of the raw material is used. The rejected pieces of twine are used to make up the lashings for the packages; the waste from the fibre is made up in the same way, and the dust from the machines is used to fire the boilers. This is all the fuel used for present purposes, and will go a long way to keep down coal bills in the cold season.

A picking house, of brick with an iron roof, will be erected near the boiler house at the north-west corner of the preparation room where the machine that manufactures the waste pieces of fibre will be erected.

To the south of the main factory and entered from the balling and rope room is the machine shop, where the tools necessary for the factory and the machines for making repairs are found. This shop is 40 feet by 30 feet, and is supplied with power by a 10 h.p. motor.

It will thus be seen that the factory will be the most complete in its equipment, and is perfect in the plan and design followed in installing the plant.

GENERAL EQUIPMENT.

The general features in the equipment of the works are most modern, and have been chosen with efficiency and economy in view.

Take, first, the heating. The works are heated throughout by the Sturtevant hot air system. Briefly described this is a system by which the heat is driven by a large 8-foot fan through large pipes running overhead to all parts of the building. For this system a 125 h.p. boiler, built by the Wm. Hamilton Mfg. Co., is installed in the boiler house which stands at the north-east corner of the factory. The steam passes into an immense system of coils and the heat thus generated is caught by the large fan and forced into the large pipe that enters the factory. The fan is driven by a 40 h.p. motor. It is a most efficient system, and is specially valuable from an economical standpoint, as it is estimated that the company will heat the factory at a cost of $500 a year less than any other system.

Then, the system of fire protection is as near perfect as modern ideas can devise. On a high steel trestle at the south side of the factory is a great tank holding 25,000 gallons of water. This supplies the water for the sprinkler system that extends all over the works. When a fire breaks out the

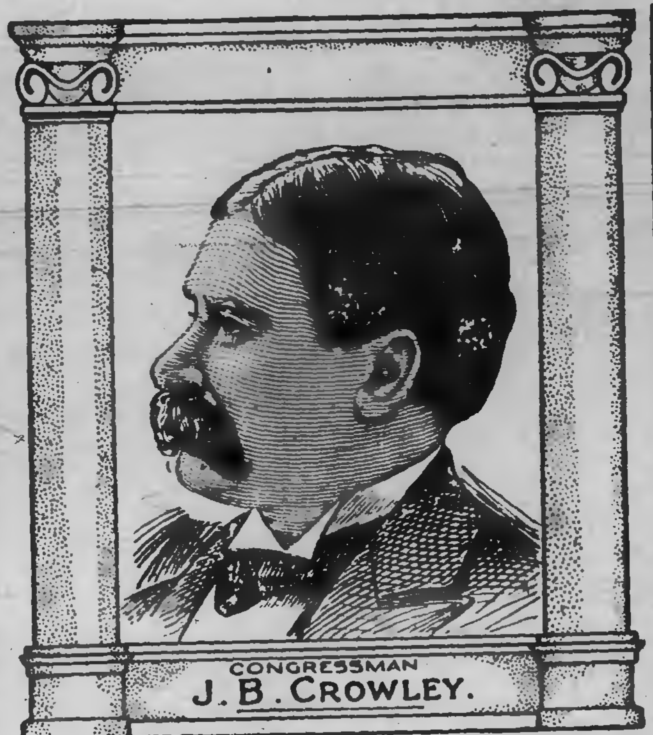
CONGRESSMAN CROWLEY

Uses Pe-ru-na in His Family For Catarrhal and Nervous Affections.



Hon. Joseph B. Crowley, Congressman from Illinois, writes from Robinson, Ill., the following praise for the great catarrhal tonic, Peruna. Congressman Crowley says:

"After giving Peruna a fair trial I can cheerfully recommend your remedy to anyone suffering with coughs, colds and la grippe, and all catarrhal complaints.

"Mrs. Crowley has taken a number of bottles of Peruna on account of nervous troubles. It has proven a strong tonic and lasting cure. I can cheerfully recommend it."—J. B. CROWLEY.

No other remedy invented by man has ever received as much praise from men of high station as Peruna. Over forty members of Congress have tried it and recommended it to suffering humanity. They use it themselves to guard against the effects of the intense strain of public life; to ward off the ill effects of the changeable climate of Washington. They keep it in their homes for family use. They recommend it to their neighbors, and they do not hesitate in public print to declare their appreciation and endorsement of this greatest of modern remedies.

It is exactly as Congressman Crowley says: "Peruna is a swift and sure remedy for coughs, colds and la grippe and all catarrhal complaints. It is an excellent remedy in all nervous troubles. It never fails to prove itself a powerful tonic and a lasting cure." This is what Congressman Crowley says, and this is what thousands of other people are saying all over the United States.

Congressman Romulus Z. Linney from Taylorsville, N. C., writes: "My secretary had as bad a case of catarrh as I ever saw, and since he has taken one bottle of Peruna he seems like a different man."—Romulus Z. Linney.

Congressman A. T. Goodwyn, Robinson Springs, Ala., writes: "I have now used one bottle of Peruna and am a well man today.—A. T. Goodwyn.

U. S. Senator W. N. Roach from Larimore, N. D., writes: "I have used Peruna as a tonic. It has greatly helped me in strength, vigor and appetite."

Congressman H. W. Ogden from Benton, La., writes: "I can conscientiously recommend your Peruna."—H. W. Ogden.

Congressman H. W. Smith from Murphysboro, Ill., writes: "I have taken one bottle of Peruna for my catarrh and I feel very much benefited."—Geo. W. Smith.

Congressman David Meekison from Napoleon, O., writes: "I have used several bottles of Peruna and feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head."—David Meekison.

Senator Mallory, of Pensacola, Fla., writes: "I have used your excellent remedy, Peruna, and have recommended it both as a tonic and a safe catarrh remedy."—Stephen R. Mallory.

Senator M. C. Butler, ex-Governor of South Carolina, writes: "I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble."—M. C. Butler.

Senator W. V. Sullivan from Oxford, Miss., writes: "I take pleasure in recommending your great national catarrh cure, Peruna, as the best I have ever tried."—W. V. Sullivan.

Senator J. M. Thurston from Omaha, Neb., writes: "Peruna entirely relieved me of a very irritating cough."—J. M. Thurston.

Congressman H. G. Worthington from Nevada, writes: "I have taken one bottle of Peruna and it has benefited me immensely."—H. G. Worthington.

Congressman Howard from Ft. Payne, Ala., writes: "I have taken Peruna for la grippe, and I take pleasure in recommending Peruna as an excellent remedy."—M. W. Howard.

Congressman Willis Brewer from Haynesville, Ala., writes: "I have used one bottle of Peruna for lassitude, and I take pleasure in recommending it."—Willis Brewer.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

A TIMELY APPEAL TO THE MOTHER LAND

Will Canada Become Americanized? is Now a Live Question

SOME RATHER STARTLING FACTS AND FIGURES

A Stiffer Tarriff Against the United States Demonstrated—Britain's Duty to Her Chief Colony

Special to The Times.

London, July 21.—Shall Canada become annexed to the United States or form a closer commercial union with the United Kingdom? is the alternative exhaustively discussed by Mr. W. Frank Hathaway in the current number of the Contemporary Review. Its publication will be of timely assistance in the deliberations of the Colonial Premiers in London. The Federal tariff barriers have virtually closed the markets of the United States against certain Canadian products. The writer says this exclusion has not yet created a desire for political union with the Republic, but, in the opinion of many, the desire for such a relation with the United States will grow among Canadians unless commercial conditions and currents change. The discouraging effect of the Wilson and Dingley Tariff acts upon Canadian trade with the United States, is pointedly illustrated by the writer's citations of facts and figures. He recalls that time was when Canada annually exported to the United States $2,500,000 worth of eggs. The duty of 5 cents a dozen has had, and was intended to have a prohibitive effect upon this increasing trade. The result is that in 1901 only $7185 worth of eggs was sent to the United States from the Dominion. With respect to the general trade between the two countries it is remarked:

"In 1886 the United States bought of Canada to the amount of $44,000,000; in 1901, $72,000,000, an increase of 64 per cent. This includes Yukon gold and goods in transit. In 1886 we bought of the United States to the amount of $23,500,000; in 1901 $119,000,000, an increase of 318 per cent. We buy nearly three times more in value from the United States than we do from the United Kingdom."

The United States are now selling to Canadians farm products having a value three times greater than the value of the Canadian farm products sold to the United States. The neighboring American market furnished by more than 70,000,000 consumers, possessing great purchasing power, the writer laments, has been to a very great extent closed against the Canadian farmers:

"our low tariff and the too large free list are daily making Canadian farmers yearn for the market of the 70,000,000. We are deprived of the United States market, and yet, at the same time, the United States farmers are assisted by the present tariff in beating the Canadian farmers, * * * The flag follows trade, and our longings to pay for that $119,000,000 worth of United States products in the like value of farm, forest and sea products will incline our hearts to forget the law of blood and follow the baser born twentieth century law of trade."

The one-third rebate of duty allowed by the Canadian tariff to British importations, the writer confesses, "has failed" to increase British importations appreciably, for the imports from the United Kingdom "have increased only 7 2.4 per cent. since 1896, whereas from the United States the increase was 318

The American investments in the Canadian coal, iron, oil and lumber industries, the contributor suggests, will tend to "Americanize" Canadian employees and to separate them from "British rule Canadian institutions." The American trusts, too, are invading the Dominion, "and this, with the desire of the Canadian farmers to get into the United States markets, may further develop the idea of political union with the United States."

To check these tendencies, to forestall the possible drift of Canadian feeling toward annexation with the United States and preferential trade within the British Empire: * * *

"We are British Canadians, and we feel that now is the time, for the Motherland to strengthen the colonial ties and make the Empire. The present unsympathetic attitude of British statesmen toward Canada, shown more particularly in the failure to readjust their tariff and reciprocate our preferential rebate, is unworthy of their supposed sagacity and foresight."

Fives Lives Lost and Dozen Injured in Winchester Houses Converted into Matchwood

Special to The Times.

Chesterville, July 19.—As described in despatches to the Times last night, this district was the scene of an unparalleled cyclone in the experience of Canada. Winchester, Finch and Osnabruck townships were its feild, and in the half hour during which it raged five persons were killed, a dozen injured, and about $200,000 worth of damage was done. The settlement of Ormond was the point where the storm first appeared, and its course was than in a south-east direction to the St. Lawrence river.

THE CASUALTIES.

The following is the list of dead and injured, as far as known—

Dead.

Mrs. John Q. Kearns, Chesterville, married woman, aged 33 years.

Edward Kearns, Chesterville, aged 7, son of the above.

Miss Macgregor, aged 25.

Mrs. Nelson Hart, Grantley, aged 28.

Injured.

John W. Kearns, Chesterville, fractured hip.

Norah Kearns, aged 12, compound fracture right arm, fracture left leg, and concussion of brain; recovery doubtful.

Marguerite Kearns, aged 4, fracture left arm, face and legs injured.

AT THE KEARNS HOMESTEAD.

One of its worst outbreaks of fury occurred at hte farm of John H. Kearns, which is situated about four miles from the village of Chesterville and as a result Mr. Kearn's wife and seven-year-old daughter are lying dead, a twelve-year old daughter is not expected to recover, and the father and a four-year-old daughter are tossing with fractured limbs on a bed of pain, and a deep hole, 18 by 24 feet, marks the site of what was once a comfortable one-storey dwelling. The house was carried off bodily and spread in splinters hundreds of yards away, and the remains of a barn, which stood north of it, lie in a twisted mass. The roof and sides of it are scattered over the adjoining fields in the form of matchwood.

At the time of the storm's advent John H Kearn, the head of the family, was in the open, and Mrs. Kearns, with the three children, were in the house. Mrs. Kearns, with three little ones, were carried away with the house. The mother was thrown into a potato patch on the adjoining farm, and her battered remains, with a cruel wound on the temple, was found when the storm was over. Some distance away, Edward Kearn, her seven-year-old son, fell with a broken neck. In another direction, Norah, aged twelve, and Marguerite, aged four, were flung with brutal force and their limbs fractured.

A FATHER'S FUTILE EFFORTS.

The father, who had rushed to the rescue of his loved ones, was caugh up by the storm and tossed hither and thither like a cork. Finally he, too was flung to the earth, and lay with a fractured thigh, his hands dug into the earth to keep himself from further buffetings.

When the storm had ceased willing hands carried the corpses of the mother and little boy to the house of Richard Kelly, a neighboring farmer, and the surviving members of the family were borne there also on improvised stretchers, and afterwards the two dead bodies were taken into the village of Chesterville and prepared for interment, which takes place to-morrow. The father and two daughters are still at the Kelly homestead, and it is said that Norah cannot recover.

MR. KEARN'S EXPERIENCE.

Although racked with pain, Mr. Kearns gave a reporter a very graphic story of the disaster last evening. He said—"I saw the storm coming when it was about half a mile away, and I started for the barn to turn the cattle and horses loose, but the building was blown down. When I turned to get my family to a place of safety the big funnel-shaped cloud then seemed to b only 50 yeards away and it was carrying trees, boards, and materials of all kinds, and I could not reach the house in time, and threw myself down on the ground. At last the storm struck me, and I was carried away with it, I was thrown down and picked up several times, and struck by boards and timber several times, and something struck me over the hip and broke it. I began to fancy I would be killed, and the heavy coat I wore was torn from me. Under my arms I looked around and saw no sign of the house and barn. I called for my wife, but there was no response. Several times I tried to get up and failed, but at last crawled to a couple of pieces of board and used them as crutches and I crawled around slowly and heard crying. It was my youngest child, Marguerite, crying for mother, and farther away lay Norah, aged 12, and I supposed she was dead I moved towards her and came acros the body of my boy Edward. He was stone dead, and then I moved around to find my wife, but I got sick and faint, and lay down beside my little boy. I felt I must leave things as they were. When the storm was over they found my wife, and I have another little girl, Genevieve, but she was at her uncle's, and so escaped."

IN THE DEBRIS.

cannot be imagined; not a stick is

A more complete picture of ruin the the site of the Kearns homestead left standing, and the household furniture, shattered into fragments, is spread far and wide, hundreds of yards away and the cookstove was carried away by the storm and has not yet been found since. A sewing machine was split into fragments, heavy farm implements were rent asunder and carried in every direction, and a few fowls were last night roosting on the debris of the barn.

About 25 rods from the site of John Kearns' house is the one-storey frame dwelling of his uncle, James Kearns. It was badly wrecked by the storm, the roof being blown off and a hole knocked in the west end, and the barn was also demolished. Mrs. James Kearns and her three daughters were more or less injured, and two cattle and a horse were killed outright.

Shortly before the storm James Kearns, his wife, and two of his daughters, Alice and Julia, were out milking in the cow stable, which is attached to the barn. The mother and two girls went toward the house, and Mr. Kearns went on milking, but in looking out of the window saw the funnel-shaped cloud coming from the west, and just as the women reached the front door the storm burst upon them and they were thrown down and carried away. Mrs. Kearns being badly cut about the face and legs. Julia, who was blown from the front doo into the orchard, also received injuries. "The stable went like a feather," said Mr. James Kearns, in speaking of what happened, "and I was thrown among the cows. The wind carried the animals and myself for a distane of twelve feet. When I collected my senses the roof of my barn had gone and I was looking up at the sky." Th interior of Mr. James Kearns' hous wa sturned of pay-turvy, and some of the household furniture deposited on the treetops, two hundred yards distant."

AT MR. GRADY'S

Two miles in a south-eastery direction from the Kearns farm stood the dwelling and barn of Mr. Michael Grady. Mr. Grady was in Chesterville when the cyclone rushed down and his wife and four children and the hired man were in the barn milking The building is 72 feet long by 21 feet wide, and it went down like a house of cards. The occupants escaped by a miracle. Some falling timbers were caught on a couple of uprights and made a sort of shelter, and into this Mrs. Grady, the children, and the hired man crawled for safety. Sally Grady, the four-year-old child, was struck about her head, but her condition is not serious. Ten out of fourteen cows in the barn were killed.

KILLED IN A BARN.

William Breckstead worked fo Simon Droppo, a farmer in the Township of Finch. The barn was blown down and Breckstead fatally hurt b falling timbers.

Miss Macgregor belonged to Ormon settlement, and no particulars are obtainable yet as to how she met her death.

Mrs. Nelson Hart was reported to b suffering only from a fractured hip this morning, but last night the new was brought to Chesterville that sh had died.

RELIEF COMMITTEE APPOINTED.

A meeting of residents of Chesterville was held here last night, in order to see what relief measures could be devised for the sufferers from th disaster. A committee of men was appointed to go through the devastated area ad renport to a mass meeting to be held on Tuesday evening. No accurate statement of the financial is procurable, but it is estimated they will easily amount to $200,000.

Herman Shaver's brick house, about five miles from Chestesville, was blown down and the furniture completely destroyed, and only the parlor was left intact. Mr. Shaver was buried in brick up to his waist, but escaped serious injuries. The other members of the family crawled under a table and escaped injury.

THE RETURNING BOERS AVOID SYMPATHIZERS

British Eyes are on Them and Their Future is at Stake--They Sail for New York Monday.

Special to The Times.

London, July 19.—A Vienna despatch to The Times quotes Count Matsukata, the Japanese statesman and financial reformer, as saying he was greatly struck by the enormous extent of British economic resources, and was convinced of the soundness of the British financial system. He thought Englishmen were perhaps too inclined to rest content with their laurels, but said that nevertheless the broad and sound basis of their industry and commerce formed a favorable contrast with certain other States where the momentary rate of progress was greater, but where there was risk of financial difficulties.

London, July 19.—A Johannesburg correspondent, in referring to the appointment of Sir Arthur Lawley as Lieut.-Governor of the Transvaal Colony, says that the necessity for such an appointment had long been forseen there, as the strain of administrative work on Lord Milner was too arduous for any one man. The appointment of Sir Arthur Lawley has been well received, as his popularity in Rhodesia was remembered. It is supposed he will reside at Pretoria.

London, July 19.—A Rome despatch says that when King Victor Emmanuel and Emperor Nicholas of Russia parted, the latter intimated they would again meet at Rome, while the King promised the Czar a hearty welcome. The Times' correspondent says the Czar's visit is expected early next year.

New York, July 19.—The Boers released from the British prison camp at Bermuda, who arrived here on Monday afternoon on the steamer Pretoria on their way home to South Africa, spent yesterday trying to find out the best and quickest way to get there. Nearly all of them finally concluded to take the steamer Tartar Prince of the Prince Line, which will sail a week from to-day from Brooklyn for South Africa, landing at either Cape Town or Durban.

Gen. Cronje and Gen. Wessels, under the pilotage of several American sympathizers, went to see about transportation for himself and his compatriots. When they returned with the intelligence it was received with the greatest satisfaction. Sixty-one of the Boers, including the officers, are staying at the Union Square Hotel. Few of them cared to go from without the shadow of it yesterday, but paced up and down the corridor and the sidewalks outside, peacefully puffing on their pipes and occasionally answering questions of people who stopped and talked to them.

So long as those questions did no bear on the war they were generally answered. When it came to the war and the peace terms those interrogators were silent. Some of the Boer officers who talked with reporters when they arrived were much disturbed when they saw interviews with them in print. As one of them explained, this was because of the fear that it would affect their interests in South Africa, and prejudice the British Government against them.

"We cannot be too careful," said this officer. "The British are watching us who return to our homes very closely. They tried in every possible way to dissuade us from going by way of New York, promising us that a transport would arrive to take us directly home very soon. We could not wait, and so they let us go. But we were told that it would not be at all good for us if we did the least thing to excite sympathy in America.

"The papers here are watched by British agents and when we arrive in South Africa everything we have said or done will be gone over. With most of us our sole idea is to get back and build up our homes. To be allowed to do that in peace is what we want. On the least little excuse we may b prevented from doing so and that is why we must be careful."

Another Boer went so far as to give his excuse for not talking that be believed British secret service agents were watching the party in the hotel. No one else saw them. This Boer explained that for this reason they did not want any public show of sympathy and have refused several invitations to receptions, and would not go to see President Roosevelt.

Generals Cronje and Wessels went down town yesterday afternoon and looked around Wall street. On the car they were recognized and some persons shook hands with them. The Generals did not offer any objection then, but they said later that they did not like it because it was in the way of making them conspicuous, which they want to avoid. On account of their rank Gen. Cronje and Gen. Wessels are even more fearful than the others of exciting suspicion.

Most of the party said they liked New York but that they wanted to get home, and all of them showed thi longing. They said it would be hard to amuse themselves until next Wednesday.

BOER SPIRIT NOT BROKEN.

Pretoria, July 19.—There is a serious reaction from the optimism that prevailed at the end of the war There are now evidences everywhere of the Boer determination to continue their own nationality. The immediate opening of Dutch schools before the British have organized a system of education is advocated.

The Boers who surrendered in the course of the war and took service as national scouts under the British are objects of the bitterest hatred. Reports of beating, shooting and boycotting them are frequent. The Transvaal and Free State colors ar freely worn, as are also the letters "Z.A.R.," similar to hte British regimental badges.

The Boers demand the appointment of burghers on the Executive Council and Repatriation committees.

TO RESTOCK BOER FARMS.

New Orleans, July 19.—A cable message from England announces that the British will reopen their horse and mule depot in New Orleans for the purpose of restocking the Boer farms. Yesterday when the stables located at Chalmette by the British were about to be destroyed a cable message was received asking that this be not done. W. J. Hammond, a steamship agent who went to England to try and secure the renewal of the South African horse trade, cabled today that he and Capt. Marsham, who had charge of the business, were on their way to New Orleans to open it.

Malt Breakfast Food

Has Captured Canadian Palates and Hearts

It Pleases the Whole Family, Young and Old

Malt Breakfast Food has won the day and captured the palates and hearts of all Canadians. Lovers of pure and true health foods quickly discovered that Malt Breakfast Food possessed many health virtues unknown to other grain foods. It gave entire satisfaction and pleasure to old and young; it kept the strong and well happy and vigorous, and formed flesh, muscle and bone for the weak. For these reasons Malt Breakfast Food has won the day, and will ever be the favorite breakfast dish. All grocers.

BATTLE NEAR AT BARCELONA

President Castro Three at the Head of the Venezuelan Army

Washington, July 19.—Herbert W. Bowen, United States Minister to Venezuela, has cabled the State Department that it is absolutely impossible to obtain accurate information in Caracas as to what is going on at the places where the revolutionists are most active. He has accordingly directed W. W. Russell, the secretary of his legation, to go to Barcelona for the purpose of observing conditions and making reports.

President Castro is at Barcelona in command of his troops, and it is expected that a decisive battle will occur there. The gunboat Marietta will take Mr. Russell from La Guayra to Barcelona.

Murderer's Execution Stayed

Special to The Times.

Jersey City, N. J., July 19.—This was the happiest day for George W. Taylor, the colored murderer, since he was first locked up in the county jail. It was to have been his day of execution, but an eleventh hour stay granted by the court assures him of a further lease of life until October at least. Taylor's crime was the murder of his aunt, Minnie Taylor, in this city last December.

Czar Favors Concessions

St. Petersburg, July 19.—M. de Witte, the Minister of Finance, in an interview today declared that the Czar, with a view to affording the people of the provinces still further freedom of expression regarding the condition of the peasantry had directed the local committees of the commission appointed for the purpose of probing social problems to raise any questions they pleased, in addition to those provided for in the programme of inquiry.

To Command British Fleet

Special to The Times.

Halifax, N. S., July 19.—H. M. S. Ariadne, the vessel which relieves the Crescent as flagship of the North American and West Indies squadron, arrived today from Portsmouth, England, and the transfer of the command of the fleet from Admiral Sir Frederick Bedford, K.C.B., to Vice Admiral Archibald Lucius Douglas is taking place. The Crescent, with Sir Frederick on board, will sail this evening for London.

SHARP COMPETITION IN SOUTH AFRICAN TRADE

Freight Rates From England Undercut In United States

Chamber of Mines Members, at Johannesburg, Are Advocating a Coast Duty on Dynamite, which, it is Claimed, Will Create a Worse Monopoly Than Kruger'

Johannesburg, Transvaal, July 19—At a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce to-day, called to receive the British Trade Commissioners, a member read a cable despatch which he had received, offering freight from New York to Natal at 10 shillings per ton. Other members of the Chamber said they had received similar offers. This rate is not remunerative, but is the outcome of competition. It is 21s. 3d. below the lowest freight rate from England. The merchants do not see how the Americans are able to offer such low rates. Nevertheless, they are overhauling their stock to see what they can order in the United States.

A majority of the members of the Executive Committee of the Chamber of Mines are advocating a coast duty of 5s. to 7s. 6d. per case of dynamite in order to protect the local factory. The proper proposal is strongly opposed as tending to create a worse monopoly than existed during the Kruger regime and to establish a precedent in the direction of protection.

Bobs Many Advantages

Bob. Ind.: A gentleman in Pittsburg wishes to inquire about the lakes and asks what there is to be caught. The gentleman is requested to pack his grip and come right along, for there is more catching to be done here than he has ever dreamed of. Why in the canal alone, only a short stretch that runs in front of the office of this great journal, there is all the catching any man can wish for. To commence with, and it commences at 6.15 a.m., there are three boats to catch, and the efforts made by fully twenty per cent. of the catchers would make a horse laugh. A Washington lady the other day caught seven perch, thirteen sunfish and two mudpouts, and little Tommy Schemer got into the river to his neck and caught the tarnationist old larroping of his life. He has been laying on his little tummy ever since, and it happened three days ago. A gentleman from Buffalo caught four fine bass in less than ten minutes on Monday last, and the lockmaster caught a cord and a half of prime drift wood. Last season a young lady, none too young either, caught a husband while sitting on the wharf, waiting for the Saturday night boat. She would be glad to trade him off for a second hand carpet sweeper, or mostly any old thing now, but she caught him all the same, and you wouldn't have classed her as much of a catcher. Then a gentleman from Syracuse got into a boat the other morning on his first fishing expedition. He was real pretty to look at. Costume was the very thing, and brand new. He was a daisy, and said he didn't see any reason why he couldn't row. He caught a crab on the second stroke, and when he came up from under the boat, he wanted to know if a water spout had struck them, or what was it, any how. It is all right, dear boy, if catching is what you are after. Go to your nearest railway station and ask for a Kawartha Lake Tourist ticket, to Bobcaygeon, and you can rely on a round of catching that will keep you wondering for a year or more

BRAVE GENERAL WHITE'S MESSAGE TO BULLER

The Full Text of His Reply to the Now Famous Despatch from Buller

CAPITULATION TO BOERS HIS LAST THOUGHT.

He Told Buller to Secure Every Man Who Would Enlist in the Colonies Rather Than Think of Surrendering Ladysmith

The latest London papers to hand contain the complete text of the letter in regard to the siege of Ladysmith made public by General Buller, together with despatches forwarded to him for publication by the War Office. The complete document is as follows:

"11, Lowndes Square, W., July 7th 1902.

"I send you the enclosed document in the exact form in which it has been supplied to me by the Secretary of State for War for publication, and I shall be much obliged if you will kindly circulate it to all newspapers, together with this letter, as I wish to supplement the document with the remark, that I was delighted to receive the answer of the Secretary of State for War of the 16th December, 1899, because it assured me that forces which I had been apprehensive were pledged in another and less important direction would be at my disposal for operations in Natal. Thanking you in anticipation.—I am, sir, yours faithfully, Redvers Buller, General."

From Sir R. Buller to the Secretary of State for War.

Chieveley Camp, Dec. 15, 1899

A serious question is raised by my failure to-day. I do not consider tha I am strong enough to relieve Ladysmith. Colenso is a fortress, which, i not captured by a rush, could I think only be taken by a siege. Within th eight miles from the point of attac there is no water, and in this weathe that exhausts infantry. The place i fully entrenched. I do not think w saw either a gun or a Boer all day but the fire brought to bear on u was very heavy. The infantry wer willing enough to fight, but the intens heat absolutely exhausted them. I consider I ought to let Ladysmith go and to occupy a good position for th defence of South Natal, and so le time help us. But I feel I ought t consult you on such a step. Twenty thousand men, I consider, faced us to day; both in arms and position the had the advantage. They admit, in deed, that they suffered severely, but my men are dispirited because they have not seen a dead Boer.

My losses have not been very heavy much heavier, indeed, I could hav made them, but the moment I failed to get on the run the result would have been the same. I was beaten I now feel I cannot say that with m available force I can relieve Lady smith, and I suggest that for me t occupy a defensive position and fight it out in a country better suited to our tactics is the best thing I can do.

BULLER URGED TO TRY AGAIN.

Secretary of State for War.
General Sir R. Buller.
War Office, 16th Dec. 1899.

The abandonment of White's forc and its consequent surrender is re garded by the Government as a national disaster of the greatest magni tude. We would urge you to devis another attempt to carry out its re lief, not necessarily via Colenso, making use of the additional men now arriving if you think fit.

HIS MESSAGE TO SIR GEORGE WHITE.

From Sir R. Buller to Sir G. White.
16th Dec. 1899.

I tried Colenso yesterday, but failed. The enemy is too strong for my force except with siege operations, and those will take one month to prepare. Can you last so long? If not, how many days can you give me to take up defensive position? After which I suggest you firing away as much ammunition as you can. I can remain here if you have alternate suggestion but unaided I cannot break in. I find my infantry cannot fight more than ten miles away from camp, and then onl yif water can be got, and it is scarce here.

[Note.—In this subeqyent message of 17th December Sir R. Buller said th above message had been signalled correctly, but asked to make the following correction: Strike out from "I not how many" down to "after which" inclusive and substitute "How many days can you hold out." Add to the end of message: "Whatever happens, recollect to burn your cipher, decipher and code books, and all deciphered messages."]

'Message of 16th December as altered by that of 17th December, 1899.

I tried Colenso yesterday, but failed, enemy is too strong for my force except with siege operations, and these will take one full month to prepare. Can you last so long? How many days can you hold out? I suggest you firing away as much ammunition as you can and making best terms you can. I can remain here if you have alternativ caugreution, but unaided I cannot break in. I find my infantry cannot fight more than ten miles from camp, and then only if water can be got, and it is scarce here. Whatever happens, recollest to burn you cipher, decipher, and code books and all deciphered messages.

A BRAVE ANSWERS.

Yours of to-day received and understood. My suggestion is that you take up strongest available position that will enable you to keep touch of the enemy, and harass him constantly with artillery fire, and in other ways as much as possible. I can make food last for much longer than a month, and will not think of making terms till I am forced to. You may have hit enemy harder than you think. All our native spies report that your artillery fire made considerable impression on enemy. Have your losses been heavy? If you lose touch of enemy it will immensely increase his opportunities of crushing me, and have worse effect elsewhere. While you are in with him, and in communication with me, he has both of our forces to reckon with. Make every effort possible, including India, and enlist fort to get reinforcements as eary as every man in both colonies who will and can ride. Things may look brighter. The loss of 12,000 men here would be a heavy blow to England. We must not yet think of it. I fear I could not cut my way to you. Enteric fever is increasing here. There are now 108 cases all within last month. Answer fully. I am keeping everything secret for the present till I know your intentions.

In reference to the above telegrams forwarded to us by Sir Redvers Buller for publication we are advised by the War Office that the telegram addressed to Sir R. Buller to Lord Lansdowne on December 15, was paraphrased for the protection of the cipher before being printed, this being the course adopted at the beginning of the war. Sir R. Buller has, however, supplied the War Office with the "ipsissima verba" of the telegram from the records in his possession. From the comparison of the two it is apparent the sense is preserved.

Sir Redvers Buller to Secretary of State for War.

Chieveley, 15th Dec.

My failure to-day raises a serious question. I do not think I am strong enough to releve White. Colenso is fortress which I think if not taken on a rush could only be taken by a siege. There is no water within eight miles of the point of attack, and in this weather that exhausts infantry. The place is fully entrenched. I do not think either a Boer or a gun was seen by us all day. Yet the fire brought to bear was very heavy. Our infantry was quite willing to fight, but were absolutely exhausted by the intense heat.

My view is that I ought to let Ladysmith go, and occupy good positions for the defence of South Natal. But this is a step on which I ought to consult you. I consider we were in the face of 20,000 men to-day. They had the advantage both in arms and position. They admit they suffered severely, but my men have not seen a dead Boer, and that dispirits them. My losses have been very heavy. I could could have made them heavier, but the result would have been the same; the moment I failed to get in with the men I was beat.

I now feel that I cannot say I can relieve Ladysmith with my available force, and the best thing I can suggest is that I should occupy defensive positions and fight it out in a country better suited to our tactics.

The Savings Bank of Health

Is lots of red and vitalizing blood to nourish and invigorate the body. If your blood is thin and watery use "Ferrozone." It supplies the necessary elements, such as phosphorus and iron, and quickly restores lost strength and spirits. Ferrozone is an unequalled restorative for the tired the sick and the run down; it stimulates appetite, aids digestion, soothes the nerves, and makes the system too healthy for disease to exist. No tonic does so much good in a short time as Ferrozone. Get it to-day from any druggist for 50 cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50. N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

APSLEY.

The glorious Twelfth was duly celebrated by L.O.L., No. 1672, and North Star No. 74, L.T.B., of Apsley. Both lodges turned out strong and after the usual business, formed in procession headed by their respective fife and drum bands and banners, marched up the principal streets and the nto the picnic grounds, where tables had been arranged for the dinner, which was under the management of Bro. T. J. Wilson, and Tommy knows how to get up a good dinner. There was an abundance of good things, and the waiters were kept busy attending to the wants of about 300. After dinner the people dispersed over the grounds and enjoyed themselves in various ways, swinging and music, and the tug or war between the Orangemen and True Blues resulted in a victory for the latter. Bro McIlmoyle was in charge of the booth and did a rushing business. Visitors were impressed with the appearance of the True Blues, dressed alike with their cap and badges and their handsome banner they were a credit to any community Instead of a concert in the evening an impromtu dance was gotten up in the Hotel Brunswick, and the young people tripped the light fantastic until 11 p.m.

On Tuesday eve, 8th inst., L.O.L. No. 1672, held an Arch meeting to advance six of the brethren to that degree. They were assisted by several brethren from Coe Hill lodge. Lunch was served at 1 a.m., and the work was finished at 4 a.m.

On Monday we had several severe electrical storms, and heavy rain and hail, the lightning doing considerable damage, but so far as heard no loss of life. The town hall was slightly damaged. A tree was shattered near the residence of Mr. Shewen, and the lightning played strange freaks at Mrs. Wilsons. It struck the ground at the corner of the kitchen coming up through the floor tearing several boards up and completely upturned a table near which Mrs. Wilson had been standing only a minute previous, she having just started with Mrs. Dunn to enter the other room. Both received a severe shock and will not soon forget their experience.

CANADA'S GREAT DESTINY

The tale is growing old—the Dominion is advancing by leaps and bounds. Let us now say it without laughing — the Northwest is filling up. The Conservatives used to say it, and it was a fiction; the Liberals said it, and the census gave the figment the lie; but we have the later facts—the observations of travellers, the records of agents, the statistics of the countries from which the emigrants proceed. Then we have capital coming in—American capital, which is seeking for investment. It ought to be English capital, but English capital got a little scared just as it got scared over Australia, but, at any rate, we are getting the capital. The mines are all working. We are getting coal in all directions. We are making steel billets. We are making steel rails. We will be building ships the day after tomorrow. And always the girding of the country with steel rails goes on. The wilderness is being subdued. We are an industrial country. And this is due to the Liberals and, (in a slight degree) Providence! The German Emperor used to say: "Me and God." The Liberals say, "The Liberal party and (obscurely and remotely) Divine Providence." The art of government is not to do anything. He governs best who interferes least. We are working out our destiny. It matters little which party is in power. We have the situation; we have the opportunity. We have the materials and the space. We cannot help ourselves—we are potentially a wealthy people.

SIR WILFRID'S MISTAKE

It may be said with truth that the British Empire has, in the main, been maintained by the moral idea, rather than by its armed forces. At the same time it is strange that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has not grasped the fact that military force is necessary to retain that which has been won by hard effort. How long would India belong to England if the armed forces were withdrawn from that country? How long would Canada remain in her present independent position if she were suddenly thrown upon her own resources and the world knew that she could no longer depend upon the army and navy of Great Britain to defend her? There will come a day, let us hope, when war will be no more, and the golden dream of the prophet shall be realized; but in the meantime the nations will go on perfecting their armaments, and even England may have to adopt the law of conscription to produce the kind of army which is required by modern conditions. When one draws a picture of a regenerated world,

"Lapped in universal law,"

'tis noble indeed, and one may be permitted to hope for its realization, but the tiger still lingers, and we still need the long range gun, which still carry twelve miles. Arts and commerce; the triumph of the graces of life—'tis fine; but we saw two Christian nations engaged in mutual slaughter yesterday. The colonial conference will not settle the military question as between Great Britain and the colonies, but force is potent, and it will be absolutely necessary for Canada, before long, to determine the character of the force which she is willing to maintain—first, for her own defence; secondly, for the defence of the Empire, all of whose forces have been at her services, without return of any kind. In a word, it will not do much longer to trust to mere sentiment; there must be a formal arrangement between the colonies and the Mother Country by which there will be a proportionate contribution to the Imperial defence. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is not the representative of the Dominion when he takes the ground that Canada has nothing to do with the military question. The vast majority of the people are very much alive to the military question. If our population was polled to-morrow it would be found that with the exception of a small element in Quebec, it would express the opinion that the time had come when Canada should contribute a reasonable share to the maintenance of the Imperial forces. There would perhaps be the question of representation involved, which might be difficult to deal with, but there must be, sooner or later, a formal bond between all parts of the empire, which otherwise is bound to fall to pieces. Sentiment is admirable, but sentiment backed up by definite engagements, of an honorable character, can be regarded as an abiding force.

A report from Ottawa says that no less than 467 applications for knighthood were received by the ministers in anticipation of the coronation's shower of chivalric distinctions. A fearful crop of rank hopes must have been blasted in the democratic garden.

Alligator Stories.

The game books kept by all the principal hostelries at Tampa Bay make exciting reading for the gentle stranger, in whom the various entries conjure up vivid reminiscences of Indian jungle or African river, where one goes

A-swimming in the muddy Nile,
And swims into a crocodile.

And while there is great excitement in playing a 150-pound tarpon, in netting a big catch of mullet, or in bringing down an Imperial eagle, the sportsman who goes after alligators feels he is really emulating the hunter who returns from the jungle laden with tiger skins and elephant tusks, and this thrill can be experienced by anyone who finds his way to Tampa Bay, where alligators of seven, nine and eleven feet are continually bagged.

The belief was long current that the only vulnerable spot in an alligator was the eye, and that a rifle ball would glance from the skin of this tropical armed cruiser, but a modern rifle ball will penetrate his hide anywhere, though it is not always immediately fatal. Apropos of Florida alligators, here is an amusing record from one of the game books at Tampa Bay. Someone wrote: "Killed the largest alligator seen this year. Found in his stomach a book, a piece of pinewood, a fisherman's float, and some small fish!"

Right under this another sportsman wrote: "Killed a much bigger alligator. The stomach contained a gold watch, ten thousand dollars in Government bonds, and a cord of wood." Not to be outdone, a third hunter wrote: "Shot the biggest alligator ever killed in Florida. In the stomach were found the remains of a steam launch, a lot of old railroad iron, a motor car, and a quantity of melted ice, proving that it existed during the glacial period!"

Safe to Say.

For the benefit of those who are at a loss to know just what to say on seeing a new baby for the first time, and who naturally feel that they must say something, we give the following list of expressions, any and all of which are commonly used, there being no patent or copyright on them. Whether you shall offer to kiss the infant depends somewhat on its age and appearance, and the extent to which you are willing to sacrifice yourself in order to please the baby's mamma. The baby itself doesn't care a button for your feelings or your kisses, but you are expected to say: "What a pretty little thing!" "Bright-eyed little fellow, isn't he?" "Why, how large he is!" "I don't think I ever saw so young a child take so much notice of his surroundings." "He's the image of his father." "How much does he weigh?" "What lovely, silky hair!" "Looks very like you." "What a little rosebuddy of a mouth!" "Do let me see his little toes!" "How very wise he seems." "I really believe the little thing understands every word we say." "Oh, what a splendid big boy he is!"

Joe's Revelation.

Not long ago a nice young man was invited to dine at the home of a young woman and accepted the invitation with pleasure. It was just a family dinner, and everything was passing off well when an unpleasant and quite unforeseen incident occurred.

They were all discussing the pie, when the young woman's little brother, who had been regarding her closely, suddenly spoke up.

"Gee," he said, "look at Marie tryin' to put on style just 'cause Joe is here. She's eatin' her pie with a fork!"

It is needless to add that the cherubic child experienced a very unpleasant quarter of an hour after Joe had gone.

In Desperation.

The European king sighed and stirred uneasily. "My subjects," he exclaimed, "are getting so enlightened, so imbued with the ideas of democracy, that they no longer fawn upon me, toady to me. There's only one thing for me to do to relieve this monotony. I must visit America."—"Town Topics."

A Phenomenon of Sleep.

She had come on her dozing in a hammock, and when she woke up she accused him of stealing a kiss. "Well," he said, "I will admit that the temptation was too strong to be resisted. I did steal one little kiss." "One!" she exclaimed, indignantly; "I counted eight before I woke up."—"Household Words."

Mainly About People.

A High Church stranger who was visiting a rural church in England inquired: "Have you matins in this church?" "Oh, no, sir," replied the rustic verger, "but we have oilcloth right up to the chancel."

An Argyllshire elder was asked how the kirk progressed in his locality. "Ah, weel," said he, "we had four hundred members. Then we had a divesion and there were only twa hundred left; then a disruption and only ten left. Then we had a heresy trial; and now there's only me and ma brither Duncan left, and I ha' grave doots o' Duncan's orthodoxy."

The great Mendelssohn was once compelled to accept the office of bookkeeper with a banker who was a very ignorant man. A few days after the banker said to Mendelssohn: "Do you think God works things wisely? You He made to be a bookkeeper, and me a rich banker." "Just notice the wisdom of God," promptly replied Mendelssohn. "If He had made me the banker, do you think I would engage you for a bookkeeper?"

The story is told that President Roosevelt was once traveling in Idaho, and passed a bookstore in the window of which was a copy of his "Winning of the West." Going into the bookstore he enquired, "Who is this author Roosevelt?" "Oh," said the bookseller, "he's a ranch-driver." "And what do you think of his book?" asked the President. "Well," said the dealer, slowly and deliberately, "I've always thought I'd like to meet the author and tell him that if he had stuck to running a ranch and give up writing books he'd have made a powerful more of a success at his trade."

The chief of the Leslies is said to have prayed before a battle: "Lord, be on our side! An' gin ye canna be on our side, aye lay low a bit, an' ye'll see thae carles get a hidin' that must please ye." An old Covenanter, who ruled his household with a rod of iron, is said to have prayed in all sincerity at family worship: "O Lord, hae a care o' Rab, for he is on the great deep, an' Thou holdest it in the hollow o' Thy hand. An' hae a care o' Jamie, for he hae gone to fight the enemies o' his country, an' the outcome o' the battle is wi' Thee. But ye needna fash Yersel' wi' wee Wully, for I hae him here, an' I am cawpable o' lookin' after him mysel'."

Lord Kelvin, the great British scientist, now in this country, is much given to preoccupation. It is said his students were wont to accompany the endless repetition of the definition of an ideal magnet, "an infinitely long, infinitely thin, uniform, and uniformly and longitudinally magnetized bar," by a stately tramp of feet. At the conclusion of this staggering performance, Professor Thomson, as he then was, would invariably shout, "Silence." One day the boys put it up to keep absolutely still, but the cry of "Silence" came at the end just the same. It is told of him, too, that he once went sound asleep presiding at a banquet. It was the penalty of overwork.

Opie Read, the Southern novelist, who lives in Chicago, has accepted the nomination for alderman from a Republican convention in a Republican ward. Until the last Presidential campaign Mr. Read had always affiliated with the Democracy. During the campaign of 1896, however, he made speeches in the West in behalf of the sound-money ticket. When his bill of expenses went to Mr. Hanna the chairman noticed that Mr. Read's expenses in Denver were much larger than at any other place. Mr. Hanna called Mr. Read's attention to this. "I reckon as much," Mr. Read replied, "but did you ever play poker in that pesky town?" Mr. Hanna made no answer, but put an "O. K." on the account.

Clerk Newton of the Parker House, Boston, is telling a good story at his own expense. When a small boy on the farm his folks often sent him to the neighbors to buy a dozen eggs when their hens failed to lay enough. He noticed that the old farmer always held each egg before a lighted candle and examined it carefully. In his innocence of Yankee shrewdness, Newton supposed that this was prompted more by honesty and intention to detect whether the eggs were bad or not. One day, however, when he counted his eggs, according to custom, there were only eleven in the basket. With a determination not to be cheated, the lad trudged proudly back to the house, and quickly made known his discovery. "Oh," said the old farmer, "that's all right, my boy; one of them has a double yolk."

Written on the Face.

We write our characters on our faces; yet, though we are quick to read our neighbor's face we are slow to realize that our own is open for him to read. But it is. The story is there, and we are writing it every day of our lives. Not only do smiles and frowns leave traces, but every passion which sways the heart stamps its record upon the face. Even a ride in a street car on a short railway journey gives proof of this. Look around you. Those two strangers opposite you never saw before, yet you know that one is passionate, the other mean, and your heart warms to the little old lady near by. You want no one to assure you she is kind and gentle, while a whole network of wrinkles about the eyes tells you that the old gentleman in the corner loves his joke. Character, indeed, is written plainly on every face. Some speak of tragedy, some of comedy, and not a few give you a distinct warning.

Uneasy Lies, Etc.

An American chiropodist now in Berlin advertises that he "has removed corns from all the crowned heads of Europe."

Missed It.

"I missed one of my pullets last night, Rufus," said the colonel, sternly. "Sho," replied Rufus, evasively, "yo' oughtn't tuh shoot at pullets in de dahk, kunnel."—Ohio "State Journal."

Whose Entire Plant is Now Under Roof, of CENTRAL CITY, COLORADO
PRODUCTION OF 200 TONS PER DAY

185 Tons Milling Ore, $12.00, Net $10.00 .... $1,850
15 Tons Smelting Ore, average $80.00 (less transportation and smelting charges $10.00, $70.00 being low average.... Profit $1,050

$2,900 PER DAY, 350 DAYS

This is over 20 per cent. on the capital $5,000,000 at par, and at present selling price of 75 cents per share amounts to over 27 per cent. The above is one-third of the capacity. Full capacity—600 tons in 24 hours—would make these figures three times as great. Total amount to be raised fully guaranteed. This investment upon these terms is worthy the careful consideration of all those having means to invest. WRITE FOR PROSPECTUS.

Stock Par Value $1.00 Now Selling at 75 Cents

We trust that you will appreciate the fact that THE GREGORY BUELL CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING and MILLING COMPANY is a going concern, the properties having produced $2,000,000 in the past under unfavorable circumstances. The present consolidation, by operating fourteen mines through one shaft, makes possible an enormous saving in operating expenses doing away with thirteen engineers, firemen, etc., a great reduction in fuel and many other points too numerous to mention.

With the vast additional ore bodies now being developed by tunnels and cross-cuts, when completed, assures the management that, on a calculation based on one-third of their capacity, they can earn 25 PER CENT. per annum upon the investment.

Bear in mind that the mill is built, a large part of the machinery is in place and that the Company is absolutely free from all debt. We consider this, after a most careful examination by us, a gilt-edge investment. We cannot recommend this too highly, and trust that you may appreciate the advantages as we do.

COPPER AT THREE AND HALF CENTS A POUND

Ge[illegible]e A. Treadwell Mining Company

27 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK. JEROME, ARIZONA.

Capital - - - - $3,000,000.

PAR VALUE OF SHARES $10.

In a suit recently tried in the New York courts it was proved from the books of the United Verde Copper Company and the sworn testimony of the bookkeepers that the cost to that company of producing copper was only three and a half cents a pound, not counting the gold and silver values, which—allowed for—reduced the cost to a still lower figure.

Nowhere outside the Verde Copper Belt in Yavapai County, Arizona, is copper produced in quantities for less than twice this cost.

The United Verde has about two hundred acres on the north end of the Belt and the George A. Treadwell Company has several times as much in the central and southern parts of the Belt. The conditions along the whole Belt are entirely similar. We already have three mines developed—the Cliff, Brookshire and Iron Queen—one of which, the Cliff, seems to be larger and better than the United Verde, and the other two at least approach it in magnitude and value, while we have several others, including Badger, Pantano, Green Monster and Spoke and Stonewall, which, though less developed, are equally promising.

Professor Treadwell believes we have at least half a dozen United Verdes within the broad and extensive limits of our holdings.

As soon as our smelter plant which is now in process of erection, is completed, we can certainly produce copper as cheap as our rich neighbor on the north.

The United Verde for several years has produced one-tenth of the copper of the world. When our plants are fully installed we expect the Verde Belt to produce one-half the copper of the world, and the George A. Treadwell Mining Company will be prepared to do more than its full share.

Before investing in copper in unproved localities, consider the stock of the George A. Treadwell Mining Company, named after the great pioneer and explorer of the Verde Belt and owning the largest and best aggregation of properties on it.

The price of the stock is [illegible] a share. Make checks payable to the order of the company and send them to 27 William Street New York

St. Petersburg, July 17WM de Witte the Minister of Finance, in an interview yesterday, declared that the Czar with a view of affording the people of the provinces still further freedom of expression regarding the condition of the peasantry, had directed the local committees od the commission appointed for the purpose of probing social problems to raise any questions they pleased in addition to those provided for in the programme of enquiry.

London, Thursday, July 17.—A despatch to the morning Post from Brussels says that the King of the Belgians has obtained several important railway concessions in China. It is added that he has acquired a majority of the Canton-Hankow Railway from the American syndicate which obtained hte concession for the line.

London, July 155.—King Edward left Victoria station at 11.25 o'clock this morning for Portsmouth. where he will board the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert. The King was conveyed from Buckingham Palace to the railway station in an ambulance drawn by two horses.

The only other occupant of the ambulance was Queen Alexandra. The vehicle was driven at a walking pace. Although there was a small crowd at the station there was no demonstration in compliance with the express wish of the King. The doctors and nurses awaited the arrival of the ambulance and a party of bluejackets removed His Majesty from the vehicle to a royal saloon car, formerly used by the late Queen Victoria. Absolute privacy was secured by a lofty screen of red plush which surrounded the platform.

The removal of His Majesty from the train to the royal yacht was safely accomplished by blue jackets and the King's couch was placed in a reception room which had been especially constructed on the uppper deck.

The warships in the harbor fired a royal salute as the King embarked, and all the vessels dressed ship and manned yards or decks. The royal yacht steamed off almost immediately after the transfer was completed.

It was said that the King bore the journey exceedingly well.

Providence, July -18.—Annie Graham, seventeen years old, an operative in a stocking mill at Pawtucket, disappeared last Friday from her home at Central Falls. Saturday her mother told the police the girl was missing, and Mrs. Daniel D. Bourne, wife of an expressman, reported at the same time that her husband had disappeared.

Today the girl was found near her home, suffering from laudanum poisoning. She said she remembered little after leaving home, but declared she had left Bourne dead in the woods at Attleboro. His body has not been found, although search has been made for it.

A NARROW ESCAPE

Accident to a Sunday [illegible] of Excursion of Hastings

The Methodists of Hastings excurted to Healey's Falls yesterday on the steamer Rainbow and barge. Just before passing through the Trent bridge where the water is exceptionally high owing to the recent heavy rains, Capt. Burnett disembarked most of the passengers before attempting to go through leaving about 25 on the boat and 4 on the scow, one of the later being Miss Short, of Hastings, who was in charge of the refreshment booth on the scow. The other three were watching the baskets, etc.

The steamer passed through all right at highest speed, but when the scow was about one half way through it struck one of the piers and was quickly swerved to the other side. It came in contact with the other pier and with the swing bridge which was open and therefore lying lengthwise with the stream.

The result was awful; the cover on he prow was completely wrenched from its fastenings. In its flight it swept everything before it, and one of the beams struck Miss Short on the head and held her fast, in the booth. The heavy two inch tow rope snapped like a string and the scow went on towards Healy's Falls, beyond the control of anyone. Those who were on the scow providentially were in the rear, and htey escaped death. Miss Short was released from her perilous position and was unconscious for about 15 minutes. Baskets, parasols, coats, benches, and all the contents of the booth were swept into the water. The greater portion of which were afterwards recovered by parties on canoes.

Soon about twenty-five persons were in pursuit of the scow in canoes, and picking up all they could find. When quiet was restored the scow was captured about a mile down the river and towed back to the bridge, where many willing hands made temporary repairs sufficient to enable the excursionists to return to Hastings. The trip to the Falls had to be abandoned, and the party returned to Hastings at 9 o'clock at night.

Miss Short was sufficiently recovered to walk to her home when the boat reached Hastings, but she had a miraculous escape. Had it not been for Capt. Burnett's thoughtfulness in landing the passengers above the bridge, there would undoubtedly have been a heavy death list. There was quite a panic when the crash came, and some of the women on shore fainted. An organ on the scow was almost swept overboard. When the scow reached Hastings, it was in a very dilapidated condition, but all were truly happy that they escaped as well as they did. The bridge was also damaged, but it can be used. There was a heavy load of passengers on board.

THE GIRL OF THE PEOPLE

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

warned me when I reached the end of a line, and the rustle of the paper as I changed the sheet. I had just found out that absent-mindedness had caused me to make some odd mistakes, when I heard a ringing at the front door; but this was nothing to me, and I did not pause until voices in the passage outside the study sent the blood flying to my face.

"He's out, really, your ladyship," Mrs. Jennett was protesting, almost imploring. "He won't be back to-day, I do assure you."

"I am sorry," followed silvery accents, which in the fraction of a second carried me back to another world. "I will write a note and leave it, if you will kindly let me go into the study, where I waited once before."

I sprang up from the table where I had been typing, and my heart was thumping against my side. Unless Mrs. Jennett somehow prevented her, in a moment more Lady Feo Ringwood would be in the room. She would see me; what would she think?

"What does it matter?" I said, angrily, to myself. "I'm Mr. Bourke's secretary. I'd rather this hadn't happened, but—there's nothing to be ashamed of. Anyhow, it's too late now. I can't run away."

There was only one door leading into the study, and my imagination pictured Lady Feo just outside.

"Oh, your ladyship," Mrs. Jennett was saying, "you don't need to trouble about writing a note. I'll give Mr. Bourke any message you may like to leave."

Her voice sounded troubled, and its note of distress added to my confusion. If she were so anxious to prevent Lady Feo Ringwood from seeing me, perhaps there were reasons stronger than I knew for concealment of my presence. My face grew burning hot, and my hands trembled. I looked round the room, but no hiding-place offered, even if I could have humiliated myself to seek one. Mrs. Jennett was the arbiter of my fate. If she failed to keep Lady Feo out of the study I must be brave and make the best of it.

"I would really rather write, thank you. It is no trouble," said the visitor, every word coming distinctly to my ears. Then the handle of the door turned, and Lady Feo Ringwood swept silkenly into the room. I faced her, standing, my eyes unflinching, but my cheeks scarlet.

She started, and her beautiful face went from white to red. For an awkward instant no one spoke. Then Mrs. Jennett, quivering in the background, stepped into the breach. "Your ladyship, this is Miss Harland, Mr. Bourke's secretary."

"Ah, indeed?" said Lady Feo. "I believe I have met Miss Harland" (she spoke the name slowly and with emphasis) "before. Do you remember, Miss Harland?"

"Yes, I remember you very well, Lady Feo," I answered, and though I tried only to keep my tone steady, it sounded defiant.

"It is interesting to meet you again—here." She turned to Mrs. Jennett with a smile, looking a very great lady, as indeed she was. "I will write my note, and perhaps, as Miss Harland is here, she will take charge of it, so I need not trouble you. I am in no hurry, and if she doesn't mind, I would like a little talk with her. We have, I think, some friends in common."

"If you are not too busy, miss?" the poor old woman said, anxiously, to me. Her eyes added: "Do forgive me. I did my best. I hope this won't vex you very much."

I sent a glance to reassure her. My spirit was roused, and I did not wish the visitor to go without some explanation; though I had arranged no formula in my mind. "I am not too busy for a talk with Lady Feo Ringwood," I returned.

Mrs. Jennett disappeared, closing the door.

"Will you sit down?" I said.

"No!" Lady Feo ejaculated, her voice utterly changed in an instant. "No, I can't sit down."

Her tone was a challenge, and I looked up to meet it. Our eyes met.

"It's true, then!" she exclaimed. "I would never have believed it."

"What do you mean?" I asked, quickly. "Did you expect—were you told that I was here?"

"Not that," she declared. "Not so bad as that. I was told that—someone was here."

"I don't understand you at all, Lady Feo," I said. "But, of course, it seems strange to you——"

"Strange? It is incredible!"

"Not incredible really; it only appears so," I protested, hardly knowing whether I was supposed to be on the defensive or not. "I daresay you must have heard that—that I had a very great affliction, and, afterwards, misfortunes."

"Oh, I heard things, of course," she cried, with a kind of fierce impatience. "But nothing, nothing which led me to expect this."

"Yet you said a moment ago that you had heard——"

"I was not thinking of you then; I was thinking of Mr. Bourke."

I felt the blood which had burnt in my cheeks receding, to leave me pale. Still, I was at a loss to fathom her emotion. She had been on friendly terms with my adopted mother and me. The last time I had seen her she had been dining with us and some people Lady Cope had asked to the Savoy Hotel the Sunday night before my banishment. Did her excitement now mean surprise at meeting me again, and concern at seeing me so fallen in the world as to be earning my living as a typewriter, or was there something deeper than this, something which I should regard as offensive? I was only eighteen, and I did not feel sure of my ground.

"Mr. Bourke has been very kind to me," I said. "I am trying to help him as well as I can."

"Kind to you!" Lady Feo echoed, with a strange bitterness. "But what has he been to himself?"

"To himself?"

"For him this spells ruin. You talk of 'helping!' Is it possible you are so blind as not to see that you are dragging him down—down off the pedestal his genius has given him?"

I stared at her in blank amazement, my lips apart.

"Don't look at me like that!" she cried, a sudden flame of anger leaping to her dark eyes. "I never thought that you were wicked or a fool, Sheila Cope. Now I believe you are both. Wicked for him. A fool for yourself."

"Lady Feo!" I exclaimed, indignantly. "You are older than I am, but you must not speak to me like that."

She had been very pale under a faint pink tinge of rouge which I had not suspected her of before, but now her cheeks blazed and hid the hard line of

He Knew His Own.

Carlyle, speaking of America, once said that the North cursed the negro and bade him be free, and the South blessed him and bade him be a slave. His theory gives point to a story told in the Arkansas "Thomas Cat."

One of the old-time Southern negroes went to Boston to make his fortune. After a week of walking up and down, he found himself penniless and no work in sight. Then he went from house to house.

"Ex yo' please, sah," he began, when his ring at the front door was answered, "can't you gib a p'or culled man wuk ter do, or sompin ter eat?"

And the polite answer invariably was, "No, mister; very sorry, but have nothing for you."

All who answered his ring addressed him as "Mr.," but shut their doors and hearts against him. Finally he rang the bell at a brown-stone front. A gentleman appeared, and the old man began, "Boss, I is starvin'. Can't yo' gimme some victuals?"

"You black, kinky-headed rascal!" exclaimed the gentleman. "How dare you ring the bell at my front door? Go round the back-yard way to the kitchen and the cook'll give you something, you black —"

But just there the old man fell on his knees, exclaiming, "Thank de Lawd, I foun' mah own white folks at las'! Thank de Lawd, I foun' 'em—I foun' 'em!"

Didn't Like Officers' Fare.

Anybody with any knowledge of nautical matters at all knows what an habitual growler "Jack" is. Never was he known to be satisfied with any possible condition of affairs, no matter what efforts might have been spent in pleasing him.

A good example of this is shown in a story told by the skipper of a large American sailing vessel now in port. On his last trip from San Francisco to this port he had with him some passengers; so, to prevent friction, he humored the seamen more than he otherwise would have done. On the second day out the crew all came aft and demanded to see the skipper.

Breaking the Ice.

Some society people, remarks Hal Berte in "Pick-Me-Up," are greatly perturbed over a problem that presents itself when two persons, of opposite sexes, who are strangers to each other, are introduced for the purpose of going in to dinner together. The vital question is which, under the circumstances, should speak first? Without posing as an authority on etiquette, I venture to suggest that the onus of speaking first naturally devolves upon the gentleman, because the lady is bound to ultimately get even by having the last word. Of course, if the gentleman really wants the lady to lead off, the best thing he can do is to accidentally tread on her frock. In which case she will probably say something commencing with the fourth letter of the alphabet. With this cue, profuse apologies can be tendered, and the rest is easy.

The Artist's Little Joke.

"This," said the Eminent Artist, "is my famous study of the Cows in the Clover." "But where is the clover?" we asked, not seeing any of it in the picture. "Oh, the cows have eaten it, you know."

Jack—"I wonder why time is said to fly?"

Maud—"Probably it is because so many people are trying to kill it."—Harlem Life.

Testing It For Herself.

He watched her arranging the violets in the big Kakiri bowl.

She looked so very pretty, and yet she must be told.

Lighting a cigarette, he braced himself for the telling. As he tossed the match in the direction of the blazing fire, she came toward him, holding in her hand a few of the purple flowers.

"For you," she said, simply, and pressed close to his side as she put them in his buttonhole.

After that she bent and kissed him, slowly and deliberately. He sat transfixed. In all their platonics her lips had never before touched his.

Ere he could recover himself she kissed him again.

Not a word nor a caress accompanied either kiss. They stood out against a background of utter incomprehensibility.

Then she walked over by the fire. He looked anxiously after her.

She faced about, and he saw that her lips were moving slightly, while her eyes had a far-off gaze.

At last she spoke.

"You can marry her!"

There was a pause—she seemed to be indulging in further meditation — and then—

"Yes, you can marry her. I don't care at all. You see, I kissed you on purpose. I did it twice to make sure, and I didn't feel even the faintest quiver either time. I was very careful, and tasted each kiss thoroughly, and I know now that—that you can marry her."

He rose, his form and his rage towering together. What man could be calm on learning that his lips possess no power to thrill?

"Good-bye," he said, putting out his hand.

"Good-bye," she answered, smiling.

He went out, and the door closed behind him.

She stood where he left her, banding her clasped fingers across her eyes. The sunlight streamed in between the window arches and shot a ray of glory over the violets, the woman and the woman's yellow hair. It caused the diamonds on her hand to sparkle brilliantly, and something on her cheek shone too.

"Dear heaven!" she murmured, softly, "what must it be to have him do the kissing!"

A Delicate Position.

Wedding presents are frequently distinguished for their uselessness, and gift-making at any time is always attended with some danger, but there is a contractor in Toronto who realizes that the most generous intentions are likely to turn out disastrously. This is how it came about:

A faithful Irish employee announced his desire to take a month's vacation in order to visit his brother in the West. He had worked so well and steadily that his employer not only granted the request, but made him a present of a new valise. The night before Tim was to leave he received the gift, accompanied by a few appreciative words.

Tim stared at the valise for a moment and then asked: "What am I to do with thot?"

"Why, put your clothes in it when you go away, of course," answered the contractor.

"Put me clothes in it, is it?" said Tim. "An' phwat will Oi wear if Oi put me clothes in thot?"

"A farmer ought to read a great deal, just the same as any other business man."

"Yes," answered Farmer Corntossel. "It keeps me so busy posting up on railroad rates and the tariff that I'm sometimes afraid I won't have time to raise the stuff to send to market. —Washington Star.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 21, 1902

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

—Everybody reads the Times.

—The first drive of the Rathbun Company is now on its way down the river.

—The steamers Beaver, Rainbow, North Star and City of Peterborough were in port on Saturday.

—A boy was fined at the police court on Saturday for bathing in the waters of Jackson Park.

—There was a very light market on Saturday. Business men are complaining of Saturdays business, the rain no doubt keeping many farmers at home.

—A despatch was received on Saturday announcing the death in Midland of Mr. James Griffith, half brother of Mrs. Wm. Cowie, town. Mr. Cowie left for Midland Saturday morning.

—The first annual excursion under the auspices of the legal fraternity of Peterborough will take place to Idyl Wild today. The steamer Water Lily will leave the Peterborough wharf at 1.30 p.m. sharp.

—Work on the new dam below the Little Lake is progressing slowly, on account of the high water. High water has also greatly retarded the work on the Otonabee Power Company's power station.

—A small ad in the Times always does its work. Four ladies who required help were supplied through an advertisement in this paper. And this, too, when other means had failed. Everybody reads the Times.

General - Sports

LACROSSE.

Port Hope lost to Oshawa on Saturday at Oshawa by 7 goals to 2.

Orangeville defeated the Tecumsehs at the island by 4 goals to 3.

The Torontos defeated the Cornwall team at Cornwall by 7 goals to 6.

The Capitals lost to the Shamrocks on Saturday afternoon by 3 goals to 2.

The game between Brantford and St. Catarines was postponed on account of rain.

BASEBALL.

An important practice of the senior and junior teams of St. Peter's T. A.S. is called for this evening at 6.30 on Murray street school grounds.

Toronto and Montreal played a double header Saturday, each team winning one and losing one.

Buffalo won two from Newark, Worcester won from Providence, and Rochester lost to Jersey City.

The Belleville Intelligencer says:—"The Peterborough Club's request for home and home games with Belleville is being considered by the local players, but a prominent ball-tosser informs us that they once gave Peterborough a game in Belleville with the understanding that they get a return game in Peterborough, but it never materialized. Therefore they are not falling over themselves trying to arrange this match. There is, however a possibility that the games may be arranged. They would, no doubt, prove interesting."

CHURCH NOTES

—Rev. Dr. Symonds, Port Hope, preached yesterday in St. Luke's

—At the George street church Rev. Mr. Wilson, the pastor, preached a sermon to young men.

—Miss Clara Thompson, of Bobcaygeon, sang very sweetly at the George street church last night.

Mr. John White's Purchase

Mr. John White, son of our esteemed townsman, Mr. Robert White, of the White House, town, has purchased the McGregor House, Norwood, and is now in possession of the premises. Mr. White is a first class hotel man, and will keep an up-to-date hotel. We wish him every success.

One Common Cause of Headache

Perhaps the most general cause of headache and pain across the eyes is catarrh. The simplest cure is to inhale the medicated vapor of Catarrhozone, which traverses every air cell and air passage of the throat and nose It kills myriads of germs at every breath, clears away mucous discharges, preserves and heals the membrane. Catarrhozone is just a splendid remedy for headache, and its action in certain and unfailing in diseases of the throat and lungs, deafness, bronchits, asthma and catarrh. A trial will convince the most sceptical that Catarrhozone is all right. Large size, $1; trial size, 25 cents. Druggists, or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

A JOLLY ROCHESTER PARTY

Are Now Sojourning at Mr. Tom Eastwood's Buckhorn

Messrs. W. H. Hutchins, Louis Beattie and A. L. Hone, of Rochester, passed through town on Saturday on their way home from a week's sojourn at Buckhorn. They were accompanied to town by Mr. Tom Eastwood, the "Mayor" of Buckhorn, who conducted them to the office of this great family journal, where they secured copies of The Times' map of the county, showing the Kawartha lakes.

The following members of the party are still at Buckhorn: Sheriff J. C. Smith, Assistant District Attorney Mattson, and Messrs. David Forsythe, W. C. Likly and H. C. McAlpine. Mr. Hone is a newspaper man, and, we imagine, is also a strong Republican, judging from the "pull" he has, for it is said that he pulled in more fish than even did the Sheriff. This is no joke, as Mr. McAlpine will readily testify. The pure ozone of the region is a splendid stimulant for those who suffer from dyspepsia, and even Mr. McAlpine was capable of tucking away under his vest at each meal a substantial quantity. Mr. Mattson, who was somewhat under the weather physically, considers himself, after only a weeks' stay at this great health-giving resort, able unaided to topple "Uncle Tom," the famous rock that stands in front of the hotel, down into the river below. That he has not already made the attempt is due to the influence of Mr. McAlpine, who spent many hours in persuasive argument against the wanton obliteration of an old-time landmark.

The party will remain several days longer.

DAVID AND GOLIATH

A Little Shot Put Old King Coffee Out of Business

When medicine fails they sometimes send sick people away to another climate for their health. Sometimes the climate does it, but more often they stumble on the proper food to take, and then get well.

A lady in San Diego tells of a friend who left her home each December for the past two winters to go to California for her health. She says: "Almost all of her time was spent visiting the doctor, and sitting in a big chair and watching the clock to note the time for her next dose of medicine. Nervousness was her principal trouble, and with others of kindred nature made life for her a burden.

On the occasion of her last visit, I begged her to give up the use of coffee, and use Postum Coffee. She replied that she could not stop coffee, aid no more at the time, but next morning at breakfast I passed her a fragrant, steaming cup of Postum, making it as it should be made. After that, I had no more trouble, and my friend drank no more coffee. But the most surprising part of the experience was the change that soon came over her.

We began to notice it within less than a week. In less than a month her nervousness had left her, and in three months she was a new woman in face, figure and health. I had not dared to hope for so much benefit, although I had been greatly benefitted myself by Postum, but coffee to her system was simply poisonous, and I believe this is the case with many others. She returned to her home in December, and was married within less than two months after. She never fails to give credit to Postum, for her health, or thanks to me for teaching her to make it properly, and well she may, for Postum has done for her what travel, doctors and medicine failed to do." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

ECONOMICAL PORK PRODUCTION

Some Valuable Information Regarding the Raising of Hogs for Market

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir,—In the past some objections have been raised by packers re the use of forage plants and roots for pork production, but the light of recent experiments would seem to show their fears or objections groundless; in fact, the good influence of a considerable proportion of green food or roots in the ration of a pig can scarcely be overestimated. It has long been known that skim milk has a most beneficial influence upon the thrift of porkers, and quality of the pork, even when the amount fed forms only a small part of the ration. Green food and roots seem in a large measure to be capable of supplementing the now,—in view of the tremendous expansion in the Canadian bacon industry,—quite inadequate supply of dairy by-products, for use in pig feeding. The farmer whose conditions permit, may go even further than to use forage plants as a supplementary food. He may even make them the chief item of his pig feed if he is careful to use a good proportion of grain, (oats, peas and barley,) during the last month of the feeding period.

As the season is rather far advanced for an exhaustive discussion of forage suitable for this purpose, I shall confine my remarks to such as are still seasonable.

CLOVER—Probably no crop is better adapted to young pigs than clover, and a lot of clover stubble used for this purpose will give very good returns. So far as our experiments go, the pork so produced is of good quality.

RAPE—Of all the crops used here so far from pasturing pigs, rape quite easily stands first. The principal points in its favor are: (1) its quick growth. (2) its wide range, as it grows well on almost any kind of land. (3) its season, as it may be sown as late as September and still do fairly well. (4) its evident palatability, as the pigs eat it greedily, and (5) its good effect upon the quality of the bacon, producing as it does, almost invariably a good firm carcass. Rape may be expected to be fit for pasturage from 6 to 8 weeks from date of sowing. It should be sown in rows about 24 inches apart, since when so grown it gives the greatest return per acre, and is best adapted for pasturing. It should be sown fairly thickly in the rows, say three lbs. of seed per acre. An acre may be expected to carry from 20 to 40 pigs through a season, depending on the season and the condition of the crop when the pigs are turned in.

VETCHES—Vetches also are valuable as forage for swine, and may be, under exceptional conditions, sown late in the season. Especially is this true of the Hairy Vetch, which species has the peculiar quality of growing up again after having been cut off or eaten down.

OATS—Probably no green crop will give a better return in pork than oats. They may be sown late or early in the season at the rate of 5 or 8 bushels to the acre and the pigs turned on about a month after they germinate. The fault of this crop is that it lasts only a short time, as it does not seem to be able to recover when once eaten down.

ARTICHOKES—Another crop of great value for pork production is the artichoke. It should be sown late in the fall or very early in the spring. The pigs may be allowed to feed on it in October and the early spring. They will do the harvesting themselves. This is a most excellent crop for brood sows in spring and autumn.

Almost all varieties of juicy forage crops are suitable for pork production, the sorts mentioned above being probably the best for Canada.

The question as to the advisability of allowing pigs to graze, or shutting in a small pen and feeding them the green crops, does not seem to have been positively settled yet, for while greater daily gains may be expected where animals are kept in close quarters, there is always the item of extra labor for cutting and carrying the forage.

Another item of some importance to the feeder is the comparative economy of winter and summer feeding of pigs. According to various experiments conducted here recently, pork may be produced at about $1.00 per hundred pounds, live weight, less cost in summer than in winter. This seems to be due to less cost of green feed, as well as to low temperature, which must be overcome by food or by artificial heat.

Local Contractors Abroad

Mr. James Bogue, the well known contractor, secured the job of building about 20,000 feet of granolithic pavement in Lindsay. His tender was 14 1-2 cents for granite and 13 1-4 cents for sand finish, and 60 cents for expanded metal work, per square foot. Mr. John Hayes also tendered, his figures being 13 1-2 cents for sand finish, 14 1-2 cents for granolithic finish and 85 cents for expanded metal work.

Rathbun's Co's. Big Drive

The last of the Rathbun Company's drives for the season has reached Fenelon Falls from Standhope township in Haliburton county. There are over 100,000 logs in the drive, and it is one of the largest that has been towed to Deseronto for some years. After the logs had passed the slide and been assorted the drive will be towed by the alligator McLintock to the above town. Foremen Geo. Jackson and H. McCormick are in charge of the drive.

CHANBERLAIN'S PLANS FOR A GREATER BRITAIN

The Subjects the Colonial Premiers are Discussing of World-Wide Importance

SUGGESTED BY THE COLONIAL OFFICE.

Interesting and Important Matters that are Being Disposed of—The Conference will be a History Maker

Special to The Times.

criminal operations in this country was

London, July 21.—The subjects that will engage the attention of the Conference of Colonial Premiers attract much attention in political circles here. As the result of that Conference, if it result in any thing tangible, must necessarily be of world-wide interest, a glance at the matters to be discussed is not amiss at present. As far as indicated at present the following will be the scope of the Conference.

SUGGESTED BY COLONIAL OFFICE.

1. "The political relations between Great Britain and the Colonies."

This is a very elastic "suggestion" emanating from the Colonial Secretary, and what its actual import may be will depend largely upon Mr. Chamberlain. If by "political relations" is meant the constitutional relations between the Mother Country and her Colonies there is very little that calls for either consideration or amendment, at least as far as the self-governing colonies are concerned. The constitutional tie is the slenderest conceivable, and therein lies its strength It enables the colonies to work out their own destiny in their own way, while freeing England from responsibility or entanglement in the administration of colonial affairs. Practically the Colonies are independent in the conduct of their own affairs except that the Governors must be appointed by England and the Governors have the right to reserve for the royal assent all legislative measures affecting Imperial interests, that the colonies cannot impose duties or make laws discriminating against Great Britain, and that all Colonial courts may allow appeals to, and are bound by the decisions of the Privy Council in their interpretation of their laws.

These limitations of the Colonial right of self-government are more nominal than actual, as shown by the fact that the exclusion of colored British subjects from entry into certain British Colonies is permitted by what is known by the Natal Act, and that marriage with a deceased wife's sister has been sanctioned in the Colonies in England. while still refused legal sanction in England itself. The probability is that the only change that will be made in the political relations between England and the Colonies will be in the direction of triennial conferences of Colonial Premiers in London on the basis of today's conference. These conferences will be purely consultative and any decisions they may arrive at will be in the nature of recommendations to the Imperial and Colonial Parliaments by each of which they may be adopted, amended or rejected.

2. "Imperial Defence."

It is understood that originally the purpose of the Colonial Office was to secure the participation of the Colonies in an Imperial scheme of naval and military defence. The idea has been practically abandoned. It finds favor nowhere except in South Africa, where the hot blood of war time has stimulated enthusiasm in Imperial defence affairs to an unprecedented degree. Both the Canadian and Australian Parliaments have made it very clear that while they are prepared to accept the full responsibility of self-defence on land they will refuse to be drawn into what Sir Wilfrid Laurier calls the "vortex of militarism." New Zealand is prepared to sanction the creation of an army reserve for service outside the Colony, when necessary, but without the co-operation of the two great federations—Canada and Australia—such a scheme could not be made universally effective in our Colonial Empire.

In connection with the naval defence Australia and New Zealand now contribute £126,000 a year to the maintenance of a fleet of English cruisers in Australian waters, and Cape Colony contributes £50,000 a year (the cost of the maintenance of a battleship). It is probable that all the colonies, except, perhaps, Canada, will be prepared to increase the naval contribution in some form or other.

3. "The Commercial Relations of the Empire."

This promised at one time to be the most important of all the subjects to be considered by the Conference. The corn duties were believed by many to be the prelude to a system under which England would impose customs duties on imports generally with a view to making remissions in favor of those Colonies, which, like Canada, gave preferential treatment to British goods. The recent speeches in the House of Commons by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, however, clearly indicate that if the Government ever had a purpose of that kind in view it has been abandoned. Canada, Cape Colony and New Zealand favor giving preferential treatment to imports from England, but Australia is apathetic on the subject, and any thing like an Imperial Customs Union is unlikely to be accomplished by the Conference in view of the fact that England's policy of free trade is not likely to be reversed, and the Australian Commonwealth wants all the customs revenue it can get.

4. "The Relations of Australia and New Zealand with the Islands of the Pacific."

The discussion of this subject will probably lead to a definite recommendation to place the administration of British interests in the Eastern Pacific under the direction of New Zealand, and in the Western Pacific under the direction of Australia. A beginning has already been made by handing over to the Australian Commonwealth the administration of British New Guinea.

5. "Naturalization."

This is a practical subject of legislation upon which some agreement will certainly be arrived at. At present many anomalies and inconveniences arise from the fact that the naturalization laws of the Empire are not uniform, and that the rights obtained by a naturalized person in one part of the Empire are frequently not recognized in another.

SUGGESTED BY AUSTRALIA.

1. Army and navy supply contracts.
2. Ocean cables, purchase thereof.
3. An Imperial Court of Appeal.
4. The [illegible] protection of [illegible].
5. Loss of the most-favored nation treatment if the British preferential tariff is given.
6. Imperial stamp charges on Colonial bonds.

Of these six subjects the one to which Sir Edmund Barton apparently attaches most importance is the establishment of the Imperial Court of Appeal. At present the House of Lords is the final Court of Appeal for the United Kingdom, and the judicial committee of the Privy Council is the final Court of Appeal for India and the Colonial Empire. Sir Edmund Barton's proposal is to create one Court of Appeal for the whole Empire.

SUGGESTED BY NEW ZEALAND.

1. A preferential Colonial tariff to British manufactures carried in British ships to the Colonies.
2. A reduction of duties on Colonial products under taxation.
3. An Imperial Army reserve for service out of the Colony in times of emergency.
4. An increase of the Australian squadron on the lines of existing arrangements.
5. The mail service between Australia New Zealand and Canada.
6. The future Government of South Africa, together with the admission of professional colonists to practice there.
7. Periodical Colonial Conferences.

This formidable list of suggestions is indicative of the restless energy of Mr. Seddon. Some of these subjects, however, are covered by those included in the Colonial Office suggestions.

CANADA AND SOUTH AFRICA.

The Canadian representatives have formulated no suggestions. As one of them put it the other day in an interview, "We are here to listen."

Cape Colony and Natal have only one subject suggested for consideration, namely, that the naturalization of aliens in any one part of the Empire should embrace the whole Empire. This subject is also included in the Colonial Office list.

ENGLAND'S NEW POLICY IN CHINA

Liberals Call for a More Vigorous Cause of Action

SPAIN'S FINANCIAL POLICY.

England Not Afraid of the American Invasion of the Field of Commerce

London, July 18.—In the House of Lords, Earl Spencer, the Liberal leader, questioned the Government in regard to the condition of affairs in China. He expressed the hope that the Government would abandon its previous hand-to-mouth policy and would follow a stronger course.

In reply the Marquis of Lansdowne, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said the Government hoped to restore the Chinese railways which the British hold at an early date. It was also believed that Tientsin would be turned over to the Chinese authorities within four weeks. The arbitration tribunal to consider the dispute between Russia and Great Britain regarding land within Russia's concession will sit shortly.

In regard to the indemnity, which had been arranged as a gold debt, the fall in the gold tael made a difference of ninety millions on the whole debt. Great Britain, the Marquis of Lansdowne said, was not vindictive, and had suggested to the Powers that that the terms be mitigated for eight years. China under this proposition will pay the same amount as if the tael remained of the same value as when the protocol was signed. The other Powers were willing to relieve China in this matter, but there were different opinions as to what means should be taken to do so. The Marquis believed England ought to strain every effort to co-operate with the other Powers.

Referring to the position at Shanghai, the Marquis said the Government had before it a scheme which seemed to promise a basis for an arrangement which would give a largely extended scope and greater facilities to British commerce in the Far East. He thought they should avoid measures tending to the partition of China or foreign tutelage. He said the words used by Viscount Cranborne in his statement about the Anglo-Japanese agreement were not intended to suggest that the treaty had not been made on terms of absolute equality. He referred to the friendship between Great Britain and Italy, and said the Franco-Italian arrangement had not caused any misgivings.

Pekin, July 21.—Prince Ching today notified the Foreign Ministers that the Throne had approved the conditions for the restoration of Tientsin to the Chinese. The notice fixes Aug. 15 as the date when the provisional government will turn the town over to the Chinese. On that day Viceroy Yuan Shih Kai and most of the members of the viceregal court will leave Pao ting fu for Tientsin. Meanwhile one Chinese and one foreign commissioner will adjust the accounts of the provisional government.

Many of the troops in Yuan Shih Kai's army are dying from the cholera.

The cut of one-half in the postal rates adopted by Sir George Hart in order to meet the German, Russian, French, and Japanese postal competition, and also to ascertain the intention of these Powers, was established post offices in China in 1900, has not been met by the countries named.

The imperial postal business is therefore on the increase, and a plan of further extensions in the interior has been submitted to the throne. It is also proposed to increase the rates in the interior where no foreign postal service is in operation. The rates to offices on the coast zone will be kept down to the present scale of one-half those of foreign services, in order to stop competition.

ENGLISH ICE MEN NOT ALARMED

London, July 21. The Secretary of Carlo, Gatti & Stevenson, Limited, and Slaters, Limited, ice merchants, said today that he had heard nothing of the prospective invasion of England by the American Ice Company. He said: "Why should not American ice merchants come here? This is a free country. If the Americans think the present system of supplying ice is unsatisfactory they are entitled to their opinion. They certainly cannot bring the ice with them, but the trade here would not have any objection to their coming without it."

SPAIN'S NEW FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENT.

Spain, July 21.—Senor Rodriganez the Minister of Finance, has signed a convention between the Bank of Spain and the Treasury, by which all sums advanced to the Government by the bank shall bear interest at the rate of 2 per cent. The metallic reserve will be increased in a short time and the paper currency reduced. The bank will arrange with the Governfor the acquisition of gold.

LAKE MICHIGAN TIDAL WAVE

Seven-Foot Sweep of Water Noted at Chicago on Wednesday

Special to The Times.

Chicago, July 21—There was something closely resembling a tidal wave or "seiche" on Lake Michigan yesterday. It did considerable damage to boats along the shore. At the Weather Bureau it was said that the barometer had indicated a sudden high pressure, followed by an equally sudden drop. A wave of heavy atmospheric pressure passed over the city and as it struck the lake, moving from west to east, the water was pushed back. With the pressure released the wave came rushing back and dashed up over the land. As the high pressure drove the water out there was a recession of three feet below the normal. As the return wave came back the water went four feet above the normal, making a total rise of seven feet.

MRS. MARY BAKER DEAD

Christian Science Treatment in Her Case Was Not Efficacious

Boston, July 21.—The death of Mrs. Mary Baker a sister-in-law of Mrs Mary Baker Eddy, the founder of Christian Science occurred June 24 in Dorchester, but the fact that she was treated by Christian Scientists has just become known.

Mrs. Baker, who was the widow of Samuel Baker, Mrs. Eddy's brother, had been a sufferer for years. At the solicitation of Mrs. Eddy about a year ago she submitted to Christian Science Treatment. The healer was selected by Mrs. Eddy. Mrs. Baker expended a considerable sum of money for treatment. Finding it inefficacious, she refused to continue except under guarantee of cure, for which even she agreed to pay a very large sum. Further treatment was refused on these terms by the Christian Scientists.

While Mrs. Baker and Mrs. Eddy were on friendly terms, Mrs. Baker never became a Christian Scientist nor believed in her sister-in-law's mission.

FEDERATION MAY AID MINERS

American Federation of Labour Likely to Assist the Strikers

Special to The Times.

San Francisco, Cal., July 21.—The proposition to indorse the miner's strike and lend financial aid to the strikers is the most important matter to receive attention at the meeting of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor which began here today. President Mitchell of the miners was unable to come to San Francisco and delegated Henry White of the garment workers to act as his representative, Mr. White will explain the origin and nature of the miners' grievances and review the history of the strike, emphasizing the claims of the strikers for aid from their fellow labor union and praying that the needed assistance be not withheld. What action the council will take is problematical. In the past the American Federation of Labor has been extremely diffident about endorsing outside strikes, but it is said that in the present instance a number of influential members are in favor of lending the coal miners monetary aid. The council will be in session a week or ten days. Besides the miner's strike there are several other important matters requiring attention. The Western Labor Federation has of late displayed such vigor of growth and widewake enterprise as to cause an uneasy feeling among the leaders of the older organization and it is not improbable that steps will be taken looking to an affiliation of the two bodies, or, if this course fails, to squelch the western organization.

THE CLAN-NA GAEL'S WAR AGAINST BRITAIN

Ancient Order of Hibernians Accused of Break of Faith

THE ANNUAL CONVENTION

What the Order Proposes to Accomplish in its Efforts to Free Ireland from British Rule

Many Committee Reports Received and Acted Upon—Insurance Plan is Adopted—The Work to Go on With Received Vigor

Denver, Col June 22.—The anger of the delegates to the annual convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, now in session in this city, was somewhat aroused yesterday by a statement contained in a printed circular distributed at the door of the convention hall, to the effect that the order had not kept its promise to Ireland.

The statement was to the effect that the rank and file had been duped and misled by its leaders on the instruction on the Clan Na Gael. It was freely said that the circular was the product of the head officials of the United Irish league, although the members admitted that they had no positive proof.

A resolution introduced by Delegate R. J. Slattery, of Massachusetts, indorsing the United Irish league is in the hands of the resolution committee.

Stephen J. Dunleavy, of Denver has been chosen to lead the fight against this resolution, and he expresses confidence that it will be defeated overwhelmingly.

The convention received reports from several committees yesterday.

The insurance committee reported recommending the plan of insurance now in use in the Illinois branch of the order as a safe one to adopt by any of the other states wishing to branch out in this particular. Both the main convention and the ladies auxiliary adopted the committee's report.

Majority and minority reports on the question of systematic organization were presented by the committee having that matter in charge.

The former recommended that four organizers with a salary of $150 each and expenses, and an additional fee of $1 per new member, be appointed; the latter reduced the number of organizers to one without any fees other than the monthly salary. A compromise proposition was submitted providing for two organizers with a monthly stipend.

Friends of the military branch of the order are agitating the appointment of an official head with the title of adjutant who shall be the intermediary between the uniform division and the president of the order in the settlement of all matters affecting the military.

The convention adopted a report of the committee on ritual, providing for an advisory board from the ladies' auxiliary consisting with five women, to sit with the national board of directors and have equal power with that body in all matters pertaining to subjects in which the women are exclusively interested.

The ladies' auxiliary adopted a resolution asking that the various county presidents of the county be given a seat, a voice and a vote in the convention. Under the present ritual the state presidents are entitled to a seat in the convention, but they are not permitted to vote or speak.

The ladies' auxiliary pledged itself by resolution to raise $10,000 for a scholarship in Trinity College at Washington, D.C.

General - Sports

A despatch from Oshawa says:—"The fastest and most interesting lacrosse match ever played in Oshawa took place in the new athletic grounds to-day, when the celebrated Ontarios from Port Hope came up and played their return C. L. A. league with the home twelve. The weather was extremely disagreeable, it pouring down rain nearly all the afternoon. However, owing to the intense rivalry existing between the two teams, and the great interest taken and speculation made on this match, a crowd of fully 2,000 enthusiastic spectators turned out in the rain to witness it, five or six hundred coming up from Peterborough and Port Hope by special train. In their game with Port Hope in Port Hope on July 1st, the Oshawa team were defeated by a score of 9 to 4, but they certainly redeemed themselves to-day by trimming Port Hope to the tune of 9 to 2. At the first face-off Oshawa secured the ball, and it soon made its way up towards the Port Hope goal, and after four and a half minutes play in the vicinity, Stewart scored the first goal for Oshawa. The next goal went to Oshawa after one-half minutes play. Port Hope then secured the ball, made a rush on goal, and McDonough shot; Gee stopped it nicely, but did not hold the ball, and when it fell on the ground it rolled into the net. Oshawa scored one more, making the game 3 to 1 in their favour at the end of the first quarter.

In the second period Oshawa secured two goals, shutting Port Hope out. In the third, Oshawa netted two more and Port Hope one. In the last quarter two goals were scored, both going to Oshawa, making the final score 9 to 2. The rain made the field very disagreeable at the beginning, but towards the middle of the game the rain ceased, and, as the grounds are high they were not in a very bad condition. The players of both sides did considerable slipping, but notwithstanding this the game was fast and the playing throughout was keen and excellent. At no time did it lag or become tame. The greater part of the playing was in the vicinity of the Port Hope goal, and had it not been for the excellent stops of the visitors' goalkeeper the score for Oshawa would have been much larger The game was an exceptionally interesting one for the spectators, both teams playing clean lacrosse, as evidenced by the fact that Referee Gillespie, who has a reputation for being extremely strict, only had occasion to rule three men off during the game, one Oshawa and two Port Hope. The game was indeed fiercely contested and the checking hard, but none of the players received any serious injuries. The Oshawa team played a far superior game throughout than their opponents. The Ontarios, however, are an excellent lot of lacrosse players, and which ever of these two teams win out this district will undoubtedly give the winners of the other intermediate districts a hard race for the Provincial championship. The Ontarios were confident of winning this game, and considerable money was parted with by their backers. The teams and officials were as follows:

Port Hope — Goal, Young, point, T. Tuer; cover point, F. Tuer; third defence, Henderson; second defence, Martin; first defence, Burke; centre, Wood; first home, O'Flynn; second home, McCabe; third home, Lipsett; outside home, McDonough; inside home, Carveth; field captain, Hooey; goal umpire, Saunders; timekeeper, Renwick.

Oshawa — Goal, Gee; point, Kerwin; cover point, Shields; third defence, Glover; second defence, Sands; first defence Monroe; centre, Hallett; first home, Staples; second home Raymer; third home, Hall; outside home, Charles; inside home, Stewart; field capt., Ed. Baker; umpire, Stedjam; timekeeper, Pickard.

Referee, Harry Gillespie, Orangeville; referee's timekeeper, Howard Clemes, Port Hope.

THE RING

Special to The Times.

San Francisco, Cal., July 21.—The promoters of the heavyweight championship battle between Jim Jeffries and Bob Fitzsimmons are rapidly completing their arrangements for the big fight. Construction work on the mammoth amphitheatre in which the event is to be pulled off is practically finished. It will seat 8,000 persons and so well were the plans laid that is is believed every spectator will be afforded an excellent view of the mill.

Meanwhile reports from the two training quarters are to the effect that the big fighters have trained so faithfully that they are ready to enter the ring at any time. A feeling of confidence appears to pervade both camps, a fact which argues well for a contest worth seeing.

BIG INTERLAKE REGATTA.

Toledo, O., July 21.—All that yachtsmen at Put-in-Bay want now is weather—not soft zephyrs or squalling squalls, but winds that are just right. Boats are there that can make good races. Not in many years has there been as many yachts in the snug harbor back of Jay Cooke's famous Gibraltar as are gathered there today to take part in the annual regatta of the Interlake Yachting association. There are numbers of new boats there, and it is the new yachts that add interest and enthusiasm to interlake races. The first race is scheduled for tomorrow morning. The contest will be over a fifteen mile triangular course with a nine-mile triangle for the sixteen- and twenty footers.

PEKIN'S GREAT DANGER

Report that Tung Fu Hsiang and Try to Get the Throne

HE IS A NOTED BOXER

He Took a Leading Part in the Recent Boxer Troubles, and was Declared an Outcast dy the Authorities

Special to The Times.

Victoria, B.C., July 22.—Far away in Ninghsia, a walled city if Mongolia, Gen. Tung Fu Hsiang, Boxer and leader of many thousand of Chinese bannermen, Prince Tuan, Boxer and leader of the horden who planned to massacre all the foreigners in Pekin during the Boxer outbreak, and Lan Kung, another notorious Boxer leader are arming their thousands of followers, and a rebellion is being planned which has for its object the invasion of Pekin, and the placing of Tung Fu Hsiang on the Chinese throne This is the startling news received by local Chinese in letters from China.

Tung Gu Hsiang's life was declared forfeit to the throne, he having defied his rulers, and all Pekin knows that he is planning a desperate game. That he will act soon is regarded as certain by the Chinese, for he cannot maintain his army long in idleness. They are now seeking to form an alliance with the rebels who are still in the field in South Chili where the action of troops sent out against them by the Government has aroused the rebels to fury.

A massacre took place at Wei Hsien in which 2,000 innocents were killed. The townspeople seeing soldiers and fearing attack, closed the city gates. This excited the anger of the troops. The people fled to the south gate and met another body of imperial troops and death.

The Pekin correspondent of the Shanghai Mercury reports that 2,000 of these unarmed men and helpless women and children were slain. an injustice which brought hundreds of villagers to the rebel ranks.

THE FRENCH SHORE ISSUE

A New Development in This Very Serious Question

Special to The Times.

St. John's, N. F., July 18.—Rihaillier des Isles, who for seventeen years has acted as French agent at St. John's, ranking in the French service as Consul General, but who was refused official recognition by the British and Newfoundland Governments because France refused to permit a British Consul at St. Pierre, has been promoted to the rank of Minister Plenipotentiary and recalled to France with a decoration for conspicuous services while here. This action, it is presumed here, indicates a new development in the French Shore question.

70,000 NATIVES NEEDED IN SOUTH AFRICA

Scarcity of Labor on African Rand--To Shut Children from Schools

THE GOVERNMENT MAY BE STRENGTHENED

Present Reconstruction of the Cabinet Provides an Excellent Opportunity for Strengthening Government

Johannesburg, July 222.—The scarcity of labor in the new colonies continues to excite the public mine acutely. The supply is wholly inadequate to the demand. The mines are primarily concerned, but other industries are also affected. That natives are indifferent to wage earning at the present moment, firstly, because a considerable number of them during their military employment amassed comparatively large sums, and, secondly, because peace coincided with the plowing and sowing season, when an exodus of natives back to their own lands invariably takes place. The mine managers are anxiously awaiting 70,000 or 80,000 natives, but the native labor association is unable to secure more than 4,000 or 5,000 per month. Accordingly and Chamber of Mines has agreed to give effect to ex-irregulars at the old rate of pay Already a large number have been engaged.

London, July 222.—The London Times says the feeling is gaining ground in Unionist circles that the present reconstruction of the Cabinet provides an excellent opportunity for strengthening the Government by introducing a greater business element. Messrs Chamberlain, Ritchie and Arnold Foster have been great successes, and they are almost the only commercially trained men in the Government. It is submitted that the "efficiency" cry ought to induce Balfour to weigh carefully the expediency of obtaining the assistance of more members with past commercial experience.
